Opening lines of communication is job one in violence prevention

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Messages of violence surround children every day. It is in the music they listen to, in the television they watch, and in the video games they play.

While adults may think their child is old enough to realize the difference between real and make-believe or right and wrong, Dr. Robert Macy says that kind of attitude may be the driving force behind many of the acts of violence being seen at high schools across the country — including in Cohasset.

Macy is the director of community services for the trauma center in Boston. He paid a visit to Cohasset Middle High School Monday, Feb. 13 to help the community make sense of the threats which have taken place at the middle high school since last May.

Macy gave two lectures, one for school staff and police personnel after school, and a second at night for parents. There were roughly 50 people in attendance at the night session including all five school committee members, all three building principals, other school administrators, members of the board of selectmen and police department, and some parents.

While Macy said Cohasset has been fortunate the threatening notes which have been left on school grounds have posed no immediate threat to students, he said it is important for the community to really begin observing the behavior of its students on a daily basis.

"Violence is not something that comes naturally," said Macy. He said it takes a lot of conditioning for a person to get to the point where they are capable of carrying out a severely violent act. He said there are two types of aggression: targeted and generalized, and it is the targeted aggression that must be watched out for as a clue violent thoughts are escalating.

Macy explained generalized aggression would be a situation where a child is on the playground and another child trips and bumps into them. The child that was bumped gets angry and pushes back, thinking the child who fell pushed them on purpose. "This is going to happen, and it should," he said. However, targeted aggression which picks a victim in advance is much more dangerous as it can lead to violent acts such as murder.

But by nature, children seek approval and permission for virtually everything they do, which can be a good deterrent. One of the driving forces behind children and adolescents is the feeling of wanting to belong. Macy said statistically, of the students that have committed violent acts in their schools, 75 percent of the time they have told their peers when and where it would happen.

Permission doesn't necessarily have to come from peers, it can come from the music they listen to, the television they watch, or the games they play which promote it. Macy told the story of a 14-year-old from Kentucky who shot eight of his fellow students. "Three students were killed and all had head wounds. Five were wounded and all had center-mass wounds," he said. The shots were fired at a range of between 30 and 70 feet with a .22 caliber Ruger pistol, but the student had never fired a weapon before.

Macy asked Police Chief James Hussey how many of his officers could hit a target that accurately. "With that kind of range, probably none of our officers could do it," Hussey replied. However, after looking into the boy's background, investigators found he was very well versed in video games and often played games which required shooting a video game gun. Macy said one of the teachers who watched the incident take place in the school said the boy came into the room and very methodically and calmly fired the shots — just as if he was playing a video game.

To help get to the root of problems before they come to a head, Macy said it is imperative for schools to have good mental health screening capabilities. He said 75 percent of students who commit school shootings have threatened to kill themselves prior to the incident. Less than 30 percent have any history of substance abuse. There are very few resounding qualities for students who commit these kinds of crimes as they come from intact families or can be neglected, they can be advanced placement students to failing, they can be popular students to very isolated. Many often do not have any marked change in behavior prior to carrying out the act. There does, however, seem to be a correlation between children who do not have a significant attachment to adults.

Macy said the best prevention for Cohasset will be to form a partnership between the parents and the schools, to ensure the lines of communication are always open. He said together, the "taboo" factor for acts of violence has to be raised to the point where it is considered extremely inappropriate and shocking, rather than something to laugh at as it results in a day off from school. He said if a parent will sit down and ask their child, "What is the most meaningful thing in your life," and really take the time to listen, it can open up a world of information into that child's life that may otherwise never have been shared. Parents must remember what it was like to be a child and try to understand all the things they are going through. Macy said even though they might not always show it, innately, children look to their parents for the answers they need.

The school department will be forming an alliance of parents, school staff, and community members to work together on issues raised by Robert Macy. Interested residents should contact the office of the superintendent for more information at (781) 383-6111.

String of threats at CMHS

- May 11, 2005: a threatening note and bullet are found outside the middle-high school by a faculty member opening the school for the day. Students are put into "lockdown" upon their arrival and are dismissed early to allow a thorough search of the school and its grounds.
- Sept. 26, 2005: Cohasset police respond to an alarm at the school, set off at roughly 1:30 a.m. Responding officers find a torn screen on the first floor of the middle school section of the building. Further investigation leads officers to find notes inside the building which indicate there is a bomb in the school. A written note on the front door has the same message. The Boston Bomb Squad is called in to investigate a suspicious package.
- Oct. 16, 2005: A written note is discovered on school property by a teacher and students meeting to carpool to Boston. The note includes the threat to bring a gun to school, and in turn, Principal Joel Antolini decides backpacks, purses, and lunch bags are all subject to searches. School is delayed for two hours Monday, Oct. 17.
- Oct. 18, 2005: The middle school is closed for the entire day when police discover a threatening note at roughly 1:30 a.m. on the middle-high school sign at the school's entrance. The note indicates there is a bomb in the school. A 13-year-old student is arrested in connection with the threat, as well as the Sept. 26 bomb threat.
- Jan. 24, 2006: A high school student finds a threatening note which references the Columbine shooting of 1999 in one of the student bathrooms. Police respond to the scene at about 11:45 a.m.,

Class of 1956 to award scholarship to CHS senior

To mark its upcoming 50th reunion June 2 through June 4 in Cohasset, the Cohasset High School Class of 1956 will be awarding an Alumni Scholarship to a deserving CHS 2006 graduate.

Class of 1956 alumnus Joel Pratt said, "While we were planning the reunion, classmate David Truesdell suggested we should do something for the school. The scholarship idea seemed perfect. We all remember friends at Cohasset High who were able to further their education because they got help. And we remember some who could not. We hope to give a boost to a young person who might not otherwise be able to improve his or her chances in life without some help," Pratt noted. "We believe that we are the first Cohasset class ever to offer a scholarship. It is our hope that what we are starting will become an ongoing CHS Alumni Scholarship," he added.

Seniors applying to four-year colleges or universities, two-year community colleges or trade schools will be eligible. The scholarship will not be based solely on academic achievement. Candidates must also have shown potential to succeed and clear financial need. Cohasset High School will administer the selection process with the participation of representatives from the Class of 1956. Winner will be announced at CHS Awards night May 31.

Members of the Class of '56 have already begun soliciting donations from its alumni. Anyone who attended Cohasset schools with the class at any time before graduating is considered a class member. Contributions will also be welcomed from any and all Cohasset alumni.

The Town of Cohasset has agreed to collect the donations so they will be tax deductible. Donation forms are available at the Middle-High School office at 143 Pond St., as well as the Treasurer's Office at Town Hall on Highland Ave.

"Cohasset High – Middle School Principal Joel Antolini told me that he strongly supports our efforts, as he wants to find ways to involve more alumni in the school," Pratt concluded.

For scholarship information call Ed Leonard at the CHS Guidance Office, 781-383-6102 or Joel Pratt, 207-255-4740.

The Building Owners and Managers Association of Boston has designated One Technology Place, on the Hingham/Rockland line in South Shore Technology Park, as "Office Building of the Year", citing overall excellence in design, operation and positive impact on the communities it serves.

The building is a state-of-the-art research complex, owned and developed by A.W. Perry, Inc. in cooperation with SERONO for its U.S. Headquarters. It is an H-shaped structure of office and laboratory wings with a central "link", symbolizing connection between the science and business functions of SERONO.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of MA

Located on Route 3 at exit 14, South Shore Technology Park will soon host major offices for Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts. Almost 170 acres of adjacent land offer build-to-suit sites in a first class location, convenient to downtown Boston and Route 128.

Book signing at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will host a book signing by Jennifer Grisdale Krieger, formerly of Cohasset, on Sunday, March 5, 2-4 p.m., at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street.

"What? No Spaghetti and Meatballs?!? A charming collection of stories and musings about everyday life in a culturally diverse family," is about a proper Bostonian who marries a "good Jewish boy from Brooklyn," with an older sister who married an Italian Catholic.

Krieger is an award-winning journalist and non-fiction writer...

"I look at this book as one of those Prevention Magazines," Krieger says. "You know what I mean: turn to page 71 for tips on how to find True Love, or page 62 to learn how life really relates to football."

Krieger is an award-winning journalist and non-fiction writer, but most importantly, she is a mother, and a staunch advocate of the family unit (La Famiglia!). If you like Dave Barry or Erma Bombeck, you will enjoy her talk. For more information, please call the Society at 781-383-1434, or email at cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Grub Street South fiction workshop is Feb. 28

Buttonwood Books in Cohasset has joined forces with Boston's Grub Street, the city's only independent writing center, to create Grub Street South at Buttonwood. On Tuesday, Feb. 28, at 7 p.m., in Buttonwood's own writers' corner, located in Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, Amanda Eyre Ward will be the instructor for a fiction-writing workshop. This introductory fiction seminar is guaranteed to inspire and provide writers with lots of new material to work on in the coming year. Through a series of fun-directed writing exercises, subjects like mining for material, constructing characters and settings, shaping vivid dialogue, and understanding point of view will be explored. There will be time for writing and for sharing with the rest of the group. Amanda Eyre Ward graduated from Williams College and the University of Montana.

Reservations are requested for planning purposes. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve.

Many fine citizens nominated for award

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Mariner received 16 nominations from 27 individuals and families for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Ronnie Goodwin, 166 Sohier St.; Betts Murray, 8 Westgate Lane; Jeff Waal, 36 Old Pasture Road; and editor Mary Ford pored over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected Marjorie "Margie" Steele of Black Horse Lane for the annual award.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the other very deserving candidates:

- Steve Bobo for his commitment to the health of Cohasset citizens that is demonstrated through his work on the board of health and his weekly "Health Notes" columns.
- Mary Brennock for her years of involvement with the children of Cohasset helping with plays and activities and serving as Mrs. Claus during the annual Jingle Bell Walk.
- Merle S. Brown for giving his time and talent for many years to make the community a better place as a selectman, serving on the conservation commission, advisory committee, recycling committee and more, for his service with the Boy Scouts program and many other good works.
- Margaret Casey for her support of the many activities at Cohasset Elder Affairs over 20 years including service as Volunteer Program Chairman through which she is the driving force behind establishing programs, activities and speakers; and for her personal generosity that covered the cost of renovating and decorating three rooms at the Senior Center.
- The Very Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, former pastor of St. Stephen's Church, for his leadership in a town which has needed his energy and concern including his service on the drug and alcohol committee, and many other good works.
- The late Cliff Dickson, for having exemplified the spirit of Cohasset through a life-long commitment to the community; and as steward of the yacht club where he showed exceptional kindness and encouragement to young sailors.
- Louis F. "Lou" Eaton, former town counsel, for contributing much time and energy to the town over 60 years including serving as the town's long-time representative on the MBTA advisory board and service on innumerable town committees and other organizations.
- Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse, for her compassion over the years, especially toward the town's elderly citizens and for being someone that can be counted on at any time.
- Lucia Flibotte who embodies the principle "a woman for others" through lending her effort and enthusiasm to many programs including the PSO, helping with cooking classes for senior citizens, and the lacrosse boosters, to name just a few.
- Tom Gruber for his tireless work as a member of the Rotary Club, Cohasset Historical Society, and as MBTA liaison.
- Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan for their tireless and conscientious work as town representatives dealing with the multitude of complex issues related to Greenbush construction.
- June Hubbard, an avid environmentalist, former library trustee, volunteer senior shuttle driver, Meals on Wheels driver, and volunteer at the New England Wildlife Center.
- Wallace St. John, volunteer president of the Cohasset Soccer Club, whose vision and professionalism have helped make it one of the premier programs in the Boston area and for his unparalleled commitment to each child in the program.
- Hamilton Tewksbury for embodying quiet giving and unselfishness through his years of service on town committees; for serving as a volunteer senior shuttle driver; and for being willing to help anywhere, any time.
- Roger and Kitty Whitley, for exhibiting spirit of volunteerism that is an inspiration to all through their countless hours volunteering at churches, the library, town boards, Rusty Skippers, the Old Goats, and more; and for being a strong voice at Town Meeting.

Margie Steele is Citizen of the Year

Church on Highland Avenue, Steele thought the food pantry sounded like an endeavor that she would like to get involved in. That was 13 years ago and over the years, the Cohasset Food Pantry has proved to be the perfect fit for her energy, along with her quiet sincerity, and interest in helping others.

It is Steele's undying commitment to this important service manned entirely by volunteers that led to her selection as this year's Citizen of the Year.

A selection committee consisting of Ronald Goodwin of 166 Sohier St.; Jeffrey Waal of 36 Old Pasture Road; Betts Murray of 8 Westgate Lane; and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford met at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday to pore over the names submitted from Mariner readers for the annual award. Steele, who lives on Black Horse Lane, follows last year's "citizen" John Coe and will be the 13th annual Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

In addition to Citizen of the Year honors, the married mother of three will also celebrate her 50th birthday this year as well as her 25th wedding anniversary.

Steele notes she started at the food pantry when her youngest. Grace, now 15 and a sophomore at Cohasset High School, was only two years old.

"It seemed like an easy way to help the community," Steele recalls about her motivation.

She says the Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, who noted there were a number of families and elderly citizens in town who needed support, provided the impetus to start a food pantry with the church providing the space in its basement during the pantry's early years. Now the food pantry is housed in the rear of St. Anthony's Rectory off South Main Street, which is a more accessible location because it doesn't involve lugging food and groceries up and down steps.

Ritts said Steele's name has been synonymous with the Cohasset Food Pantry since near its inception.

"Taking over the reins from Stuart Pratt in the early 1990s, she has been the prime mover, organizer and shaker ever since," Ritts says. "Her 'ministry' to our community has been round the clock — taking calls and making connections in order to keep the food pantry a truly humane effort.

"And, to our benefit, her wonderful family (husband Matt; Sam, Callie and Gracie) has been there to help as they (sometimes alone) collect, transport and shelve donated food from local churches and organizations. I know she'll say there are so many other people who make it happen — perhaps that's true, but Margie Steele has been its heart and soul — she is well deserving of this great honor!" Ritts says.

Steele, who moved to Cohasset just a few years before the food pantry got under way, recalls visiting area food pantries, like the one at Wellspring in Hull, to see how they were set up. The food pantry received a grant from Project Bread to help it get started.

Citizen of the Year, Margie Steele, packs cereal into Tupperware containers to keep it fresh. Steele has volunteered at the Cohasset Food Pantry for upwards of 13 years.

Today the food pantry is supported through monetary and food donations from churches and citizens, and food drives from Scout troops and the schools.

"The town has been so generous," says Steele, who grew up in Hingham but was living in Salem with her family before moving to Cohasset nearly 20 years ago

She praises food pantry co-director Moira Stansell who has been an enormous help. For Stansell, the praise is mutual.

"Margie is loving, kind and patient," Stansell says. "She has the ability to talk to people and understand what they are going through; she is so perfect in her role.

"She makes people feel like they have come to the right place."

Long-time volunteer Jean Thompson says Steele makes volunteering at the food pantry easy and enjoyable.

"The clients who come to the food pantry all know Margie and also know they can depend on her to help them," Thompson says. "She is pleasant and kind to everyone and for volunteers, she has a strict policy of confidentiality."

Osborne "Ozzie" Ingram was involved in the food pantry's early years, helping out with publicity.

"She saw the need and took action," recalls Ingram, adding Steele's enthusiasm, openness and friendliness were key in ensuring the food pantry filled a need. "She also set up a criteria that is inclusive so people don't hesitate about using the food pantry."

Steele shops at Stop & Shop once a week for meats like hamburger, hot dogs and chicken, and also visits the churches were parishioners have dropped off canned goods and personal items.

The food pantry, which currently serves 12-15 households, is open on Tuesday mornings and is staffed by volunteers who help the clients get the food and items they need. The food pantry is open to Cohasset residents only.

Many find out about the food pantry through word of mouth, which is one of the advantages of life in a small town, Steele says.

No one is more proud of Steele's commitment to the food pantry than her husband, Matt.

"I once read something written by someone famous advising us all to 'Do something good for other people each day and not get found out,'" Matt Steel says. "I think that the work that Margie has been doing embodies that spirit. She's a great role model for others, and the children and I couldn't be more proud of her commitment to the food pantry over the years."

Steele admits to being a little taken aback by her selection as Citizen of the Year.

"I'm very thankful," she says. "But I'm not one to be in the spotlight."

OPINION

'A great role model'

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that Marjorie "Margie" Steele of Black Horse Lane is the Citizen of the Year.

The town can count itself lucky that Margie, who grew up in Hingham and had been living in Salem with her husband, Matt, before moving to town nearly 20 years ago, chose Cohasset as her adopted hometown.

Over the past 13 years, Margie's quiet dedication, coupled with a true commitment to help those in need, have proved to be the perfect fit for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The mother of three has been the "prime mover, organizer and shaker" ever since taking over the reins from Stuart Pratt in the early 1990s, says the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church.

"Her 'ministry' to our community has been around the clock — taking calls and making connections in order to keep the food pantry a truly humane effort," Ritts says.

Steele was gracious in accepting the honor, which will be formally presented at a reception in the spring.

"I'm very thankful," says Steele, who adds modestly she is not one to be in the spotlight.

While nominations were open, dozens of individuals or families took the time to propose a citizen, couple or group for the annual award, detailing the nominees' contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

The selection committee consisting of Ronnie Goodwin, Betts Murray, Jeff Wall and editor Mary Ford met at the Cohasset Mariner in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to review all the heartfelt letters of nomination. The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the very deserving candidates.

Matt Steele says Margie's work embodies the spirit of "doing something good for other people each day and not getting found out.

"She's a great role model for others, and the children and I couldn't be more proud of her commitment to the food pantry over the years."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Zoning articles hearing is Wednesday, Feb. 22

The planning board will conduct a public hearing at 7 p.m., Wed. Feb. 22 to discuss zoning articles on the Town Meeting Warrant that include creating a Transit Oriented District or TOD near the Greenbush train station on Rte. 3A and an overlay district in the village to allow for multi-family units in conjunction with first-floor commercial uses.

Proponents say the timing of these zoning bylaw changes is important so potential development in the TOD near the train station on 3A, and on South Main Street in the village (where buildings back on to the municipal parking lot) can coincide with Greenbush construction. However, some say the proposed TOD and overlay zoning bylaws need more study.

The planning board will also review proposed changes to the Large House Site Plan Review bylaw; "sunsetting" the SMROD (Senior Multi-Family Residential Overlay District); and reducing parking requirements along the Rte. 3A corridor.

The planning board makes a recommendation to Town Meeting. Selectmen will also review the zoning articles.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper. Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Keep the dialog going

TO THE EDITOR:

In the midst of our teacher crisis in Cohasset, it's easy to think that we're completely powerless as parents to help or even understand the depth of their non-contractual existence. Quite the contrary —our smallness gives us greater power to exercise our civil rights by freely expressing our opinions on all matters, in all arenas and at all times. Regardless of what side of the argument you're on, our hard working (yes, they really do put in 10-hour days with the majority working supplemental jobs throughout the year) teachers deserve our attention right now.

We should give them the courtesy of keeping their fight alive by simply sharing our ideas on the matter or, better yet, giving them a phone call or e-mail telling them how appreciative you are of what they do.

Speaking from experience, Cohasset teachers are extraordinary in that they set bars of expectation that are always over and above the state recommendation. Additionally, by the mere fact of being a teacher in Cohasset, they willingly take on not just a student, but the students families as well. They have this uncanny understanding that if one of their students is struggling, then his or her entire family must be too. Believe me, this teaching model is hard to come by in most other towns.

It's safe to say that budget constraints are a way of life in Cohasset. It takes a savvy school committee, administrators who can creatively think and execute their ideas and parents who will not accept the status-quo to make a great school system under hard financial times. Our teachers have always been there, day in and day out, preparing our children for the next step in their lives with the utmost professionalism.

So, keep the everyday banter, dinner table conversations, commuter boat talk, grocery store exchanges, etc. going. Words are only as powerful and action-packed as they get exchanged and as dead and lifeless as they get silenced.

Contract wasn't fair to all

TO THE EDITOR:

For townspeople struggling to understand some of the dynamics that caused the Cohasset Teachers Association to overwhelmingly reject the latest contract offered to the teachers, allow me to provide this personal reflection as a teacher, civic-minded citizen, and resident of Cohasset.

The latest offer tendered to the teachers was quite appealing to me. If my math is correct, the next four years would be favorable to me when compared to the current contract. But this same contract is punitive to many of my colleagues, in both financial and non-financial terms.

As a teacher I work in a culture that holds dear the value that all are equal, and that "no child is to be left behind." I am expected to be principled in all of my actions as an educator. What, then, to do with the fact that many of my colleagues are disadvantaged by the contract, while I am not? Check my principles at the bank teller's window? Leave my colleagues behind? Or, advocate for a fair and equitable contract that speaks to the quality of education expected in the community? For me, the choice is compellingly clear.

Check the facts for yourself.

Critical of school budget process

TO THE EDITOR:

At the December 2004 Special Town Meeting I asked that a committee be formed by the Troika to investigate the school budget. The committee claimed that they uncovered many systemic problems, and presented their findings to the April 2, 2005 Town Meeting. Their findings were the following: insufficient up-front information; incompatible financial reporting systems; acceptance of overrides; poor monitoring; weak communication; and insufficient oversight.

The committee then made the following recommendations:

- A truly realistic and balanced school budget within available revenues must be presented at the Annual Town Meeting. The budget should not be premised on the expectation that it can be supplemented by a later Town Meeting.
- School Committee involvement on a monthly basis to become aware of potential account deficits and possible solutions. Inter-account transfers above a specified dollar amount should be approved by the School Committee. We support use of the newly developed expense encumbrance, and remaining account balance report.
- Financial Information available to the School Committee be shared with the Town Manager, Town Finance Director, and Advisory Committee Chairman.
- End the idea that overrides are an annual necessity. Overrides, we believe, encourage less rigorous budgeting. Annual overrides may create an increasing automatic opposition to overrides even when there might be good cause for their passage.
- Finally, we believe that Cohasset has an opportunity to heal the apparent divisiveness and bitterness in the town with the new School Superintendent, new Town Manager, and the Town Finance Director.

It appears that the superintendent and the school committee do not want to take into account the recommendations of this committee. They appear to be content to continue mismanaging the school budget and creating new positions that are not necessary. They also want to continue the annual override program. They do not appear to want to justify their position. They do want to continue complaining because they do not appear to have a clue about managing the system.

The Mariner (Feb. 20, 2006) article written by Samantha Brown states that Cohasset is overspending what the state requires by 32 percent in 2006. No one has explained why our public school system needs to overspend at this level in order to meet the state requirements of providing an education. It is time for the taxpayers of Cohasset to say enough is enough. When the student population

Message for Osgood and Deer Hill parents

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

We know that this coming week is school vacation, and the number of parents who will read this will be fewer than normal. But, for those parents still in Town, we have some very important information. Please review this very carefully.

When Sohier Street was closed, last month, we received many more calls than any previously closed crossing. We certainly understand why, with Sohier being a main corridor between the village and 3A, as well as the access to 50 percent of our schools. One of the things our safety forces have insisted on, with the Town Manager's strong support, is that the MBTA provide a police detail at the intersection of Sohier and Route 3A during Osgood and Deer Hill schools opening and closing times. Our collective thoughts were that, both in the AM and PM, 3A traffic can be quite fierce and the visibility from Sohier into 3A is not very good. And with 100 percent of the Osgood and Deer Hill traffic forced to use the 3A access point to Sohier, traffic is very heavy at school start and stop times. Plus, the school busses, not being as agile as parents' vehicles, need a bit more time to enter and exit Route 3A.

We would also add that for the first week or so, we instructed the police details to stay directly out of the intersection to see if this would provide adequate intersection control. However, we had a number of parental complaints that they felt that this was not really helping at all. So, working through Cohasset's Safety officer, we asked the police details to become more active in the control of this intersection. The current instructions are that when peak volumes occur out of Sohier Street, the detail is to take an active role in helping the vehicles exit onto Route 3A and exit from 3A. At other times, when traffic is able to clear onto and off of 3A in a reasonable amount of time, the detail will not exercise control over the intersection.

The flip side of providing this police detail is cost. The contractor, who is paying for these details, tells us that the accumulated cost over the planned four-month construction period will be upward of $60,000 (We think this number is high.). Consequently, they have come back to the Town and asked if we feel that these details are really needed. Have you found the details useful? Are they needed both morning and afternoon? We'd like to hear from you, the parents. Do you think that they are needed both mornings and afternoons? Please let us know, either by email: cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org or phone or 781-383-3094. If for some reason we are not here or you phone after hours, just leave a message on our phone. Please keep in mind that the final determination, as always, will be made by the Police Department. But, we'd like to get your comments.

Village businesses

Now, about our village businesses and Sohier — Pleasant streets closure.

We are experiencing the same phenomenon that Hingham experienced during the height of the MBTA construction in their downtown. That is, without easy access from 3A to the old village, businesses have lost customers. Some merchants in the downtown area tell us that their business is off as much as 50 percent. These merchants need your business and support to survive this difficult construction period. Please take the additional time to use the alternate routes to patronize these merchants. Although it may be a bit inconvenient for all of us, without your support as a customer, businesses may not be able to survive the construction drought. Please go out of your way to support them.

Road closure

This week we learned that the Hull Street crossing will be closed for construction starting Wednesday, Feb. 22. (This is on Route 228 near the Abbey.) The contractor, Cashman, Balfour Beatty, expects the work to take a minimum of six weeks. Of course, bad weather could lengthen this time period. This closing will affect the travel corridor travel between 3A or North Main St. (East St. in Hingham) down to West's Corner (Route 228 and Jerusalem Rd.). The alternate route will be through Hingham or Forest Avenue to Jerusalem Rd.

HEALTH NOTES

Paying attention to carbon monoxide

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, several people in Town have suffered carbon monoxide(CO) poisoning. Fortunately, all were able to get advice and assistance quickly and encountered ill effects. Still, it underscores the danger of neglecting a home safeguard like a smoke detector and a CO detector and ensuring that they are checked and updated regularly.

In today's world of improved insulation and double glazing it has become increasingly important to have good ventilation, maintain all appliances regularly and to have absolutely reliable detector alarms installed giving both a visual and audible warning immediately of a build up of CO to dangerous levels. It's foolish not to have a CO detector in your home. Satisfactory modern CO detectors range in price from slightly above $30 to several hundred. They are available in any hardware or home supply store and instructions for siting and installing them are on the box.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless and toxic gas. Because it is impossible to see, taste or smell the fumes, CO can kill you before you are aware it is in your home. At lower levels of exposure, CO causes mild effects that are often mistaken for the flu. These symptoms include headaches, dizziness, disorientation, nausea and fatigue. The effects of CO exposure can vary greatly from person to person depending on age, overall health and the concentration and length of exposure. Carbon monoxide poisons by entering the lungs via the normal breathing mechanism and displacing oxygen from the bloodstream. Red blood cells pick up CO quicker than they pick up oxygen. If there is a lot of CO in the air, your body may replace oxygen in your blood with CO. This blocks oxygen from getting into your body, which can damage tissues and kill you. Interruption of the normal supply of oxygen puts at risk the functions of the heart, brain and other vital functions of the body. Knowing where CO is found and how to avoid it can protect you from serious injury or death.

Sources — Furnaces, gas water heaters, wood stoves, and fireplaces; gas stoves; generators and other gasoline powered equipment; automobile exhaust from attached garages; and tobacco smoke. Unvented kerosene and gas space heaters; leaking chimneys and furnaces; incomplete oxidation in gas ranges and unvented gas or kerosene heaters may cause high concentrations of CO in indoor air. As can auto, truck, or bus exhaust from attached garages, nearby roads.

Carbon monoxide exists in all homes — Average levels in homes without gas stoves vary from 0.5 to 5 parts per million (ppm). Levels near properly adjusted gas stoves are often 5 to 15 ppm and those near poorly adjusted stoves may be 30 ppm or higher. Dangerous amounts of CO can accumulate as a result of poor installation, poor maintenance, failure or damage to an appliance in service if the fuel is not burned properly, or when rooms are poorly ventilated and the carbon monoxide is unable to escape.

Steps to reduce exposure — It is most important to be sure combustion equipment is maintained and properly adjusted. Vehicular use should be carefully managed adjacent to buildings and in garages. Additional ventilation can be used as a temporary measure when high levels of CO are expected for short periods of time.

- Keep gas appliances properly adjusted.
- Install and use an exhaust fan vented to outdoors over gas stoves.
- Open flues when fireplaces are in use.
- Choose properly sized wood stoves that are certified to meet EPA emission standards. Make certain that doors on all wood stoves fit tightly.
- Have a trained professional inspect, clean, and tune-up central heating system (furnaces, flues, and chimneys) annually. Repair any leaks promptly.
- Do not idle the car inside garage.

It's unimaginable to consider the loss of the several people in Town whose health was recently threatened by CO.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Effects

Carbon Monoxide produces the following physiological effects on people exposed to the concentrations shown:

Concentration of CO in air	Inhalation time and symptoms
50 parts per million (ppm)	Maximum safe level
200 PPM	Slight headache within 2-3 hours
400 PPM	Frontal headache within 1-2 hours, becoming widespread in 3 hours
800 PPM	Dizziness, nausea, convulsions within 45 minutes, insensible in 2 hours

The above information is for a healthy adult. Persons suffering from heart or respiratory health problems, infants and small children, unborn children, expectant mothers and pets can be affected by CO poisoning more quickly than others in the household and may be the first to show symptoms.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Rick Flynn: 'There is unfinished business'

Will seek third term on school committee

The following is a formal announcement from Rick Flynn, who is running for reelection to the school committee.

"After careful consideration I have decided to become a candidate for reelection to the Cohasset School Committee. This is certainly not a decision arrived at lightly as I was looking forward to a seat on the sidelines after serving six years on the school committee and the six prior years on the advisory board.

"I do believe that this is very crucial time for the Cohasset Public Schools as well as the Town of Cohasset. We are at an important crossroads where financial realities and the decisions we make collectively will either move our town and school district forward or push us further backward. We are all in this together.

"As an individual member of the school committee there is only so much I can do. However, I believe my six years of experience can be helpful in leading our district forward. Admittedly, all of my time on the committee has not been mistake free. There have been some rocky times, but I have always tried to represent our community in a way that would add value to the school district while trying to be fiscally responsible. There is, however, a financial reality that must be understood and acknowledged. The ability to run a school system in this day and age and live under the limitations of Prop. 2-1/2 is virtually impossible. Please beware of those who preach to the contrary. Although I may be a school committee member, I am also a taxpayer and empathize with all taxpayers. But without the necessary investment in our schools, conditions will continue to deteriorate. Many of the constituents I have heard from lately are urging me to support a budget that will ensure meaningful measurable progress in terms of class sizes, course offerings and programs rather than just trying to keep our heads above water.

Rick Flynn

"Not wanting to be the athlete who stuck around too long or the party guest who refused to leave, I don't want to be viewed as a hanger on, but there is unfinished business that needs to be completed. We need to complete a budget that moves our district forward in a meaningful way in the face of increasing unfunded state and federal mandates, growing student populations and reduced state aid. Additionally, a fair and responsible contract must be settled with the Cohasset Teachers Association. We are lucky to have a talented and dedicated teaching staff and as one of the members of the negotiating sub-committee, no one has worked harder to get an agreement struck more than I. Finally, we as a school committee and a town must be supportive of our school Superintendent Dr. Denise Walsh. As the only remaining member of the school committee, who was involved in Dr. Walsh's hiring, I feel the obligation to make sure she has the support of the school committee. I have watched Dr. Walsh positively transform the budget process, successfully implement our full-day kindergarten and take back our special education pre-school program among other things. She is a well-seasoned professional educator who deserves our support.

"My decision to reverse course and run for re-election comes at a late date and has even caught me by surprise. The main reason for my decision is the importance to move our system and our students forward. I have seen the creation of a very dedicated support group for the schools and know many others of you who have worked tirelessly for years to support the schools. Having lost last year's Prop. 2-1/2 override, the school department began the budget process with a lower base that only exacerbates our budget situation. I want to do all I can to focus positive energy on this years override process and hope that as many of you as possible of all ages will realize the importance and the necessity of a quality school system and will work toward that end.

"As a Cohasset parent , I have had the good fortune to watch my children get a fantastic academic foundation in Cohasset and then go on to compete successfully with the best and the brightest of the Boston area and the world. The fact that I will not have any children in the Cohasset school system after this year should not be interpreted as dissatisfaction, but as a personal choice that my family has made to seek out educational alternatives not available in Cohasset. Please do not interpret that choice as diminishing my commitment to the Cohasset Public Schools. I remain a resident of Cohasset who wants to be proud of our town and its schools and feel that everyone deserves a quality public education.

"To all of you who have been supportive of me in the past I thank you for your support and hope that you can support me in this endeavor and to those of you who don't know me, I would greatly appreciate your vote and your support as we all continue to do what's best for our children, our schools and our town."

Reminiscences over 50 years

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I had lunch a while back with a couple of guys I used to work with and, since the place we toiled in those days was the Boston bureau of the Associated Press, the talk turned to reminiscences of the stories we had covered and one of them was the sinking of the Andrea Doria.

We heard about the Italian liner's collision with the Stockholm off Nantucket in a roundabout way. A ham radio operator in Virginia intercepted the distress call and called the AP's Richmond bureau, which called the New York bureau which called the Boston bureau.

There was a small problem there, as I recall, since, except for an office boy and a teletype operator, the entire night staff was down at the Towne Grille catching last call and the office boy had to be sent down to roust them out. But I digress . . .

The point is that all this happened 50 years ago this summer and, if I may coin a phrase, where did the time go and why didn't I notice when it went?

One of the big stories of the year 1956 was the trial of the men who robbed Brink's. My sharpest recollection came during the selection of the jury when defense attorney Paul Smith asked a prospective juror if he had formed an opinion of the guilt or innocence to the men.

"I think they're guilty," the man said.

"Why?" asked Smith.

"The FBI wouldn't have arrested them if they weren't."

I was transferred out of the Boston bureau a few weeks later so I wasn't around for the rest of the trial but, even if I had, that one quote would still have stood out as the trial's highlight.

The year 1956 was a big one for civil rights, too, as Autherine Lucy — a name that should stand with Rosa Parks and Coretta King — was the first African American to register at the University of Alabama only to be suspended "for her own safety" when some 1,000 whites rioted.

When white supporters urged gradualism, Lucy's attorney, Thurgood Marshall, replied, "I believe in gradualism, too, and I also believe that 90 years is pretty gradual."

The Eisenhower administration assigned 350 additional personnel to South Vietnam to help recover equipment abandoned by the French when they left their former colony. This in addition to the 342 Americans allowed to be stationed there under the Geneva Accords.

Bandleaders Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey introduced a new country-rock singer from Memphis on their TV program "Stage Show." This was Elvis Presley's first appearance on television. His record, "Heartbreak Hotel," topped all three song charts, pop, R & B and Country Western.

Brockton's Rocky Marciano retired as undefeated heavyweight boxing champion with 49 victories, 43 by knockouts and 21-year-old Floyd Patterson became the youngest heavyweight champ ever by knocking out 42-year-old Archie Moore in the fifth round.

What to expect on the annual Town Meeting warrant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting is approaching quickly, and there is only a little more than one month left for the town to prepare.

A draft Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, has been compiled, and it indicates voters could expect to see as many as 29 articles, or items of business, discussed at the meeting, Saturday, April 1. Warrants will be mailed out to households at the end of March.

There is the possibility some articles could be taken off the Warrant prior to the meeting for various reasons. Sometimes during preliminary discussions it is found an article must be reworded and brought back at a later Town Meeting. Articles are also often put on the Warrant as placeholders, to ensure if they are ready by the time Town Meeting comes up, they can be discussed.

The meeting will begin with Article one, which asks voters to accept the reports of the Town Officers that are printed in the Annual Town Report for the 2005 calendar year. Copies of the Town Report are available in the Town Clerk's office and the office of the board of selectmen.

Article two will provide an opportunity for boards and committees to present a report directly to Town Meeting. At this time, the board of selectmen had not requested any specific reports.

The meeting will likely heat up with Article three, which asks the town to accept the Town Manager's proposed fiscal 2007 operating budget. It is still unknown whether approving the operating budget will include approving additional funds from an override.

Under the Community Preservation Act, the Community Preservation Committee must make a recommendation every year as to how it would like to see the town spend its Community Preservation funds. This year's recommendation will be outlined in Article four. A recommendation must be made to Town Meeting even if the committee recommends the money be reserved rather than spent. The specific recommendation is not currently available, but will be by Town Meeting.

Article five will ask the town to approve allocating available funds to pay for bills incurred by the town from a previous fiscal year, which were not paid during the fiscal year in which the bill was received.

Annual Town Meeting article review schedule (tentative)

Tuesday, Feb. 21
Article 5: Unpaid bills from previous years
Article 7: Tax deferral rate of interest
Article 8: Tax exemptions
Article 9: Veterans memorial appropriation
Article 27: Eminent domain — Sassafras Rock
Article 22: Water Commission — land acquisition
Article 23: Water Commission — amend easements
Article 24: Water Commission — Scituate land
Article 26: Bylaw — door-to-door solicitation
Article 28: Bylaw — pit bulls

Tuesday, Feb. 28
Article 25: Board of Health — mutual aid agreements
Article 4: Community Preservation Committee
Article 6: Supplemental appropriations for fiscal 2006
Article 10: James Lane easement expenses
Article 11: Cook Estate
Article 14: Zoning bylaw — inclusionary zoning
Article 17: Zoning bylaw — large house site plan review
Article 18: Zoning bylaw — SMROD sunset

Thursday, March 2
Article 29: Septic loan program
Article 12: Parking lot construction
Article 13: Disposition of town-owned land
Article 15: Zoning bylaw — downtown business village overlay district
Article 16: Zoning bylaw — off-street parking
Article 19: Zoning bylaw — transit oriented development (TOD)
Article 20: Zoning bylaw — reconciliation
Article 21: Town Planner appropriation

Although there are currently no shortfalls reported on the draft Warrant, Article six would ask the town to provide additional funding to various departmental budgets which are experiencing a shortfall in fiscal 2006. The additional funding would be needed to complete the current fiscal year. Funding from the article would come from available funds.

Article seven is being proposed due to recent legislation, which allows towns, by local option, to adopt an interest rate for payback of deferred property taxes. The town would ask voters to approve adopting a rate of 4 percent, as determined for fiscal 2007 by the board of selectmen, which is lower than the current rate of 8 percent.

Article eight will ask voters to approve allowing the board of assessors to grant tax exemptions to qualified applicants. This is a vote which is taken at every Annual Town Meeting.

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee has been working hard to honor the town's veterans, and Article nine will ask voters to allocate funds for the construction of a new memorial at Veterans Park on Cohasset Harbor to honor the Cohasset men and women that have served our country during the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Article 10 would add to the funds already appropriated for the James Lane Easement. At the 2004 Annual Town Meeting, voters agreed to authorize selectmen to purchase the easement from owner George Roukounakis for $64,200. Roukounakis said he had an agreement with former Town Manager Mark Haddad, who said the town would also pay Roukounakis for costs associated with legal and appraisal fees, which total roughly $11,346. The selectmen have asked Roukounakis if he would be willing to split the difference of the costs with the town, but he has not yet replied, which means a dollar amount has not yet been attached to the article.

Article 11 deals with the Cook Estate. It would ask voters to amend the scope and amount of funds voted at the November 2003 Special Town Meeting, to give the board of selectmen permission to purchase the land and hold onto it, rather than sell it to a developer. It would also allow the town to spend more than $4.5 million to acquire the property.

Article 12 would ask the town to appropriate the funds necessary to construct parking spaces on the town-owned land in the municipal parking lot.

Article 13 would ask voters to allow the board of selectmen to dispose of all or a portion of town-owned land, located behind the Teen Garage in the municipal parking lot, by soliciting proposals for development for private or public purposes.

Articles 14 through 20 are all zoning articles. Article 14 deals with inclusionary zoning. In any residential development of five or more multi-family or apartment units, proposed on or after July 1, a minimum of one unit or 10 percent of the total number of dwelling units (whichever is greater) must be eligible for qualification as affordable "Local Initiative Units."

Article 15 would create new zoning for the part of the downtown area bounded by South Main Street, James Lane, Parkingway, and Depot Court. The new zoning would allow development of multi-family units in conjunction with commercial uses on the first floor.

Article 16 would amend parking requirements within the highway business, technology business, and light industry districts to five spaces per 1,000 square feet, rather than 10 spaces per thousand as it currently stands, to help encourage commercial development.

Article 17 would amend the large house site plan review bylaw to give specific criteria which must be met for a house to receive approval under the bylaw, therefore giving the bylaw "more teeth," as some have said it currently does nothing to help neighbors who are concerned about the large homes being built in their neighborhoods.

Article 18 would sunset the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw. The article as written would allow the Cook Estate to go forward, but that would be the last multi-family project brought forward under the bylaw.

Article 19 would establish a new transit-oriented development overlay district. The TOD would encourage a mix of moderate to high-density development within walking distance of the new Greenbush train station, to be located on Rte. 3A, therefore creating a commuter-friendly environment to encourage transit use.

Article 20 is a series of zoning bylaw changes which are essentially housekeeping items, such as wording changes.

Article 21 would ask voters to approve allocating $75,000 for the planning and zoning boards to pay the salary and general expenses for the services of a town planner on a full-time basis.

Articles 22, 23, and 24 are all water commission articles. The passage of Article 22 would allow the water commission to acquire land in town for watershed protection purposes. Article 23 would allow the board of selectmen to amend easements currently granted to National Grid, to benefit the water department. Article 24 would authorize the water commission to acquire land in Scituate for watershed protection purposes.

Article 25 would ask the town to approve allowing the board of health and health agent to enter into an intermunicipal agreement with one or more other governmental units to provide public health services, which the board of health is authorized to perform, in accordance with an InterMunicipal Mutual Aid Agreement.

Article 26 would add a new door-to-door solicitation bylaw to the town's bylaws, which would require solicitors to obtain a license from the chief of police to go door-to-door. Violation of the license would result in a fine.

Article 27 would authorize the board of selectmen to acquire Sassafras Rock.

Article 28 would establish a new bylaw to regulate pit bull ownership in town. Residents who would like to own a pit bull would be required to obtain an annual permit for the dog from the board of selectmen.

Article 29 deals with a septic loan program which is currently under consideration by the board of health. At this time the article on the Warrant is a placeholder.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Some real estate tax exemptions offered

The Assessors Office is accepting applications for fiscal 2006 real estate tax exemptions. The deadline for filing is March 30 and there are several criteria that must be met to qualify. Exemption forms are available at the Assessors' Office in the Town Hall. (781) 383-4114.

Village Wine & Spirits under new ownership

The board of selectmen approved a liquor license transfer for Village Wine & Spirits at its Feb. 7 meeting. Cohasset residents Cliff and Amyra Chase have sold the business, located downtown at 29 South Main Street, to Tracy A. O'Connor of Duxbury.

O'Connor has extensive experience in the sales and marketing of wine products. She worked for Violette Imports, Inc., in Cambridge as well as Classic Wines in Norwood. She also has extensive experience with coordinating functions and events, and she hopes to use that experience to plan special events for the shop.

Selectmen said Cliff and Amyra Chase brought much energy to the downtown area and played a big part in drawing visitors downtown by helping plan and participating in special downtown merchant events. O'Connor said she looks forward to keeping the shop a vital part of the downtown community.

Residential brush

Residential brush may be brought to the DPW parking area through April 30. No trees over 3 inches in diameter. No contractors.

CEA van drivers needed

The Cohasset Elder Affairs office needs volunteer van drivers for a three-hour commitment each month on a day chosen by the volunteer. The CEA primarily uses a seven-passenger town van to transport seniors for shopping, visits to the library, to keep local appointments, to congregate meals, and other scheduled events. Anyone interested in helping should call the CEA office Tuesdays, Thursdays, or Fridays at (781) 383-9112, or leave a message.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

DAY CAMPS CAN BE A GREAT CHOICE!

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Day camps offer experiences that are unique from resident or overnight camps. Because of this, there are specific points to consider when choosing a day camp.

- What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, counseling, problem solving, and other issues unique to working with young children?
- Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for:
  - transportation
  - overnights
  - swimming lessons
  - food service
  - horseback riding
  - group pictures
  - before and after camp extended care
  - T-shirts
  - field trips
- If transportation is offered, where is the closest pick-up spot?
- Do they have an "express bus" before or after camp?
- Who supervises campers on the bus?
- If before- and after-camp extended care is offered, who is with the children, what activities take place, and where in the camp is this service offered?
- Is lunch served or do campers bring their own bag lunch?
- Are snacks and drinks provided?
- If the camp offers swimming, are there swimming lessons or is it simply recreational swimming?
- Are campers in a group with a counselor all day? Or, are campers free to go from one activity to another with appropriate supervision? In this case, whom would you talk to if you had a question or concern about your child?
- Is an open house offered before camp starts where you can meet your child's counselor and van/bus driver?
- Are parents allowed to drop by for visits? Under what circumstances?
- What should the camper bring to camp each day? Will the child carry some belongings around the camp in a backpack or bag?

Jenkins turns in papers

School Committee Candidate, Leonora "Lee" Jenkins turned in her nomination papers to the Town Clerk's Office with the maximum number of signatures allowed. "I'm overwhelmed by the positive response I've received. Citizens from all over town agree it's time for a change. They want leadership based in respect, restraint, and responsibility.

"I'm hearing from concerned parents who want a level of education that is essential to their children's success in today's competitive world but see the classroom resources being directed to administrative and overhead costs."

A long-time advocate for keeping the dollars in the classroom, Jenkins believes "With some innovative thinking, it is possible to offer our children the best education consistent with our responsibilities to the taxpayer."

Coming within a few votes of winning a seat on the School Committee in last year's election, Lee looks forward to this year's campaign and the opportunity to return a "culture of learning" to Cohasset's schools.

Wilson won't seek reelection

The following is a formal statement from Pam Wilson on her decision not to seek reelection to the school committee:

"After careful consideration, and for a number of personal reasons, I have decided that this is not a good time for me to seek reelection to the school committee. Over the past year, our committee, along with the superintendent, have worked diligently toward implementing the strategic plan and strengthening our school system. However, I believe that we are at a critical time in our growth. Our school budgets have been reduced in staff and educational programs, negatively impacting our curriculum and increasing overall class sizes. The school committee needs support from our community as a whole, to champion our plan to equip our schools with the tools necessary to continue our positive work for the children.

"I have a great respect for all of those who give up their time to serve on school boards and I now better understand the pressures that teachers and administrators are under while being committed to our wonderful schools. I hope that the majority of Cohasset residents feel that we must all work together to achieve the best education possible for our children. As a parent of children in our schools, I plan to stay actively involved in supporting the growth and development of the Cohasset school system in the future."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Critical of school budget process

dropped from approximately 2,000 students to approximately 1,250 students the budget was not reduced. When the superintendent and school committee were asked to explain why it wasn't there was always an excuse with no real explanation of why. I hope that people will come to Town meeting, question the committee, and demand explanations. I hope that all of the voters in Cohasset will reject this outrageous and unjustified increase in the school budget and if necessary, vote to level fund the school budget.

Border collies' conduct is subject of concern ran over and circled Staszko. Dean said at that point, one of the dogs bit the back of one of Staszko's legs.

Staszko wrote a letter to Animal Control officer Paul Murphy outlining the incident. He said he was on his morning walk, and was exiting Great Brewster property by Beach Street, when six dogs circled him and started nipping at his feet. "One dog bit my left calf causing a 1/4 inch puncture which was 1/2 inch in length. Approximately five minutes later, Mr. Dean arrived and took charge of the dogs."

Staszko stated he explained to Dean it was illegal to let dogs run unleashed in Cohasset. "Yes, I was concerned about myself, but I am also concerned about the elderly who walk the property," he stated.

Staszko reported the incident to the Cohasset Police Department and medics at the Cohasset Fire Department cleaned and dressed the wound.

Dean said the morning after, the dog that bit Staszko whelped a litter of puppies. Dean said he believes the dog's reaction to Staszko was simply because she was a protective mother, but when the dogs are together, they tend to have a pack mentality. The dogs were quarantined and vaccinated as a result of the incident.

In December, Claire Barnum was bitten by Dean's dogs. In a letter sent to Murphy detailing the incident, she stated on Dec. 17, she went to Village Greenery, located in the shops at James Brook Crossing on Pleasant Street, which is owned by owned by Dean's daughter Alida. Barnum said when she opened the door, she hesitated half-way through because Alida Dean and her sister, who was visiting the shop, had asked her a question.

"I didn't hear the question and asked them to repeat it," she recalled. Barnum said one of the women was holding a dog by the collar and another dog was unrestrained. "A second time I asked, and then a third because they were speaking at the same time, and the dog, which was restrained, was making noise," she said.

"I was still standing half in the door. The unrestrained dog leaped at me and bit my left thigh. The dog pulled back, tearing my jeans, and lunged forward again, but missed as I was shutting the door," she said.

"To us, they are the sweetest animals we've ever known."
— John Dean, Meadow Lane

Barnum said at that point, Alida Dean came outside to help her. Alida Dean took Barnum to the Windsor Tea Room, also located in the James Brook Crossing shops, and where Barnum was provided first aid supplies. "The dog bit hard enough to bring blood to the surface and leave clear teeth marks dragging down my leg and a large welt," Barnum said.

"I was told the dogs belonged to the other woman in the shop, Alida's sister. When I asked Alida what they were asking me when I walked into the shop she said, 'Do you have any small children because they are not used to children.' Fortunately, my children were behind me," Barnum recalled.

Barnum said after the incident, she went to the police to file a report and then went to South Shore Hospital for a tetanus shot.

John Dean said from what he knows of the incident, because his dogs love to go for rides in the car, his younger daughter had taken two of them down to visit his older daughter at her shop. He said when Barnum opened the door, the squeak of the door must have startled the dog, which then "took a peck" at Barnum. He said he thought Barnum had received a black and blue and a tear in her pant leg. He descried it as an isolated incident and an accident.

On Jan. 20 Mary Hartshorne was walking near Meadow Lane and she heard two of the dogs barking outside Dean's house. They suddenly ran at her. She said she heard more barking coming from inside the house, and within seconds, there were about five or six dogs surrounding her.

Hartshorne, who is 77 years old, said the dogs jumped on her back and tore at her clothes and bit the backs of her legs. The dogs were pulling at the backs of her pant legs, and Hartshorne said it caused her to fall, and when she put her hand out to brace herself, she broke her wrist. "I was yelling no at the dogs and I thought I could frighten them," she said, but the dogs would not let go. Hartshorne said the minute she hit the ground, she heard a whistle blow and the dogs immediately began running back to the house. "Clearly they had been trained" to respond to a whistle, she said.

Hartshorne was able to get herself back up, and she walked home. Her husband then took her to South Shore Hospital where the wounds were cleaned and she was given a shot. Her wrist was put in a cast.

Dean said the path Hartshorne was walking on starts out as Conservation Trust property, but then travels across his property, then turns back into Conservation Trust property. He said the land where the incident took place was on his property, and because they were not expecting anyone, some of the dogs were outside. He said he saw the dogs circling and blew the whistle to call them back to the house. "We didn't see her fall," he said, adding he found out what had happened after the incident and sent a letter to Hartshorne apologizing. He said in terms of the circling," I'm sure she was frightened. There's no doubt they can be frightening when they circle."

Animal Control Officer Murphy said after the third incident, he felt it was time to request the hearing. "There have been multiple bites and multiple incidents, and the dogs are establishing a track record," he said. He said Dean has been cooperative in terms of carrying out orders for temporary quarantines of the dogs, but at this point, the best solution to the problem will be to reduce the number of dogs he owns and increase restraint. "He can't let them roam free," he said.

Dean said he realizes the number of dogs running together is a factor. "The young ones, they're a year old and they're very rambunctious. They love to run," he said. He added he has taken the appropriate precautions to isolate the dogs from each other so they don't form a pack mentality. He said the dogs are protective of their territory, and by nature are high-strung "but they are wonderful, deep-loving animals."

Dean said he thought Thursday's hearing would air both sides of the stories. "We need to maintain better control, but I think their viciousness has been exaggerated," he said.

The hearing on John Dean's border collies was scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 16 after the Mariner went to press. Look for an update next week.

CCSCR gets grant

Local legislators recently announced that the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research was awarded a grant by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Through its Office of Coastal Zone Management and in conjunction with the Wetlands Restoration Program, the EOEA has granted monies totaling $18,000 to the center, which monitors local salt marsh restoration projects.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is an educational nonprofit organization that emphasizes research in the environmental sciences. CSCR's mission is to inspire students to become stewards of the region's marine environment, engage students in the study of coastal watershed issues, teach students how to research real environmental issues, encourage awareness about the environment, and promote activism within the community.

The Wetlands Restoration Program, established in 1994, advances the state's wetlands policy by promoting and assisting voluntary projects that restore the Commonwealth's wetlands.

Wetlands Restoration Grants are offered annually through a competitive proposal process. Grants are provided to sponsors of designated Priority Projects to fund construction related activities and restoration site monitoring. The grants are available to any Massachusetts public certified non-profit organization, including but not limited to: state agencies, cities and towns, regional planning agencies, watershed organizations, and public schools.

worst," said Hussey, a Norwood resident, but found his worry was unfounded. He said because the storm occurred during the weekend, people were more inclined to stay home. "If we had had people out on the roads, it would have been a mess," he said, but without the additional traffic, the DPW worked quickly and thoroughly and cleared the streets in no time. "They did a great job," he said.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said the fire department did not have many storm-related calls. There was a low-hanging wire or two and the weather made the drive a long and slow one to South Shore Hospital for a couple of medical calls. There was one medical call due to a "slip and fall."

"Overall, we came out pretty good," Lincoln said.

Borland deployed to Afghanistan

Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Kenneth G. Borland has deployed to a forward operating location in Afghanistan to support the mission of Operation Enduring Freedom.

Enduring Freedom is the official name given to anti-terrorism military operations involving U.S. troops and allied coalition partners. Reserve component members from all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces have been mobilized, activated and deployed along with active duty members to support the war against global terrorism. Mission objectives encompass combating the international terrorist network or regime forces outside the borders of the United States. U.S. troops serve in South and Southwest Asia, Central Asia, the Arabian peninsula, islands in the Pacific, and other countries.

Senior Master Sgt. Borland is a superintendent of computer systems and is regularly assigned to the 455th Communications Flight, Ramstein Air Base, Kaiserslautern, Germany.

He is the son of James K. and Nancy M. Borland of Elm St., Cohasset.

Borland graduated in 1984 from Hull High School, and received a bachelor's degree in 1995 from Lesley College, Cambridge. He earned a master's degree in the year 2000 from Oklahoma University, Norman.

Preventative screenings Feb. 23 at St. Anthony's

Residents living in and around Cohasset can be screened to reduce their risk of having a stroke. Life Line Screening will be at St. Anthony Catholic Church, 129 South Main St., Feb. 23. Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

A stroke, also known as a "brain attack," is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women. Through preventive screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involve the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke, aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease. Also offered for men and women, is a bone density screening to assess their risk for osteoporosis.

Each screening requires 10 minutes or less to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the Stroke/Carotid Artery, Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm and Ankle Brachial Index (hardening of the arteries) screenings is $109. Sign-up for a complete vascular package; include the osteoporosis screening and pay only $129.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 800-697-9721. Pre-registration is required.

Grapplers rock Canton

Cohasset moves on to face Pembroke in Div. 3 South team semifinals

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

CANTON - In a December dual meet, the Bulldogs of Canton High School ripped Cohasset to the tune of a 58-18 final score.

Those in attendance for Wednesday night's quarterfinal match of the Division 3 South team tournament would have hardly guessed it, based on the way Cohasset dominated this time around.

To be fair, Canton was without a couple of their top wrestlers. But the Skippers were more than ready for this rematch, winning nine of 14 bouts - six via pin - and returning to Pond Street with a 48-27 victory.

The reward for Torin Sweeney's team is a date this Wednesday (7 p.m. start) in Pembroke with the top-seeded Titans, another team that defeated Cohasset rather handily during the regular season.

Sweeney said after the match that a big reason for the turnaround against Canton is the improvement of the team's younger wrestlers.

"Our younger kids are simply better wrestlers than they were in December," said the veteran coach. "Kids like Adam Smith, Mike Froio, Steven Hurlburt, they gave us some big wins today."

Smith was the first wrestler on the mat for Cohasset, as the match started with the 140-pound weight class. The junior jumped out to a quick 5-0 lead, and then scored the pin with 36 seconds left in the first period.

The next two pins for Cohasset came from its stars, senior captains Shane Dorian and Dave McKenna. Both were typically dominant, pinning their opponents with plenty of time to spare in the first period.

At 189, junior Nick Cambi's match went the distance, with Cambi earning three points for his team with a 9-3 decision. Cambi and junior Ryan McLellan (119) both won via decision, and both got an earful from Sweeney during and after their respective matches.

Those two are among the six Cohasset wrestlers competing at the state individual tournament this weekend in Foxboro, and Sweeney said Cambi and McLellan did some things Wednesday night that they can't afford to do in states.

"I think they can both place this weekend; that's why I was so animated with those two," Sweeney said. "They won't be able to get away with those mistakes against the kids they'll be facing in states."

Hurlburt's performance was one of the revelations of the day, as he dominated his opponent and pinned him just 49 seconds into the match.

Two of the night's best matches came at 112 and 119. At 112, CHS senior Jake Watts had to battle into the third period before pinning the Bulldogs' Jason Rodenhiser. Rodenhiser was on his back for over a minute in the second period, but was able to fight off the pin until the buzzer sounded.

McLellan, meanwhile, was down 5-4 heading into the third. After a long battle in that period, the Cohasset junior picked up two points with just 38 seconds remaining to escape with the win.

Froio was impressive at 125, taking a 6-0 lead into the second period and pinning his opponent just 26 seconds into the frame.

Junior Gannon Dorian won via forfeit at 145, while Cohasset forfeited the 130- and 160-pound weight classes.

Earn highest score of season at league meet

By Rachel Thomas

The team finished off their week with the all-league meet in Somerset, and the girls competed the best they had all season.

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team's season ended on a high note this past week, first winning its meet against Carver, followed by obtaining a season-high score of 128.6 at the Cranberry League meet in Somerset on Saturday.

Coh-Noh's victory over Carver came via 124.7-116.2 score. It was an important meet for many of the members, but particularly for Sarah Dargin, who competed for the first time.

Many other girls competed very well, especially on floor, as the team scored four 8's on the event. Cohasset's Lisa Spirito, an all-around competitor, performed very well on the event, obtaining an 8.2. Additionally, Norwell's CJ Himberg skillfully executed her routine, which won her a score of 8.1. Junior Melissa Murphy also did quite well scoring a 7.9 on the floor exercise.

Captain Erin Kelly and Cohasset's Corrina Durham both obtained scores of 8.0 on bars, which greatly helped the team's all around score.

Thrilling win over league champion Norwell puts skaters in postseason

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

After clinching the South Shore League title last Wednesday night, the Norwell High hockey team's next goal was to go undefeated in the league.

Coming into Saturday night's tilt against Cohasset with a 10-0 SSL record, the Clippers appeared to be on their way to 11-0 when they took a 3-1 lead early in the second period.

Skippers senior Mark Bouchard and teammates, however, had other ideas.

Cohasset ran off four goals in a four-minute span toward the end of the second period, two of which were scored by Bouchard, who finished the game with a hat trick. Norwell got one back right at the end of the period to make it 5-4 at the second intermission.

And that is how things would finish, as Skippers freshman goalie Jonny Wade made 17 saves in the final 15 minutes to preserve the win for Cohasset. As a result, the Skippers had clinched no worse than a second place finish in the league and, more importantly, a berth in the Division 3 state tournament.

Cohasset head coach Ben Virga says the last 12 minutes of that second period was some of the most exciting high school hockey he had ever seen. The puck went up and down the ice, with both teams creating great chances.

It was the Skippers, though, who took better advantage of those opportunities. Senior Brian Straughn started that four-goal stretch to bring his team back within one. Bouchard, who had scored Cohasset's first period goal, then proceeded to tie it up and give the Skippers the 4-3 lead with back-to-back tallies.

Alex Goetz made it 5-3 on a splendid goal that was set up by linemate Austin Lanzillotti. Lanzillotti took out a Norwell player that was charging toward the Skippers net, allowing Goetz to pick up the puck on a breakaway of his own. Goetz made it count, and the Cohasset fans went wild to see their team take a two-goal lead.

Speaking about the game a few nights later, Virga had plenty of praise to go around, starting with senior defenseman Brandon Smith.

"Brandon has been doing his best to carry his team into the tournament the last several games," Virga said. "He has been playing awesome. Dan Sullivan and Austin Lanzillotti were both awesome. Corbin Faber played great defensively."

Norwell head coach Paul Hurley, meanwhile, said he hopes his team learned something from its first league loss.

"We let down a little and Cohasset took full advantage of that," observed Hurley. "We're not the kind of team that can afford any kind of let down. Hopefully, the kids saw that for themselves."

CHS girls hang tough with Rough Riders

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset chipped away at the Rough Riders' lead, wreaking havoc with the notorious Skipper press.

Last week's performances showed us a few things about the Cohasset High girls basketball team.

First, the Lady Skippers demonstrated they can stay highly competitive with the best teams in the South Shore League. Second, they lose no ground when it comes to playing average teams.

Take the Skippers' match up with Harwich at home on Feb. 7 as evidence to point number one. Both teams came out firing on all burners, and neither team seemed to cut the other any slack.

One way or another, though, the Rough Riders seemed to sneak in a few extra points here and there. Near the beginning of the second half, Harwich's small lead climbed higher and higher. How did the Skippers react?

Cohasset chipped away at the Rough Riders' lead, wreaking havoc with the notorious Skipper press. With Cohasset trailing 42-39 and less than a second left in the game, the Skippers had one opportunity to make one of the most exciting comebacks in team history.

Hoping to send the game into overtime, freshman Gabriella Flibotte threw up a prayer from half-court. The crowd held their breath as the ball headed toward the basket. A bounce off the rim, however, deflated the keyed up fans. Not a bad try though.

"The fact that we held them [Harwich] to 42 points shows a lot about us as a team," said head coach John Levangie. "Harwich averages 62 points per game, and our defense did a great job containing them."

Offensively, Flibotte totaled 19 points, followed by senior Mia Lieb-Lappen with seven.

A loss is a loss. Yet, this game certainly illustrated that Cohasset has the attitude, talent, and perseverance to hang with the top dogs in the league.

Three days later, the Skippers showed they play just as hard against more run of the mill teams as they do against solid programs like Harwich. When Hull came to town, the Skippers took care of business. And fast.

On both ends of the floor, Cohasset did its best to confirm they were the better team. With

Hoopsters showing signs

CHS boys keep up with SSL's best

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For 24 minutes, the Cohasset High boys basketball team looked like it would pull the upset of the season last Friday night.

Hosting South Shore League champion Hull, the Skippers held an eight-point lead with seven minutes to go. Led by the hot shooting of sophomore Pat McCarthy (25 points) and Trevor Brady (12 points), Cohasset was more than able to keep up with Hull's run-and-gun style offense.

It was at that seven-minute mark, however, where two things started going wrong for the home: they suddenly went into a drought on offense, and Hull star Henry O'Loughlin began to take over.

Cohasset head coach Dorian Bryant said his team defended the league's leading scorer (at over 28 a game) well, but O'Loughlin simply made tough shots. The ultimate result was a tough 57-52 loss.

"O'Loughlin just took the game into his hands," Bryant said. "His leadership and our youth didn't mix well for us. He is just an awesome leader for them."

With that being said, the second-year coach was proud of his team's effort. He said his players executed what they learned in the scouting report well, and it nearly led them to victory over Cohasset's rivals.

"The kids played a really nice game, and the crowd was a big help for us," Bryant said. "I think they really lifted the players' spirits."

Norwell 47, Skippers 32

Norwell boys basketball head coach John Willis hopes his team's performance Tuesday night was just an off night.

The Clippers defeated Cohasset 47-32 and, as they say, a win is a win. But the 12th year coach was clearly disappointed with his team's intensity in the game.

The biggest reason for that disappointment is the fact that Norwell did not play like a team that is primed for a good run in the postseason, and Willis firmly believes that is the kind of team he has.

"I see the big picture, and I think we have a real good chance to do some damage in the tournament," Willis said. "At any level - the NBA, college, high school - teams have nights like this. But coaches can't be happy with it."

Despite allowing just 32 points, it was Norwell's defense that Willis felt was most lacking. At times, the Clippers' defense was suffocating, including a seven-minute stretch in the middle of the first half in which the visiting Skippers did not score a point. Led by senior Tom Genatossio, Norwell held Cohasset's leading scorer, sophomore guard Pat McCarthy, 13 points, many coming on some tough shots.

But there were other instances in which Cohasset got wide open looks for shooters and fooled Norwell's defense with some back door cuts. The Clippers preceded that seven-minute scoreless run by giving up eight points in less than four minutes to begin the game, culminating with an open three for Cohasset senior Trevor Brady.

"We brought it in spurts defensively, but it wasn't there for 32 minutes," Willis said. "I can live with missed shots, but you have to be consistent defensively."

Willis did credit Genatossio and fellow senior Jake Corcoran (eight points, nine rebounds) for their defensive efforts.

From Cohasset's perspective, head coach Dorian Bryant liked what he saw defensively, but it is at the other end of the court that he will be looking for improvement as he begins to look toward next season.

"Defensively, we were OK," Bryant said. "Offense is where we're finding our struggles. We have two games left [Wednesday against Avon, last night with Mashpee], so there isn't much time to practice. In the offseason, we need to really work at our overall skills to become better.

"If they want to compete in this league and win games, they have to work in the offseason."

Cohasset got a solid effort from junior center Justin Alexander, who pulled down eight rebounds and held Norwell sophomore James Long - a consistent double figures scorer - to just seven.

Norwell junior Mike Kramer led all scorers with 18. Genatossio scored six, and junior Ryan Kane hit a key three toward the end of the first half to help give Norwell an 11-point lead heading into the locker room. Senior Billy Arria dished out six assists.

In addition to his team-high 13 points, McCarthy also had six rebounds out of the backcourt.

GIRLS TRAVEL BASKETBALL

6th graders taste victory, upset first place Raynham

COURTESY PHOTO

With the approaching blizzard in the air, the 6th grade girls traveled to face the first-place, 10-1 Raynham team Saturday evening. The Blue & White had lost to Raynham in December by 15 points, but this time 15 points would be all it took to come home with the win. Defense was the key to success as the Cohasset squad held the Raynham girls, who average 21 points a game, to just 14 total points, eight of which came from the foul line.

Cohasset set the tone in the opening seconds with a blocked shot by Allie Farren. Drawing a foul, Raynham put the first two points on the board from the line. The Sixers responded when Isabel Robinson grabbed an offensive rebound and put it back up for two.

A tight 2-3 defense led at the top of the key by aggressive guards Olivia Franklin and Anna Seraikis denied Raynham shots and stripped the ball for turnovers that set the Cohasset fast break in motion. Farren drove the length of the court for a pair and Seraikis converted an offensive rebound for a basket, upping the score to 6-2.

Impressive teamwork on defense trapped Raynham shooters in the seam for jump balls. Defensive rebounds by Jen Mullin assured that Raynham did not get a second chance to score. The remainder of the half was spent on the foul line where Raynham hit 4-of-4 and Cohasset's Farren went 3-for-4. At the half the score stood with Cohasset on top 9-6 with Raynham's only points coming from the charity stripe.

Although the Cohasset team only had six girls against Raynham's full bench, they set fatigue aside and took command immediately in the second half when Farren grabbed an offensive board for a basket. Raynham asserted full court pressure and Cohasset mixed things up coming out in a pressure 1-2-2 defense.

Raynham's first half perfect foul shooting performance began to waiver, hitting 1-of-3 trips to the line in the early going of the second half. However, with the score at 11-7, Raynham's press forced errors that gave them two baskets and a single from the line. For the first time in the contest Raynham had taken the lead, 12-11.

But Cohasset could taste victory. Franklin grabbed a defensive rebound catalyzing a fast break that came up empty, but the momentum was carried into the next break where Robinson put Cohasset back on top 13-12 with a 12-footer from the side off the backboard. Continuing to shut Raynham down on offense, Farren took command with a defensive rebound and outletted to Seraikis for a fast break. Anna drove to the hoop and drew the foul, giving her two chances to increase the lead.

But Anna did one better, swishing both shots cleanly through the twine to give the Sixres a three point edge, 15-12. With minutes left on the clock, Raynham hit a shot from the top of the key pulling them within one. However, the Cohasset girls dug deep and the final sequences were nothing but intense!

Farren blocked a shot which Raynham gained control of and tossed back up, but it was no good. Farren boxed out, grabbed a huge defensive rebound and immediately turned and threw a long pass to Seraikis who drew the fast break foul. Not in the bonus, Cohasset called a timeout to tweak their inbound play.

Franklin faked the inbound pass to Farren in the lane and fed Serakis in the corner. Her shot went up, the crowd held its breath, the ball went in, spun around the rim and came back out again. Raynham ran the court for another attempt at a hoop, but Cohasset's defense was unrelenting. With seconds on the clock Mullin owned the defensive rebound that put Farren back on the line shooting one-and-one. Tired, she missed the front end, but Raynham could not break past the Cohasset pressure to get within shooting range.

This game was an all-out team effort that proved this squad has heart and the tenacity to win. Contributions came from everyone in the form of baskets, rebounds, blocked shots, steals and success at breaking full court pressure. Farren led the scoring with seven points, joined by both Robinson and Serakis with four each.

Franklin made great inbound passes and was a court leader in keeping the squad focused on defense. Ellie Tedeschi's quickness in defending the post position shut down Raynham's power forwards and Mullin frustrated the Raynham squad all day, pulling down rebounds at both ends of the court.

Sunday did bring a Nor'easter, but the Cohasset sixers already had brought the real blizzard to the Raynham court!

Next week, the Mariner will feature reports on the girls' Sevens, Eights and 56ers.

Six CHS grapplers qualify for states

Entering Saturday's Division 3 South sectionals, no one knew what to expect from the contingent of Cohasset wrestlers who competed.

Well, all those questions were answered when Shane Dorian and fellow wrestlers had a successful day on the mat. Dorian, the rock of the team all year, left the Canton High gym with a big smile on his face after being named the tournament's Most Outstanding Wrestler for the second consecutive tournament.

In the semifinals of the 145 weight class, Dorian avenged a loss to Canton's Joey White earlier in the season, winning by major decision. Then in the finals, Dorian was considered the "underdog" against number-1 seed Nick Ranko of Foxboro. Dorian responded with a vengeance, however, winning by decision, 8-5.

Following the match, Dorian spoke about his success.

"I knew coming in that no one could beat me, but my motivation all along was the fact that I was the number-3 seed going in," he said. "That allowed me to take the pressure off myself and just wrestle, and that's what I did. And now I'm looking to continue that confidence into the individual state tournament."

In the 112 weight class, Ryan McLellan finished off a stellar day by beating Garrett Lincoln in the third place match by major decision. McLellan drew a tough semifinal match, losing to eventual champion Eric Johnson of Pembroke.

In the 125 weight class, freshman Mike Froio surprised everyone except his own teammates by placing sixth. Froio battled hard all day, and head coach Torin Sweeney said this week Froio is in position to do even better at next year's sectionals.

In the 140 weight class, Adam Smith provided his teammates with a sense of excitement before Dorian's big match when he bested Canton's Nick Saraf by major decision. Smith has been the unsung hero of this year's team, and after his win in Wednesday night's dual meet, is 10-2 in his last 12 matches.

Dave McKenna (reigning 145 state champ) lost in the semifinals to Steve Tressel of Pembroke at 152. Tressel has had McKenna's number all year, knocking him off three times before their semifinal bout. Nonetheless, McKenna ended up placing third when his opponent Manasseh Remy (Canton) had to take an injury forfeit.

Then came the big one, with Nick Cambi facing undefeated Dan Bohenek of Rockland in the finals of the 189 weight class. In the semifinals, Cambi pinned Canton's Josh Bystock on his signature "leg roll" move.

Cambi came into the final match with a previous loss to Bohenek, but he hoped to use his array of moves to surprise Bohenek. Although Cambi captured the first points of the match on a take-down in the first period, he was pinned by Bohenek in the second period.

Nevertheless, Cambi walked away with a well deserved second place finish. Explaining his plan to attack Bohenek, Cambi said, "Going in, I knew he was an amazing wrestler, as last year he beat (former CHS star) Matt Baroudi. So this year I went into the match looking to get as many points possible, while not allowing him to lock me up and pin me.

"But I can't get discouraged when he does beat me because he's the state champ and that's what he's supposed to do."

Finally, in the 215 weight class, as a result of a fourth place finish, George Miller left the Canton gym with a smile just as wide as Dorian because he knows he lives to wrestle another weekend. Those two will join McKenna, Cambi, Smith and McLellan at states.

Looking ahead to this Friday's Division 3 state tournament at Foxboro High School, let's hope this success keeps rolling all the way to New Englands. One thing is for sure, though, and that is that Shane Dorian will make his presence known on the mat whether he wins or loses, because he's a champ and that's what champions do.

Gymnasts earn highest score of season at league meet

"The all league meet was the best meet of the year," said coach Amy Maree. "It was very nice to end the season with the girls competing as well as they possibly could have."

The girls' effort throughout the season showed with their scores, as Kelly placed fifth in the all-around with a 32.8, and fifth on vault with a score of 8.05. The team was especially impressed with Kelly because "there were a lot of tough teams at the meet, so it was hard to place with many of our scores," Maree remarked.

The gymnasts competed very well on floor, with both Kelly and Spirito scoring 8.6. Himberg scored an 8.5, and Durham followed closely behind, obtaining an 8.4. Murphy also did very well, as she scored an 8.1 in this event.

On the beam, the seniors' scores were equally as high, as Kelly, Spirito, and Himberg scored an 8.3, 8.2 and 8.1 respectively.

"Many of our juniors did very well in the meet," Maree said, which was shown by the vault performances of Norwell's Kiersten Shontz and Jamie Nichols. Shontz's front handspring vault earned a score of 7.7, and Nichols' scored a 7.45 with her vault.

The girls were quite satisfied with their performance overall, as they await the naming of the league All-Stars on the team. Also, on the close of the season, Maree said, "We had a great season this year, and all of the girls should be extremely happy and proud of how they performed."

15 points from Flibotte, and eight apiece from freshman Sam Lehr, junior Lacey Richardson and senior Chelsea Grossman, the Skippers stopped the visitors dead in their tracks.

The Skippers defense and press, coupled with eight boards from Lehr and six from Lieb-Lappen buried the hatchet on this one. Final score: 49-34, Cohasset.

So while the Skippers would have obviously preferred to go 2-0 last week, they did maintain an all-important momentum. With the tournament just around the corner, what could be more important? They could have coasted in these two games knowing they already had qualified for postseason play. But they behaved just the opposite.

If the Cohasset players can put up a fight against solid SSL schools like Harwich, they may hold their own against top tier teams in the Division 4 tournament.

"We're going in full force," explained Flibotte, referring to the tournament. "Things are working pretty well right now, and we're definitely going for the win."

Next week, the Mariner will cover this week's CHS girls basketball games and look ahead to their tournament prospects.

score two goals in the final nine minutes just to come away with a point against a Vikings team it had beaten handily earlier in the season.

With the game tied 3-3 going into the third, SSVT scored two breakaway goals in the first five minutes of the final period to take a two-goal advantage. The second goal seemed to finally put some life into the boys in blue, and junior defenseman Conor Holway got one back at the 8:10 mark with a nice wrist shot from 25 feet out.

Cohasset withstood some pressure over the next four minutes, with Wade making four key saves to keep his team in it. Smith made that effort count with 3:28 left in the game, as he took a pass at the point from Straughn, skated up to the right face-off circle and buried a wrister past the Vikings goalie to tie it up.

SSVT nearly stole the win at the very end, but Wade made an unbelievable stop on a breakaway and tied it up with just 0.5 showing on the clock.

Virga will certainly be looking for his team to play more like it did Saturday night, as the Skippers finish their season with Pembroke tomorrow night and Westwood on Wednesday.

"We didn't play well [Wednesday night]. We definitely had a huge letdown from Saturday night against Norwell," said Virga after the SSVT game. "In the state tournament, if we play like that, we're going home. It's very, very simple."

Lanzillotti, Smith and Ben Massotta, playing his first ever game at forward in place of an ill Charlie Czerkawski, scored the team's first three goals. Sophomore Patrick Doonan played another strong game for Cohasset, and finished with two assists.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Valentine's Day was sweet!

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Happy belated Valentine's Day to you and yours. The best part about this Holiday is all the candy and chocolate that gets delivered in this school. I'm talking candy hearts and chocolate bunnies galore, it's actually pretty ridiculous.

Big ups to the CHS hockey team who showed tremendous guts and grit in a heart-stopping victory over league champs, Norwell. Tuesday (Feb. 14), was senior night for the Girls Varsity Basketball team; the High School honored honor Chelsea Grossman, Mia Lieb-Lappen, and Kaitlin James for their stellar play over the past four years.

All around, it was an exciting week for the High School and it is still bubbling with news as the much-anticipated vacation approaches, so here we go.

• The guidance counselors have been and will continue to meet with juniors to discuss post-high school planning.

• The administration has begun to review the schedules for next year and revise the class lists.

• The student council sold Valentine's Day candy bags for a dollar. A student was able to purchase a bag for a dollar and send it to anyone in the school that they desire.

• Attention seniors: The guidance office will distribute local scholarship booklets in mid-March and students will have about a month to complete and return the forms.

• The Cohasset Swim Team placed second in the League meet this week behind Duxbury. Captain, Mamme Daly, placed first in the 500-yard Freestyle, and Jonny Drybanski placed first in the 200-yard Individual Medley. Sectionals will be this Saturday and Sunday at Northeastern University; the boys will compete Saturday and the girls on Sunday. States will be the following weekend at MIT.

• Congratulations to the following band and chorus students who qualified for the annual SEMSBA competition. Band: Myles Collins-Wooley, Aisling Guinee, Kristen Schwerin, and Molly Trisler. Chorus: Anne Chapman, Myles Collins-Wooley, Jessica Dupre, and Katie Jensen.

• Robert Macy delivered separate presentations to the staff and community in the auditorium on Monday to talk about the safety in schools and how to detect unrest in a student.

• The Class Presidents, and student leaders; Brendon Barrett, Daniel McCarthy, Chris Pescatore, Kenny Muir and Melissa Crowley-Buck, met with Dr. Gill on Tuesday morning to discuss school issues, Doc Gill filled in for Mr. Antolini who was unable to attend.

• The Cancer Society's Relay for Life will have met on Wednesday morning in the library.

• There will have been a H.S. Student Assistance Team meeting on Thursday.

This vacation truly cannot come fast enough, especially with the blizzard on Sunday toying with the students and making them think that maybe, possibly we could have a snow day. No delay or anything put a bit of a damper on the entire week. Oh well, it will soon be over and the seniors will be sitting pretty after the vacation with only a few weeks left in their High School careers.

English teacher to bid adieu

By Molly Trisler
SPINNAKER STAFF

Mr. Leary, then.

Mr. Leary, now.

"It will not be easy to walk out at the end of this year."
— Mr. Leary

"He's really going to be missed. Within his department, I see him as the person who held everything together."

Who but Mr. Leary, head of the English department and the one responsible for introducing students to "The Great Gatsby," "Huckleberry Finn," "Walden," and countless other crucial pieces of the American literary repertoire, could earn such a compliment from Mr. Bouchard? This spring, Cohasset High School will lose this invaluable asset, while Home Depot may or may not gain it.

Mr. Leary began teaching at Cohasset in 1973, and has taught eighth grade, juniors and seniors since then. He has dedicated the great majority of his time here, however, to teaching sophomores American Literature, a subject he says he "begged" not to teach, preferring the mythology and Shakespeare units of the freshman curriculum. The administration wouldn't move him, though, and thus another coincidence was added to the string of them that have shaped Leary's life.

His beginnings as an English teacher likewise rested on happenstance. A chemistry major, Leary had never concentrated on English, but one Shakespeare course he happened to take was enough to change his mind. Even after switching to English, Leary didn't necessarily want to teach it, but a friend's chance mention of a teaching assistant position caused the new English major to decide to take it up and teach his peers the subject he now loved. Leary was hooked.

Mr. Leary says his favorite books to teach to students are "Huckleberry Finn," "Of Mice and Men," "The Great Gatsby," and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The last is also one of his personal favorites to read, along with Stephen King's books. Throughout his years at CHS, Leary says he has found it strange to transition from being a new teacher who looked up to experienced teachers to being a veteran himself.

"It will not be easy to walk out at the end of this year," he says, since he now defines himself as a teacher, though then again, "it will be a new adventure," much like the one seniors will begin. His plans after his "graduation"?

"Working at Home Depot. 'Here's a hammer!' 'Here's a wrench!'"

"Are you serious? I'm writing this down."

"Yes!"

Beyond this, Leary would also like to return to Ireland with his wife and continue to drive the launch at the Scituate Yacht Club perhaps giving Mr. Kite a lift to the sailboat he keeps there. Of his time as an English teacher, Leary says, "You never know what will change you" — a brief conversation about a teaching assistant position, for instance, can lead you to the career to which you will dedicate your life.

"I think I've been very fortunate. I've worked with wonderful people and good kids." With this, the man often found behind "The Minister's Black Veil" wielding an axe, the "E.B. White of Cohasset High School" (thank you, Mr. O'Neil), will hop out the door and into the Scituate Harbor launch, perhaps giving us a final maniacal laugh as he drives off into the sunset.

This article is reprinted from the Spinnaker, the middle-high school newspaper.

HPA playwriting contest

Aspiring high school playwrights from the towns of Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, and Norwell are invited to submit scripts for Hull Performing Arts' first playwriting contest. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Hull Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Rules: All plays submitted must be the original work by a single author. Plays must be appropriate for all audiences. All plays must be submitted only to this contest. Playwrights maintain all literary rights to their own material. Screenplays, musicals and adaptations are not eligible. Scripts should be typed and stapled, and pages must be numbered.

Cover page is necessary with: title of play, playwright's name, home address with apartment # and zip code, phone number, email, school, and grade. Submissions should be typed and double-spaced using a simple font such as Times New Roman or Ariel.

Submit two copies of the play to: HPA, P.O. Box 236, Hull, MA 02045 Attn: Artistic Director.

Keep the original, as scripts will not be returned. Or, submissions can be emailed as an MSWord document to: hpa@hullperformingarts.com. All plays must be emailed or postmarked by April 20, 2006. HPA's board of directors and artistic director will judge the entries. Plays will be judged on content, dialogue, ingenuity, and ability to be staged. Winners will be notified by letter in May.

Winner prizes: $100 in cash. Winning play will be presented on the amphitheater at Fort Revere the last weekend in July and the first weekend in August. Playwright may co-direct his or her own play. Playwright directors will be assisted by committee members. Winner receives a free video tape or DVD of the production of the winning play(s).

Guidelines: No special effects, or elaborate lighting. Keep in mind that lighting at Fort Revere is either on or off – no fades, flashes, colors, etc. At least one performance may be during daylight hours. Play must have a single set. Sets should be simple and easy to install within 15 minutes. Storage is limited at Fort Revere, so all sets, props, costumes, and lighting has to fit into one or two loads of a pick-up truck. Production time should be at least 45 minutes, but should not exceed 1 hour and 45 minutes including a 15 minute intermission. There should be no more than three scenes. Author must be currently enrolled in High School, grades 9, 10, 11, or 12. All set, prop and costume items should be easy to obtain. Play needs to use at least two actors, but no more than eight. One actor may play additional characters.

Suggestions: Write the play so that characters exit or enter the stage in character. This is especially important since all exits and entrances will be easily viewed by the audience. Take some time to explore the stage and Fort Revere. Picture the scenes of your play unfolding on that stage. Study some of the history of the Boston Harbor Islands or Fort Revere and use it as inspiration for the play.

Pilgrim Arena offers scholarships

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available (starting Tuesday, Feb. 14) at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

This is the 33rd consecutive year that the Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding scholarships to area high school seniors planning to further their education.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Friday, March 31.

Applicants will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Arena.

For more information, please call Hoby Taylor, 781-749-6660.

Art scholarships

The South Shore Art Center announces the 2006 Art Scholarship Competition for South Shore seniors attending public, private, or parochial schools who will graduate in 2006. Students who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited institution of higher learning which includes a fine arts curriculum are eligible to apply. Four scholarships will be presented, ranging in value from $1,000 to $300. Portfolios and applications may be submitted to the Art Center on April 22, 10-4; April 23, 12-4; April 24, 9-9; April 25, 9-9;and April 26, 9-9.

A panel of artists/educators will review the portfolios and applicants will be notified promptly. Award money will be paid directly to the winners' schools to be applied toward tuition costs. Awards will be presented during the awards ceremony at the 51st South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, June 16. For more information call the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or e-mail Heather Collins hcollins@ssac.org.

Children learn through doll making

Nakilah Skeens, 8, right, shows Molly Cunny material she could use while making her doll. Nakilah and Molly were taking part in a doll-making and storytelling event, held at Osgood School Feb. 8., to celebrate Black History Month. Students who participate in the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program, as well as their host families, friends, and Cohasset METCO big sisters were invited to attend.

Doll maker and collector Debbie Britt shows Kiyarmi Cofield one of the dolls from her extensive collection. Britt and her family have more than 8,000 dolls in their collection, some of which will be on display at the high school as part of the school's celebration of Black History Month.

(Left) Whitney Graham gives a helping hand to Malaki Nelson while he attaches the head to the doll he made during the Osgood School's doll-making and storytelling event. Students who take part in the METCO program, as well as their host families and friends were invited to attend the program, held in honor of Black History Month.

Matthew Legge works on a doll with his mom, Leisa, during a special doll-making and storytelling event held at the Osgood School Feb. 8.

Cohasset High School student Mercedees Barnes-Jackson is all smiles while working on a doll she made during a doll-making and storytelling event honoring Black History month.

Madelyn Schwandt fashions a skirt out of some material during a doll-making event held at the Osgood School Feb. 8.

Doll maker and collector Debbie Britt tells the inspirational story of the "Legend of Cecilia," as children gather around. Britt was at Osgood School Feb. 8 to help teach the children about the history of black doll collecting and doll making, in celebration of Black History Month. The story ends with children making dolls of their own, which is exactly what children at Osgood were invited to do.

'Pirates' life

Jolly brushes with fame as Depp and crew film in Bahamas

By J.M. LAWRENCE
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

LUCAYA, Grand Bahama Island -- In a secluded cove, a ghastly gray ghost ship festooned with howling sea monsters awaits the likes of Johnny Depp, Bill Nighy, Keira Knightley, Orlando Bloom and the rest of the "Pirates of the Caribbean" cast.

On a recent January morning, however, the only character resembling a pirate aboard The Flying Dutchman, the ship featured in Part 2, "Dead Man's Chest," due out July 7, is a Disney goon threatening to send a bunch of tourists down to Davey Jones' locker for pointing cameras at his prop.

No point in risking the plank when Depp's Capt. Jack Sparrow isn't even around. We forget the scallywag, hoist our Jolly Roger and set out to splice the main brace with a ration of grog.

Filming on Grand Bahama of Disney's wildly successful "Pirates" (Part 2 and Part 3, which opens in 2007) was set to resume a few days after my visit, and has unleashed a cascade of pirate metaphors and promotions on the Islands of the Bahamas, a breathtaking archipelago 50 miles off the coast of Florida. Locations have included this island as well as the Exumas, part of the Bahamas Out Islands. Filming also has taken place elsewhere in the Caribbean, including Dominica and St. Vincent and the Grenadines.

Though the actual sets are closed to the public and security is tight, every resort, tchotchke shop and colada hut here stands ready to capitalize on pirate mania. Pirate hotel packages abound for families and couples. The pirate museum in nearby Nassau, a favorite excursion for families who arrive there on cruises, seems invigorated. And residents of Grand Bahama tend to have stories about brushes with "Pirates" fame.

Take Greg Vincent, a Welshman who operates bonefishing charters based at the Pelican Bay hotel. Vincent worked as an extra, he said, donning the military uniform of an East India Company militiaman. A less-than-glamorous 15-hour day of filming at sea followed. The rumble of passenger planes overhead often interrupted filming, while Vincent shouldered an 18-pound gun in the heat. A fellow "soldier" fainted, he said.

The fishing boat captain also was tapped for his special expertise. He provided director Gore Verbinski with a fisherman's stew of uncleaned conch, sardines and squid to spew from a sea monster's belly during a battle scene.

Vincent said he dyed the squid yellow and bleached some of the chum to create the proper appearance of a sea monster's half-digested diet.

"I want a (film) credit," he said, added with a grin, "Chief of guts."

During my stay, I opted to try bonefishing sans sea monster guts (we used shrimp on our hooks).

A 63-year-old taxi-driving grandma named Paddy, a former paralegal, said she had spent months driving makeup artists and other behind-the-scenes crew from their hotel (most are staying at The Westin at Our Lucaya) out to filming locations, including a 60 million-gallon, open-water filming tank operated by the Bahamas Film Studios at Gold Rock Creek.

Paddy described getting her picture taken with Depp and other "Pirates" stars as bright spots in what have been some brutal years on storm-battered Grand Bahama. The island suffered direct hits from two hurricanes in two years and took another blow from Hurricane Wilma last fall. Remnants of the hurricanes' wrath were still visible. Shingles were missing from some of the finest resorts. And a handful of empty properties in Freeport awaited renovation.

"I've seen the good, the bad and the ugly," Paddy quipped while burning rubber up the battered Grand Bahama Highway.

Though it's hard to spot the films' stars -- Depp reportedly is staying on a yacht while the others are in private rented homes -- some of the less recognizable pirate actors have been known to hang out at hot spots here including Yellow Tails at Pelican Bay.

For Joseph Garvey, the "Pirates" sequels spell more tourists piling into the Pirates of Nassau Museum, in the nation's capital, where Garvey plays Captain Argh!, ushering kids aboard a 75-foot pirate ship replica called Revenge. He spins tails of the Bahamas' most famous pirates -- Blackbeard, Henry Morgan, Calico Jack -- and the pirate hunters commissioned by the King of England in 1718.

The Flying Dutchman prop ship on Grand Bahama Island.

Other tales of pirate lore on Grand Bahama come from nature guide Wellington Clark, a father of five who grew up in a tiny village here. Clark, who earned degrees in biology and political science, works for Grand Bahamas Nature Tours (www.gbn-tours.com) and leads treks through the Lucaya National Park out to Gold Rock Beach. At sunset, a glowing rock several hundred feet offshore once lured merchant ships into the shallows, where pirates pounced, he said.

Clark led my group on a 90-minute morning kayak through pristine mangroves. Enduring a rare cold front that pushed temperatures down into the 50s this day, we pressed on, paddling against a strong head wind and shouting for all to hear, "Shiver me timbers."

IT'S HAPPENING

Ed Bartholomew and Diane O'Sullivan (front) savor their roles in Bernstein's CANDIDE, part of The Broad Cove Chorale / Unicorn Singers' Encore! concert March 4 and 5 at Norwell's Cushing Center.

'Encore!' comes to the Cushing Center

It's time to shake off the winter blues with the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale as they present "Encore!" on Saturday, March 4 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 5 at 3 p.m., at the Cushing Center, 673 Main St. in Norwell.

"Encore!" is a festive musical romp through jazz, pop, barbershop, Broadway, and light classical favorites. The audience is seated pops-style at tables in a colorfully decorated setting, and creative concert picnics are encouraged.

This year's program features a costumed medley from Lerner and Loewe's "Camelot," with arrangements by the Unicorn Singer's own Rich Jensen, as well as selections from Leonard Bernstein's "Candide." A dramatized Victorian medley entitled 'The Heroine Triumphant' showcases the talents of sopranos Jeanne Scammell of Norwell, Amy Martin of Scituate and Joan Gatturna of Hingham. The men get their moments in the spotlight too, most notably, the very versatile and multi-talented Bob Ruplenas and Rich Jensen of Weymouth.

In case winter never arrives, a creative medley of familiar winter pop tunes, with slight variations in the lyrics, will remind us all of what could have been.

Purchase single tickets for $15 at Noble's in Hingham Square or call Diane at 781-331-4255 to reserve tickets. A discount rate of $135 for a table of 10 is available. On Sundays tickets are $10 for seniors and students.

Curious George makes movie debut

Curious George, the inquisitive little monkey who is always getting into trouble, makes his movie debut in February. Buttonwood is celebrating his star status with a party and a contest. The contest is a find Curious George at Buttonwood Counting Contest. The object is to count the specially marked Curious George pictures. A fixed number of these pictures have been placed throughout the store. Count the pictures and write your total on the Curious George entry form available at the front desk. The winner will be drawn from the correct answers submitted. The prize is a Curious George Gift Basket.

Contest rules: One entry per family. No purchase necessary. Participants need not be present to win. Winner will be selected at the Curious George Party. The Curious George Party is at 3 p.m.., Tuesday, Feb. 21. Buttonwood invites all Curious George fans to share the red carpet excitement (or the green carpet at Buttonwood) of Curious George's movie opening. The celebration will include fun activities and story time. Refreshments will be served. Reservations are requested for planning purposes. Free. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve.

OBITUARIES

Paul F. Igo

Former restaurant owner

Paul F. Igo, 67, of Cohasset, died Feb. 7, 2006, at Caritas St. Elizabeth's Medical Center, after a brief illness.

Born and raised in Cambridge, he was a 1956 graduate of St. Sebastian's High School at its former location in Newton, and attended Boston University in Boston, and Bentley College in Waltham.

Mr. Igo worked for many years in the family business as an owner of Igo's restaurant, which had two locations, one in Waltham and one in Cambridge. He also owned and operated the Bell In Hand Lounge in Cambridge with his family. He was later self-employed for 10 years as a consultant. For the last 14 years, Mr. Igo worked diligently for Boston Coach.

The husband of the late Katherine (Signorelli) Igo, he leaves a daughter, Donna Lutz, and her husband David of Belmont; two sons, Paul L. Igo of Cohasset, and Gregory P. Igo, and his wife Kerry of Needham; four grandchildren; a brother, Frank Igo of Abington; and three sisters, Geraldine Mood of No. Attleboro, Lillian Igo of Abington, and Marie Spinale of Juniper, Fla. He was the brother of the late Sister Jane Francis, S.N.D, the late Jack Igo, and the late Fred Igo.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Feb. 10, in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. at 11:30 a.m. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Contributions in his memory may be made to the Caritas St. Elizabeth's Medical Center for Lung Cancer Research, c/o of Fund Development, 736 Cambridge St., Brighton, MA 02135.

Ann J. Ernst

Former librarian

Ann J. (Melis) Ernst, 85, of Twinsburg, Ohio and Cohasset, formerly of Chagrin Falls, Ohio and Pittsfield, N.Y., died on Feb. 6, 2006 after a long illness at the Pope Nursing Home in Weymouth.

A devoted wife, mother and grandmother, Mrs. Ernst worked for over 30 years as a librarian and Director of Circulation at St. John Fisher College. She was a member of the Ohio Cosmos Damian Church in Twinsburg, Ohio.

Loving wife of Robert C. Ernst Sr. She leaves a son, Robert C. Ernst Jr. of Cohasset and the late Marianne Cortelli. She also leaves nine grandchildren: Gregory, Micael, Callie, Peter, Luke, and Maggie Ernst and Lisa Parks, Gwynee Cortelli, Lauren Cortelli-Hundhammer, as well as two great-grandchildren, Jordan and Marie Parks.

A funeral Mass was held in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Interment in Beechwood Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in Ann's memory may be made to St. Anthony's Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Arrangements handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Homes, Cohasset.

Three building fires last month

The three responses classed as building fires were caused by: clothes dryer lint , fireplace damper closed, and chimney fire/creosote build-up.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln provided the following summary of fire department responses during the month of January:

Building fires three; motor vehicle crashes 13; motor vehicle fires one; medical emergencies 74; investigations 11; inspections 24, assistance calls eight; and miscellaneous responses 50. There were no brush fires during January. Fifty-nine emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 50 medical emergencies and nine fire calls, Lincoln said.

The fire department ambulance transported 51 patients to South Shore Hospital and two patients to Quincy Medical Center. Mutual aid ambulances transported 11 patients from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital. One motor vehicle crash in January required transport to a hospital.

Fire alarm system activation responses totaled 14 during January. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for seven responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of seven responses. The three responses classed as building fires were caused by: clothes dryer lint , fireplace damper closed, and chimney fire/creosote build-up.

High winds on Jan.18, generated 22 storm-related incidents. Downed trees and electrical wires kept the fire dept. busy from mid-morning until the early morning of Jan. 19.

How to Find Real Estate for 30% to 50% Below Market Value in 2006

DISCOVER THE HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS MOST REAL ESTATE INVESTORS OVERLOOK

"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties. That means, you do not have to have money in the bank.

My system is so comprehensive that the state of California accredited it. But like just about everything in life, it works best if you work at it.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than $3 trillion worth of assets are in probate. It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN-BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.
2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.
3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.
4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.
5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

An estate can be your quickest way to acquire a prime business for pennies on the dollar. You can run it, or sell it quickly for market value and position yourself for substantial gains.

Estate hunting is also a great way to start an e-business, auction off your findings, and cash in on the new, thriving e-based economy.

One of our students made profits of 1,000 percent to 3,000 percent on the possessions he found in estates and then quickly sold. There is a potential windfall in every estate you search.

You can use probate to build a tidy business around just about any item or collectible that interests you. Millions of items, and real estate, end up as "buried treasure" hidden in probate.

South Shore cousins form 'Rock Solid' partnership

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

A few years ago, Derek Stearns and Dean Marsico, two trained actors with stage and film credits, decided to trade show business for the family business and open Stone By Stearns, a South Shore company specializing in hand-cut veneer stone. Now, thanks to their cable television series "Rock Solid" - currently in its second season on DIY, the Do-It-Yourself network — Braintree-born cousins Stearns and Marsico have been able to combine their work as skilled stone masons with their ease in front of the camera.

"The show and the business complement each other," explained Stearns, 42, recently by telephone from Norwell where he and Marsico were installing a cathedral veneer fireplace. "The spine of all of our shows is to make them entertaining and funny. If you're not really interested in doing a stone landing, you watch us do it and we make it interesting. We also provide proper information on the projects and all the necessary outlines to do things right."

Stearns and Marsico learned about doing stone masonry right from Arthur Stearns, a master stone mason and Derek's father. The Stearns family has been in the stone masonry business since the 1950s, when Arthur Stearns began as a yard laborer with the Plymouth Quarries in Hingham. During breaks, according to his son, he would go down to the cutting sheds and study the stone cutters at their craft, cutting granite with hammers and chisels. Arthur later bought a truck and started his professional life as a stonemason. After high school, Derek joined his brother Butch, now a television sportscaster on Fox-25, and went to work full-time for his father. In 1987, Arthur Stearns was killed by a 17-year-old drunk driver in a Holbrook accident.

"My brother, Butch, took over the business. We went back to work on the job we were doing when my dad died. When we were finished, we couldn't tell where my father had stopped and where we had started. That's when we realized just how much he had taught us. We learned everything we needed to know from my father."

The elder Stearns also taught his sons and his nephew that while they were skilled tradesmen they could also pursue other careers.

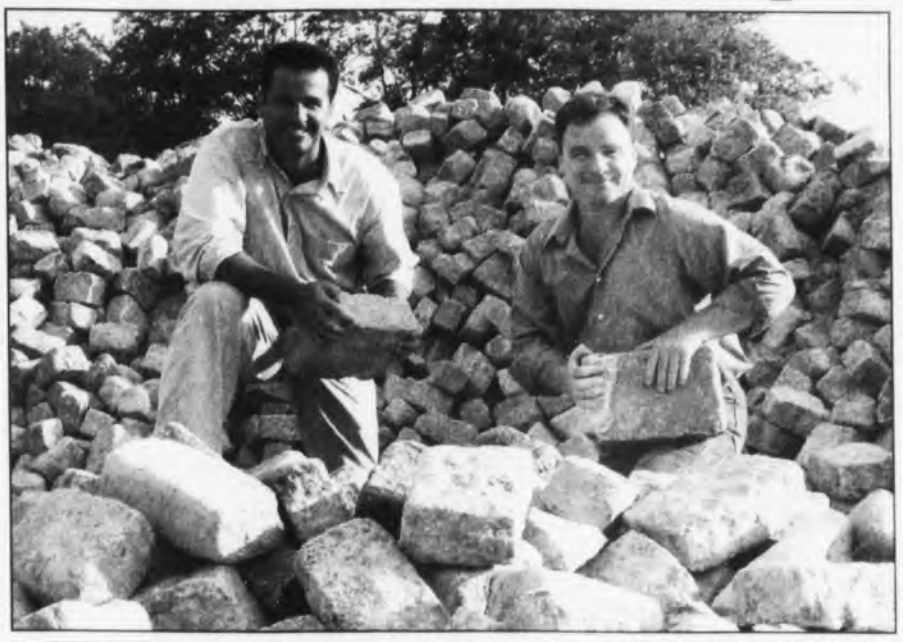
"I knew if I didn't at least try acting I never would," recalls Stearns who stepped away from the family business in 1989 for a career on the stage in Boston and New York. Since acting gigs didn't always pay all the bills, Stearns continued with stone masonry on a part-time basis.

At the same time, Marsico was pursuing a similar career path in Los Angeles, where he appeared in several made-for-television movies and the 1999 feature film "The Mod Squad."

"I had my first son in California," says Marsico, who now lives in Norwell with his wife, Kristen, and their sons Jack and Matthew. "As an actor, you work a little and you starve a lot. I wanted to buy a house for my family so I decided to move back home and focus on the masonry business. If you had told me then that I'd move home and all this would happen, I would have laughed."

But happen it did when Stearns and Marsico put together a videotape of two sample shows and sent it off to several networks.

"Both Derek and I had watched quite a few shows on HGTV and none of them dealt specifically with stone masonry, so we thought it would be worth a shot to send in our tape," Marsico recalled recently in a conference call with his cousin. When HGTV passed on the series, its sister network, DIY, picked it up and in September 2004 the pair inked a two-year deal for 26 episodes of the show, which is produced by the National Association of Home Builders in Washington, D.C.



"The spine of all of our shows is to make them entertaining and funny. If you're not really interested in doing a stone landing, you watch us do it and we make it interesting. We also provide proper information on the projects and all the necessary outlines to do things right."
Derek Stearns

The two have traveled extensively to film segments on everything from the installation of a slate floor in Washington to an outdoor waterfall in Arizona and the making of adobe clay bricks in Orlando, Florida.

"We're careful to reiterate as often as we can that regional weather conditions affect the materials you can use. In Orlando, we worked with a local artisan. We didn't pretend to be experts although all stone and brick work uses at least some of the same techniques," says Stearns, who makes his home in Weymouth with his wife, Carol, and their children, Ian and Julia.

Their television work has sent them to Wyoming to quarry fossil stone from an ancient river bed and to Florence, Italy, for the International Stone Show, but the craftsmen still prefer to ply their trade a little closer to home. Examples of their work, from brick patios to stone walls and walkways to fire pits, can be seen in Norwell, Hingham, Braintree, Quincy, Milton, Duxbury, Co-hasset, and Plymouth, and on Cape Cod.

Stearns and Marsico tackled three types of flagging stonework for an episode, entitled "Stone Patio, Walkway and Stepping Stones" which was filmed in Manomet over three days last August.

Other of these recent projects will be featured on episodes of the series including "Firehouse Patio Revamp" in which the partners team up to spruce up the firehouse patio of Engine 3 in Quincy.

"We happened to meet a firefighter one day and went from there. The fire station is their house so we wanted to help them replace their existing patio with one they could really enjoy. We had a blast with some of the firefighters even helping us to install the new concrete pavers. J. F. Price of Weymouth donated the paving materials and Lowe's even donated a brand new gas grill."

In an episode entitled "Bluestone Landing," airing March 21 with repeat broadcasts on March 22 and 26, Stearns and Marsico take on a project in Marshfield Hills.

"They are planning to hold a wedding there this summer so they asked us to create a new patio. The house was built in 1740 so we chose a tumbled bluestone paver to complement the existing stone wall on the property. We actually rehabbed almost all the stone work at the site. The challenge was to make our work look like it wasn't just done so that it would fit in well with the surroundings," explains Stearns.

The pair - who also teach classes in stone masonry in the spring and fall at the Plymouth Quarries - say that they're all about the work even when the cameras are rolling.

"We have a good reputation that we have worked hard for," says Marsico. "Our craft was passed down to us by Derek's dad so it is something we take seriously even when we're having fun on a job. After the first day of taping on the show, the glamour wears off. We have help with the heavy lifting but otherwise we do all the work ourselves."

And that work is not always easy, according to Stearns. "It's exhausting to try and shoot an entire episode in just 2 to 3 days. We have acting backgrounds, of course, and that has helped us for sure. That said, it still takes an amazing amount of energy to do what we do."

(Derek Stearns and Dean Marsico can be seen on "Rock Solid" airing on the DIY Network. For more information and air dates for the series, check local listings or visit www.diynetwork.com. Au Revoir "Les Miserables"

When Cameron MacKintosh decided it was time to close his long-running "Les Miserables" on Broadway three years ago, the legendary producer turned to Randal Keith to play the hero, Jean Valjean, for the show's final three months in New York. So it is not surprising that Keith is also playing Valjean on the farewell tour of the mega-musical which this week opened its eighth and final Boston engagement at the Opera House.

"The final weeks on Broadway were more emotional than anything I have ever experienced," recalled Keith last week by telephone. "The entire company was energized but it was still like being on a roller coaster for all of us. Our audiences were amazing. People who hadn't seen the show in years came back again. And some people came to more than one performance in those final weeks."

Keith first joined the Alain Boubil and Claude-Michel Schonberg musical, based on the novel by Victor Hugo, in 1997 as an understudy on the third national tour. He has since played the fugitive Jean Valjean, who struggles to evade capture through three turbulent decades of the 19th century, at thousands of performances from New York to Shanghai, China and South Korea.

Randal Keith

"I know the character a lot better now after nine years. People admire him, because of his humanity. Jean Valjean is not a saint. His whole life is a struggle for redemption with which many of us can relate."

A native of North Carolina, Keith - whose previous stage credits include 'Sunset Boulevard" and "Phantom of the Opera." - knows what it is like to reach the end of a long road tour. "Before I joined this show, I had done six years of touring with 'Phantom.' I really enjoy the traveling. As far as we know now, these are our final visits to each city. It has been interesting so far, however, because it's really renewed the tour itself. It's meant more ticket sales and more interest which is great. It will be very unusual to say goodbye for the last time. We know there will never be another show quite like 'Les Miserables'."

"Les Miserables" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, through February 26. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-931-2787.

Movie review

Remake will tickle you 'Pink'

The Pink Panther
(B+)

JAMES VERNIERE
FILM CRITIC

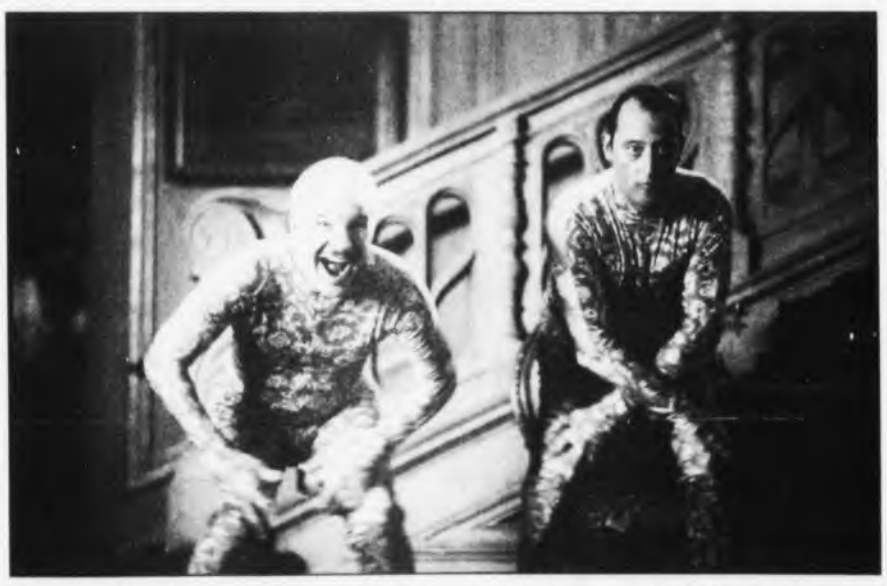
At the risk of stating the obvious, Hollywood no longer makes movies. It remakes them.

Having said that, "The Pink Panther" is a pleasant surprise, if not quite a golden goose. And it is a pleasure to hear Henry Mancini's theme music, among the most famous musical themes in movie history, played for a new generation.

While Steve Martin's Inspector Jacques Clouseau, the bumbling but sublimely confident French policeman with the bizarre accent, is not going to make anyone forget Peter Sellers' brilliant original, he is a worthy and respectful descendant of Sellers' screen icon. ("Panther" buffs will recall that such actors as Alan Arkin, Ted Wass and Roberto Benigni tried and failed to make us forget Sellers.)

Once again, the plot revolves around the theft of the legendary Pink Panther, a rose-tinted diamond the size of a walnut. Paris Chief Inspector Dreyfus (Kevin Kline in the role played brilliantly by Herbert Lom) decides to recruit France's most idiotic policeman to investigate. His plan is to take over from Clouseau after he fails and cover himself in glory.

Among the many suspects Clouseau rounds up for questioning are the beautiful pop superstar Xania (Beyonce Knowles, following ably and voluptuously in the stiletto-heeled footsteps of Claudia Cardinale and Elke Sommer), a dour Russian soccer trainer named Yuri (Henry Czerny) and everyone named "You," or in the case of Paris' Franco-Asian population, "Yu."



Clouseau (Steve Martin) and Ponton (Jean Reno) display a unique method of getting in shape.

Aiding Clouseau in his quest are primly sexy assistant Nicole (an enchanting Emily Mortimer of "Match Point") and a new sidekick. Gone is Clouseau's trusty kung-fu partner Cato (Burt Kwouk). His new associate is Ponton (French star Jean Reno), who drives Clouseau around in the inspector's comically miniscule Smart Car. Of course, the delightful animated credit sequence (by the animation house Kurtz & Friends) has returned and arguably continues to be worth the price of admission.

Like Blake Edwards' original films, this new one is a mix of slapstick hijinks, most of it involving ways in which Clouseau wreaks havoc wherever he goes (he is especially dangerous to French cyclists), Clouseau's inability to say English words such as "hamburger," gorgeous women and one-liners and double entendres. "Can't you see she's sexy," protests Clouseau when someone has the nerve to suspect the luscious Xania.

Directed by Shawn Levy ("Cheaper By the Dozen") and scripted by Len Blum ("Meatballs," "Stripes"), newcomer Michael Saltzman and Martin, the film falls short of the original's comic zaniness and cosmopolitan flair. But it's well-cast and silly enough to fill your lungs with laughing gas.

Of course, fans of Kline might suggest he would have made a fine Clouseau as well. But Martin is often inspired. His Clouseau thinks he can play good cop-bad cop by himself, is likely to have smoke pouring out of his pants and manages to make that cliche of present-day comedies, the fart joke, work.

Clive Owen makes a cameo appearance as Agent 006 and gives new 007 Daniel Craig a run for his money. Not much is made of the film's Paris setting outside of obligatory shots of the Eiffel Tower and Notre Dame, perhaps because Prague was used as a frequent stand-in. At the screening I attended, the film often looked murky and out of focus, perhaps a result of bad photography, bad processing, bad projection or all of the above.

But overall it's safe to say, Vive la "Panther."

Rated PG. "The Pink Panther" contains slapstick violence.

SUDDEN HEARING LOSS

If you experience a sudden hearing loss, the most likely culprit is a buildup of earwax. This problem can be reversed either with an over-the-counter treatment or the help of a physician. Hearing loss may occur in the middle ear in the event that the bones become frozen in place or lose contact with each other. This may occur as a result of infection, disease or head trauma. If the bones somehow become damaged as a result, they may no longer transmit vibrations to the inner ear. Another cause of sudden hearing loss in the middle ear is fluid filling the cavity due to a cold or changes in air pressure. All sudden hearing losses should be evaluated immediately.

One key element in addressing any hearing impairment includes complete hearing testing by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist to determine the type and degree of the individual's particular loss. This is the only way we can help that individual choose the most appropriate hearing instrument. State-of-the-art products, sophisticated testing equipment, and compassionate, personalized attention await you at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. Please stop by or call us at 781-337-1144. We also have an office in Abington. Visit us on the web at www.familyhearing.net.

P.S. Rather sudden hearing loss may also occur as a result of exposure to loud sound. If the exposure endures, the loss could become permanent.

Families pitch in for ailing pooch

Provide money for pet's surgery

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Dama Dow has been floored by an act of kindness.

On Wednesday, Feb. 15, Dow was the recipient of an unbelievable outpouring of love and support from 27 families while driving her Cohasset school bus route. With her beloved bull mastiff Brady scheduled to go in for surgery Friday, Dow was presented with a card filled with words of encouragement, and a $400 donation to help with the $2,800 bill.

"I talk about my dog like he's my other child," said Dow, adding she is constantly sharing stories about 4-year-old Brady and showing pictures. Recently, those stories have included Brady's upcoming tibial plateau leveling osteotomy surgery, which is essentially knee ligament surgery for dogs. "It's very common in big dogs," she said, adding Brady is roughly 140 pounds and hip to waist high on the average adult. "He's a big boy," she said.

Dow has been driving the same bus route in Cohasset for the past 13 years. "They're like my extended family," she said of the students she picks up each week, and their families. Last week, while she was stopping to pick up children on King Street, Jody Golden came running out of her house waving the card like a flag. Not having read the card, Dow assumed it included well-wishes for her dog, but never expected to see a $400 check enclosed.

"I'm still trying to get my jaw up off the floor," said Dow.

But not only was Dow stunned by the gesture of the 27 families who gave her the card, she was overwhelmed by the very generous offering of one very thoughtful Osgood student.

Second grade student Julia Stanganelli had been saving money in a piggy bank given to her by the Humane Society. Her family is on the organization's mailing list, and the piggy bank was sent to encourage children to save up their pennies and make a donation to their favorite shelter. For the past

State aid has net decrease

Local legislators try to explain why

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Most Massachusetts towns are currently in the throes of a budgetary crisis. Expenses are increasing, but many would say the state isn't doing enough to help cover the costs.

To help gain a better picture of what is happening at the state level in terms of local aid, Town Manager Bill Griffin invited Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley to Tuesday's Selectmen's meeting.

The two gave an update on Governor Mitt Romney's recommended fiscal 2007 local aid budget. They said the good news is that statewide, Romney increased Chapter 70 funding (school funds and state aid for public schools) by $164 million.

Honoring more recent veterans

New memorial being planned

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

On Nov. 11, 2006 the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee hopes to hold a special Veterans Day dedication for a monument built to honor those in town who have served our country in the armed forces.

Currently, the monument is in the planning stages, and Town Meeting will decide April 1 whether it would like to see the project move forward, when it votes on allocating half of the necessary funding, or roughly $60,000, to build the monument. Town Manager Bill Griffin said if the article passes, the funding would likely come from free cash, but the Community Preservation Committee has been contacted and Town

Volunteered to serve in the Army

Korean War soldier paid ultimate price

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset sent 164 men off to battle during the Korean War and 163 came home. For the town and those who knew and loved CPL C. David Strout, his loss was one too many.

Strout was born in Arlington, Mass., where he lived with his parents and his older brother, Stanley. His father, an executive at John Hancock Insurance, then moved the family to Weston where Stanley entered the service in World War II, and David attended Valley Forge Military Academy in Pennsylvania. David graduated from the school in 1947, and returned home to Massachusetts.

In June 1950, the Strout family moved again, this time to a home at 353 South Main St., in Cohasset. That November, David made the decision to follow in his brother's footsteps and enlist in the United States Army.

David spent time in Camp Polk, La. from November 1950 through January 1951. While there is no information regarding other assignments he had, he was ultimately deployed to Korea. History of the Korean War indicates the 279th Infantry, of which David was a member, was in the area about 10 miles west of the rubble piles of Chorwon — known as the "iron triangle," between Chorwon, Kumhwa, and Pyonggang, north of Seoul — at the time of David's death.

The 45th Division was the first National Guard Division to fight in Korea, and it arrived in Korea from Japan in the third week of December, 1951. Records indicate David was killed in action on Feb. 6, 1952 near Sungyang-ni, North Korea. He was just 23 years old.

David had been attached to the second platoon of Company L, 279th Infantry as a litter bearer. Differing records indicate his rank as either PFC or CPL. The second platoon was attacking hill "Old Baldy" when David was hit by mortar fragments in the back of his head and was killed instantly. His body was recovered and eventually shipped to the United States. When he was found, he was still wearing his Valley Forge Military Academy class ring.

David was buried in the Forest Hills Cemetery in Boston. However, in 1972, his remains were removed and sent to his mother in Sun City, Ariz., and inured with his father at Sunland Memorial Park and Crematory.

Stanley Strout remembers being at the family home in Cohasset the day he was notified by the Department of Defense that his brother had sacrificed his life for his country. He and his broth-

Election races ready to start

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

All residents, who pulled papers seeking positions in elected office, are now officially running. All nomination papers were returned on time, and the Town Clerk has certified the signatures, which means the races can officially begin.

The school committee has two open three-year seats, and four candidates are vying for the positions. Incumbent Rick Flynn of Summer Street will try to keep his seat, while Barbara Buckley, 272 N. Main St., Steven Fusco, 4 Surry Drive, and Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road will fight for spots on the board as well. Incumbent Pam Wilson is not seeking re-election.

Board of Selectmen incumbent Michael Sullivan is not running for re-election, and there are two residents competing to fill his seat — Edwin G. "Ted" Carr of 88 S. Main St., and Roger Q. Hill of 19A Highland Avenue.

Many seats in this year's election will be uncontested. Incumbent Peter Pratt is the only

One bid for Cook project

Bids for the Cook project were due Friday, Feb. 17 at 10 a.m. The town received one bid for $4,950,000 from the Weathervane Development Corp. of South Weymouth. Its proposal is for 45 single family homes, 12 of which would be affordable under state guidelines. There are no rental units included with the project. The company was scheduled to come before the Board of Selectmen Thursday, Feb. 23 after the Mariner went to press, to give a formal presentation of its project.

TOD language being ironed out

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"It's going to be a real shame if we can't find a way to make it happen."
— Peter Brown, Economic Development Committee

An article that would allow for the creation of a Transit Oriented District, dubbed TOD, surrounding the new Greenbush train station has been temporarily stalled in its tracks.

At a public hearing held by the Planning Board Wednesday, Feb. 22, the board agreed to continue the hearing on the proposed zoning article to its March 1 meeting, due to the fact that a compromise could not be reached on the language included in the article. The board will allow for 30 minutes of discussion March 1, and will then take a vote on the matter. The article is slated to come before the Board of Selectmen March 2.

The Economic Development Committee has been looking at ways for the town to grow its commercial tax base, which would help the town rely less on residential taxes for revenue. To that end, it has proposed establishing a TOD, which is an overlay district that would make it possible to have mixed-use development in a limited area surrounding the new train station. The TOD would also allow for more dense development than is allowed under current zoning.

With an overlay district, the underlying zoning remains in tact. Therefore, parcels incorporated in the TOD would not lose their status as light industry (on the north side of 3A) but would have the TOD has an alternative set of standards for development.

With Greenbush train service due to resume in mid-2007, construction on the station is now under way, and members of the Economic Development Committee say now is the right time to establish the district. EDC chairman Peter Brown said with approval to develop the TOD, "We could improve access points and have everything integrated" with the MBTA as construction progresses, and not after the fact.

Brown said mixed-use development would be a benefit to the town not only from a revenue standpoint, but because it will add more housing options in town. Rental units would be built with either one or two bedrooms on the upper levels, and because of its proximity to the train, would be geared toward young working professionals, rather than families with children. The businesses which would be located in the lower levels would also be geared toward commuters. He added that portion of Route 3A serves as a gateway to the town and allowing it to be developed in a visually appealing way would be an asset to the community.

However, while in concept members of the Planning Board might agree forming a TOD is a good idea, and most members seemed amenable to some suggested language changes, there were some points of contention. Members discussed the article for upwards of one hour before carrying the hearing over to another night.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy had the most concern regarding the language of the article, and specifically, what the procedure would be for a developer looking to build within the TOD. He wanted to ensure his board had a say in what was built through the site plan review process. He was also concerned with some of the language that allowed uses within a TOD "by right."

"This needs major revisions, then maybe it can come up again in the fall," he said.

However, Brown pointed out time is of the essence with MBTA construction already in progress. He said the EDC is willing to work with the board to change the language enough so that it will be acceptable to move forward. "I do believe if this doesn't come before Town Meeting in April, we're going to lose our chance. It's going to be a real shame if we can't find a way to make it happen," he said.

Town Counsel will be working on the wording of the article for the March 1 meeting in an effort to find a compromise which the Economic Development Committee and the Planning Board can agree on. The board will allow for 30 minutes of discussion on the article and will then take a vote whether to recommend it to Town Meeting, which will have the final say. For more information, please contact the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Protecting watershed is a priority

Town Meeting to address land issues

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting will vote on two Water Commission articles Saturday, April 1. Both deal with the land the commission has acquired to continue its mission of protecting the town's water supply.

The commission had proposed three articles for the Warrant, but one has since been withdrawn. The commission was given permission at the fall Special Town Meeting to work with the town of Scituate to acquire a parcel of land which would be mutually beneficial for watershed protection purposes. There had been some question as to whether the language in that article was adequate for the deal the towns are trying to make, and the article was put on the draft Annual Town Meeting Warrant as a placeholder. Town Counsel has since said he believes the wording is sufficient.

The two articles which will be taken up are fairly routine. Chairman Glenn Pratt explained the commission has been working to acquire land in the town's watershed, and at the Special Town Meeting, many acquisitions were approved. On that list were two parcels of land, which on the floor of Town Meeting were taken out of the article because the town thought it had already received permission to acquire them. Pratt said after Town Meeting, it was determined permission was not received and the parcels should have been voted on in the fall.

"This was included in the original appropriation, but we inadvertently took it off," said Pratt. "It was a mistake."

Pratt said with Town Meeting's permission, the commission will purchase the two parcels of land, located deep in Whitney Woods, for roughly $170,000 using funds previously appropriated by Town Meeting.

The second article would authorize the Board of Selectmen to amend easements located over land which has been acquired by the Water Commission. The easements are currently granted to National Grid, and Pratt said the company has asked that the easements be widened to allow it better access. Pratt said the easements are roughly 30 to 50 feet wide right now, and National Grid would like to have 100 foot easements.

Pratt said Town Counsel has said the best way to change the easement is to have the Board of Selectmen grant the company a license for the additional footage because otherwise, the town would need to pass a Home Rule Petition, which would in turn need to be approved by the Legislature.

The board asked Pratt to get in touch with Town Counsel to ensure the wording would not allow any building on the easements and that they would only be used for access.

Census forms should be returned

The Town Census for 2006 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2006. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2005 license. If you did not receive your census, call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100.

New military monument to honor more recent veterans

Counsel is ruling on whether the project qualifies for a Community Preservation Fund grant.

Chairman of the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt said a new monument would be built in Veteran's Park on Cohasset Harbor, which would be dedicated to those who served in the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Currently, Veteran's Park has two monuments which list the names of all who served from the Civil War up to World War II. Pratt said this new monument would be the perfect way to honor the men and women who served or are serving in the country's more recent wars.

The landscaping and layout of Veteran's Park would change to feature the new, centrally located memorial. The monument would be circular, and sunken into the ground. "It will be recessed so it will not block the view of the harbor," said Pratt, adding from the ground up, it will be roughly 16 inches tall on the outside, and 22 inches tall on the inside. It would have a diameter of 28 feet, and the outside portion, which would be visible from the street, would be made of fieldstone. The monument will also feature a big flagpole in the center of the circle. There is currently a flag pole in Veteran's Park, but this would be slightly larger and more prominent, said Pratt.

"It will be recessed so it will not block the view of the harbor."

— Glenn Pratt, Veterans Memorial Committee

There would be a gently sloping walkway that will bring visitors down into the inside of the circle where the actual honor roll wall will be located. The inside walls of the circle will be made of gray granite and beveled to allow for easy reading of the names for all who have served. Pratt estimated there are roughly 168 names from the Korean War, 243 from Vietnam, 19 from the Gulf War, and 38 from the War on Terror.

Pratt said Tutela Engineering has completed the engineering for the project. He said engineering was vital for the area, as it used to serve as the site of the old fire station. Pratt said test pits were dug to ensure the land was "all set to go."

There will be drainage on the site and Pratt said his group has been in contact with the various garden clubs to ensure the plants that are planned for the site are acceptable. He said veterans groups in town are very happy about the prospect of a monument.

Pratt said with the blessing of Town Meeting, the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee will begin soliciting donations for the other $60,000 necessary to complete the project. He said he hopes construction will be ready to begin after the Memorial Day parade.

The most important aspect of the memorial will be ensuring all names of those who served are included and that the spelling is correct. Pratt said anyone who went into active service from a Cohasset address is eligible to have his or her name included on the monument, and being deployed is not a requirement.

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is collecting names for those who have served in the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror. The most current lists of names can be found on the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com. To add a name to any of the lists, or to correct a name, please contact Chairman Glenn Pratt at info@cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Legislators explain why town ends up with net decrease in state aid

Cohasset is likely to receive $1,356,399 for fiscal 2007, which is an increase of $135,776, or 11.1 percent, over its fiscal 2006 allocation.

Other positive news included the fact that Romney is proposing to uncap the $150 million in lottery fund diversion, sending the total amount to cities and towns in fiscal 2007. The fiscal 2006 budget included a plan to uncap the lottery surplus to cities and towns over a four-year period, with 100 percent of the surplus being paid out in fiscal 2009. For Cohasset, lottery aid is projected at $468,094, which is an increase of $63,164 or 15.6 percent over the fiscal 2006 allocation.

Romney is also proposing a total of $90 million statewide for education reform, and Cohasset stands to receive an additional $94,149.

Bradley and Hedlund also pointed out Cohasset could gain more local aid through a housing incentive program. Romney has recommended $30 million be distributed to those cities and towns that demonstrate an increase in dwelling units of at least 1 percent over the number of housing units in place as of Jan. 1, 2006. For Cohasset, that could mean an extra $11,944.

Romney has also proposed level funding additional assistance for fiscal 2007, which would mean Cohasset will again receive $166,099.

While at first glance it would appear Cohasset will potentially receive $3.9 million in state aid, Bradley and Hedlund were the bearers of bad news as well. Cohasset's fiscal 2007 state assessments are increasing by $239,277. The majority of the increase is the result of a 39.3 percent increase, or $214,124, in Cohasset's share of retired teacher's health insurance.

The way retired teacher's health insurance works is that each participating municipality is assessed for the governmental share of health and life insurance premiums paid on behalf of its teacher retirees by the state. The state pays 90 percent of the total premium, and the retiree's co-payment is 10 percent of the total premium. The retiree also pays full payment for catastrophic illness coverage. Town Manager Bill Griffin said while teachers are working in the school system, the town pays 69 percent of the total premium, and once they retire, that jumps up to 90 percent.

Bradley and Hedlund said for now, the bottom line for Cohasset is, based on cherry sheets alone (minus offsets) Cohasset will likely see a net decrease in state aid of $32,119 from fiscal 2006 to fiscal 2007.

Selectmen were not impressed with the level of funding the state will be dolling out. Selectman Michael Sullivan said state aid has been on a decline and it is greatly affecting the town's schools. "We're eroding our educational system," he said, as the only way to help offset the cost of running a school district is to increase taxes through Prop. 2-1/2 overrides. "Unless we ask for overrides every year, we're going to go backwards."

Sullivan added Cohasset currently has 45 students in their junior and senior year at Cohasset High School who are taking study halls because there is not enough staff to offer additional classes. He said to say Cohasset should look at the positives in Romney's budget is ridiculous, as "year after year, it's the same situation and it keeps getting worse."

"We're failing our kids," he said.

Hedlund said part of the problem in his view is the fact that there are votes being taken to spend money on items that are not priorities. "We're blowing a huge surplus on junk," he said, adding votes were recently taken at the state level to spend a huge amount of money on hosting the women's Final Four basketball tournament at the Fleet Center. "I don't see any lobbying ever that we should be spending less," he said.

Hedlund said there is only so much money to go around and in his opinion, much is being spent in "an abusive and wasteful way."

Bradley added there is a problem with accountability as larger cities have in the past, perhaps during election years, taken surplus funds and handed out huge pay raises to teachers, police, and firefighters, which have been as high as 8 or 9 percent. "While you're out here fighting for 1 or 2 percent."

Sullivan said in Cohasset, residents cannot keep voting in favor of overrides every year and many are frustrated they have been asked so many times already. "What do we do?" he asked.

"You have to insist that your legislators have the right priorities because the money is there. Don't let anyone tell you it isn't," Hedlund replied.

The House and Senate will release their own budgets in April and May, with a final budget adopted in June.

candidate for one open five-year seat on the Planning Board. Sewer Commissioner John Beck will run uncontested to retain his seat, as will Lisa LoJacono for the Recreation Commission. Peggy Chapman of the Board of Health, Water Commissioner John McNabb, and Assessor Michael C. Patrolia are all running uncontested as well.

There are three candidates for the three open seats on the Board of Library Trustees, and incumbents Patience Towle and Agnes McCann will seek re-election with Elizabeth Baker campaigning for the third seat.

Susan Sardina, 271 S. Main St., is the only candidate for the one open five-year seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Friday, March 10 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, April 1, and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 8.

Village overlay article withdrawn

An article that would have formed an overlay district in the village has been withdrawn from the Town Meeting Warrant. The article would have allowed for mixed-use buildings, meaning businesses would operate on the first floor, but residential units would be a possibility for upper levels.

The planning board voted unanimously to withdraw the article Wednesday, due largely in part to the fact there is not enough sewer capacity to handle additional residences. Vice Chairman Peter Pratt said he had been in contact with the Sewer Commission which stated there are 18 connections left in the entire Central Sewer District, and to give the hookups to new units in the village while there are residents who have been waiting is not fair and could cause litigation against the town. He said the Sewer Commission is willing to work with the Planning Board to see if a resolution could be found, but that will take time. "I think it is irresponsible for us to pull the trigger on something that will create a land rush for sewer capacity that doesn't exist," Pratt said.

Pratt added the article as written does not provide any provisions to preserve the character of the village, such as façade protection. "Shame on us if in three to six years Cohasset Village looks like Scituate Harbor," he said. With some work, the article could come before voters in the fall.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WONDERFUL DONATION

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone who had a February vacation has enjoyed it so far and will close out the week with a bang.

I had the pleasure of talking with Dama Dow, a local bus driver for the town and what a story she had to tell. Her beloved dog, Brady had surgery last week and many of her families on her bus route all pitched in and presented her with a check to help defray the costs. Along with this wonderful donation, one little girl in particular made a huge donation both in dollar amount and heart.

Julia Stanganelli gave Dama her piggy bank filled with money to help with Brady. What a great thing to do Julia, I know that your family is so proud of you and your town is to. Dama and her family, especially Brady send a huge thank you to all who helped.

NEW BABY BOY

A 7 lb. 7 oz. baby boy was born to Jody and Stacey Kehoe on Feb. 13. His two big sisters Sarah and Samantha are so excited about him along with his grandmothers Shirley Kehoe of Cohasset and Joyce Olsen of Hingham. His name is Jody Jr. and is surrounded by love.

Congratulations to all on this wonderful new addition to your family.

CABARET AU CHOCOLAT!

What do the names Game, Tebbetts, Haber, Kovach, Sceery, and Norman have in common? The South Shore's Choral Arts Society, conducted by Danica A. Buckley, and composed of your neighbors and local friends from many South Shore towns who love to sing. The choral group, will hold its the first annual Cabaret au Chocolat, a delightful evening of music, merriment, snacks, wine and chocolate from your favorite sources. Saturday March 18, 7:30 p.m. at St Mary's Parish Center, Scituate Harbor. Tickets are limited and are available at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset, Front Street Book Shop, 88 Front St. in Scituate, and from choir members. $20. per person, $160. per table of 8 in advance. $25 per person at the door, space permitting. For information call Paul at 781-585-8910.

The choral arts society is a non-profit organization and proceeds will be used to support the society's concerts and the scholarship fund. The spring concert is set for Saturday May 6, a marvelous program of music by composers who composed in Vienna, including Mozart, Schubert, Beethoven and Hayden. But don't wait until may to hear good tunes. Join us March 18 for fun, sweets, and songs. This will be a wonderful way to get ready for Spring and enjoy some beautiful music, great food and good friends.

BC HIGH HONORS

Boston College High School announced that Alexander Hunt, class of 2007; Thomas Chase, class of 2008; Kyle DeSisto, Evan Richardson and Eric Vanderpool, all class of 2009, achieved high honors for the second quarter. Michael Pecca, class of 2006; Alan Kershaw and Alexander Shipp, class of 2008 all received honors. Great work boys, keep it up.

DEAN'S LIST

Cohasset resident, Alicia Sanchez, a sophomore has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Salve Regina. This is super news Alicia and your family and friends are all so proud of your hard work.

Keep it up. That is all the news for this week. Send in any news, vacation stories, upcoming birthdays and more no later than Tuesday by 5 p.m.

IT'S HAPPENING

Family Square Dance at First Parish

First Parish in Cohasset, a Unitarian Universalist congregation, will host its 2nd annual Family Square Dance on Sunday, March 5, from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Parish House on Cohasset Common. Beth Parkes, a caller well-known throughout New England, will be accompanied by her band of a fiddler and piano. The event is open to all ages and levels, especially beginners. Parkes and her group will explain square dancing basics. Cocoa, hot cider, and cookies will be served. Cost is $10 per person, $20 entire family. Tickets may be purchased in advance by calling, 781-383-1100, or at the door.

Lifeguards sought

Cohasset Swim Center is accepting applications for lifeguard and water safety instructor positions for the 2006 summer season Both positions require Lifeguard, CPR, and First Aid Certification. Programs to become a certified lifeguard will be offered throughout the region during the winter and spring. Lifeguard applicants must be at least 15 years old. Water safety instructors must be at least 17 years old and enjoy working and swimming with children. To apply, send a letter of interest by April 15 to Cohasset Swim Center, P.O. Box 132, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information email cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net.

Book signing at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will host a book signing by Jennifer Grisdale Krieger, formerly of Cohasset, on Sunday, March 5, 2-4 p.m., at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street.

"What? No Spaghetti and Meatballs?!? A charming collection of stories and musings about everyday life in a culturally diverse family," is about a proper Bostonian who marries a "good Jewish boy from Brooklyn," with an older sister who married an Italian Catholic.

"I look at this book as one of those Prevention Magazines," Krieger says. "You know what I mean: turn to page 71 for tips on how to find True Love, or page 62 to learn how life really relates to football."

Krieger is an award-winning journalist and non-fiction writer, but most importantly, she is a mother, and a staunch advocate of the family unit (La Famiglia!). If you like Dave Barry or Erma Bombeck, you will enjoy her talk. For more information, please call the Society at 781-383-1434, or email at cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Dance benefits homeless

The fourth annual Valentine's Fund Dance to benefit Bread&Jams Self-Advocacy Center for the homeless will be held on the evening of Feb. 25 from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor. Great dance music will be provided by the Pemberton All-Stars, hors d'ouevres provided by the Atlantica staff, and works from local artist including Donna Green are available for silent auction along with items from local merchants and restaurants.

This year's homeless census showed a 10 percent increase in the greater Boston area, especially in homeless families. Creative black tie, which means more creative than black tie. A $20 donation is gratefully accepted, as all music and food are donated and all proceeds go directly to Bread&Jams, Inc.

For dinner reservations, call Atlantica at 781-383-0900. For more information on the benefit, or to donate items for auction, call 781-383-6568. Dances are the answer to the February mid-winter blues.

Digital camera class

South Shore Community Center announces a new class offering designed to appeal to beginners with digital camera. For those who have recently purchased a digital camera or are thinking about doing so, this class is a must.

Laura Sinclair, local professional photographer and digital photo enthusiast, will lead the class in demonstrating the marvelous capabilities of the amazing digital camera. Students are encouraged to bring their own camera and manual to class for individual attention. Sinclair will discuss how digital cameras relate to computers, pixels, resolution, and storage and battery systems. Other topics will cover downloading photos and printing options, as well as editing techniques.

Classes are held at South Shore Community Center, 3 No. Main St., on two Tuesday evenings, March 14 and 21, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Fee is $49. Call 781-383-00988 or stop by the center Monday through Friday to register.

Question of the Week

The School Committee and Board of Selectmen races promise to perk up the April 8 Town Election.

Rick Flynn, 30 Summer St.; Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road; Barbara Buckley, 272 N. Main St.; and Steve Fusco, 4 Surry Drive are in a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee. Flynn is seeking a third term and incumbent Pam Wilson is not seeking reelection.

Roger Hill, 19A Highland Ave. and Ted Carr, 88 S. Main St., are in a two-way race for one seat on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Michael Sullivan is not seeking reelection.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates in contested races.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies. There is no word limit on formal announcements but if the text is overly long, it could be held a week for space reasons.

Starting next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

The following is the first Question of the Week for the School Committee candidates:

• The school system is talking about an override of at least $1 million to keep the district moving forward. With a failed override last year, and the town's history of passing substantially smaller overrides, is this a wise move?

The following is the first Question of the Week for the Board of Selectmen candidates:

• Given the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2, how can the Town reconcile its needs to deliver services provided by employees (teachers, police, fire, public works, etc.) when salaries and benefits are the largest line items in the budget and rise faster than 2-1/2 percent per year?

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words) per week, from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or short statements on issues.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Who created the snow budget?

TO THE EDITOR:

Regarding the Feb. 26 article, "Powdery white snow pushes cleanup budget into the red," I must admit that I'm completely baffled. In what has been an extraordinarily mild winter by any reasonable person's standards, and with a very modest amount of snowfall prior to the storm of Feb. 12, the article cites Cohasset as having just been within its budgeted snow and ice spending limits prior to this storm and that Feb. 12 pushed this line item well into a deficit.

One has no choice but to wonder who created this budget in the first place? Have our elected officials included anyone with true financial planning expertise in the budget creation process? Have these individuals (assuming they exist) lived in Florida for the past few decades? This is Massachusetts! Snow falls here every winter.

Last year should have provided a wake-up call that we never know when our snow season is going to be particularly severe, yet the creators of our town budget appear to have decided instead to plan for a balmy winter with orders of magnitude less snow than is normal. Is it any wonder that come time for our Town Meeting, we the taxpayers are always asked for a Proposition 2-1/2 override? It seems that the school system always takes the blame for poor fiscal management at these meetings, but maybe we should be casting a closer eye toward the rest of the town's activities as well.

Ironically, this same issue of the Mariner contained the article "Selectmen weigh in on budget issues," in which the school committee was asked to go through an exercise in which its budget was "only" allowed a 3 percent increase. While the school committee is going through this budgetary exercise "reluctantly," a smart and efficient town would force the school committee to keep to this limit. Additionally, the rest of our town's public spending should be held to similar controls. Only by setting a precedent (as voters did in finally preventing the "annual" override request last year) and sticking to it will we ever teach our elected officials that it is their job to push back on spending requests, suppliers, special interests, etc. in order to maintain a system of acceptable annual tax increases.

Without responsible and accountable financial representatives in this town's planning process, our tax bills will continue to rise at an inexcusable rate. Worse, what will happen when we hit the inevitable economic downtown? Where will the buck stop then?

CHS artists honored

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset High School Art Department and the Cohasset Arts Boosters are proud to announce that several students were selected to receive the prestigious Boston Globe Scholastic Art Award. Among those chosen to represent Cohasset were Caitlin Hurley, Amanda Thompson, Sarah Malone, Katharine Murphy, and John Burgoon.

Award winners were Kathleen DeWaal and John Rohrer who both received a Silver key for their artwork. John Rohrer also received an Honorable Mention for one of his photographs. Emily Bertovich, Christine Corr, and Colin Quinlan also received Honorable Mentions.

Gold and Silver Key winners will be exhibited for the entire month at the Mass. Transportation Building at Park Place in Boston. Congratulations! We are all very proud of these students for their hard work and achievements.

3 percent not grounded in reality

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

It has been disconcerting to read of the general ignorance of the financial problems facing our school system by some of our public officials on the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee. Although one has come to expect that certain members of the general public either do not understand the issues or choose not to try to understand them one would expect a higher standard from our elected and appointed public officials both as to their knowledge of the issues and their willingness to be open-minded.

In addition, one would expect that those who sit on the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen, even if they are not experts on school budget matters, would at least understand that the school budget is far more complex and variable than any other town department budget. Moreover, one also would hope that our town officials would realize that simplistic statements and solutions have no place in a serious discussion about the school budget.

As Selectman Rob Spofford pointed out, about 80 percent of the school budget is related to salaries. Thus, even someone with no knowledge of the school budget, once confronted with that fact, would realize that failure to keep up with the annual necessary increases in the school budget will result in layoffs of teachers. Sure, perhaps we could eliminate the entire athletic program to avoid layoffs and "keep the money in the classroom." Moreover, such solutions do not address the long term problem. Eliminating sports, for example, might save layoffs this year, but where do we cut next year?

It also has been distressing to read of the back-and-forth over the past few weeks about the insistence the School Committee present a so-called "balanced budget" to conform to some pre-set notion of an overall balanced budget for the town. Although conceptually it is understandable why the Town Manager wants it this way, this idea too, is not grounded in reality.

The notion that the School Department should have a "balanced budget" within the limit of a

Electrification and other Greenbush matters

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

OOPS ... Last week we gave an incorrect date for the closure of Hull Street (Route 228) for construction of this railroad crossing. It is planned for closure Feb. 27th at the earliest.

The photo shows the progress that has been made constructing the ramp on the North Main Street side of the Rocky Lane bridge. This part of the structure is really nearing completion. The finished height of the bridge is now readily apparent.

We might also add that the bridge will be a small bit higher than is really needed to provide clearance above the diesel locomotives that will be used on the Greenbush system. The reason is that all overhead structures have been designed to clear overhead wires and other equipment necessary should the line ever be electrified.

But, another piece of background is important to know about electrification. When the Greenbush was in the planning stages, a number of residents questioned why Greenbush was designed as diesel rather that electric. Electric seemed to be so much more environmentally friendly. Why couldn't the Greenbush be electric? The reason is that the trackage from Quincy into Boston is common among the two other legs of the MBTA's southeastern commuter rail system. Not only that, but they share common train equipment. And, these lines were already in operation. This means that if the Greenbush line were to be electrified, the other two lines (Middleboro/Lakeville and Plymouth/Kingston) would also need to be electrified at the same time. The total cost to add electrification to this three legged rail network plus, the change-out of all locomotives was just too great an expense. Perhaps, at some time in the future we'll see electrification, but not now.

The Rocky Lane bridge has been designed to clear overhead wires and other equipment necessary should the line ever be electrified.

Village chaos

This past fall, into the start of winter the downtown area of the village was the location of lots of construction. There are four separate construction projects that are underway, or have been underway in the village. We thought it might be of interest to tell you a little bit about each of these.

• Cohasset Water Department – This fall, the Cohasset Water Department undertook a construction project to replace all of the lateral water lines to all buildings in the downtown. This was certainly a prudent move. Imagine the mess of tearing up newly constructed streets and sidewalks to replace these water lines. All of the Revitalization work would be in vain and useless. This work started after Labor Day and concluded in October. The Water Department also has work underway on Pond Street and further South on South Main Street.

• Cohasset Village Revitalization – This project has a very checkered past and took a very long time to coalesce so that construction could begin. The revitalization project initially meant different things to different people and in the eyes of some it may have turned Cohasset Village into Disney Land North. Now, it is a very streamlined project that only replaces the existing street, curbs and sidewalk infrastructure with new materials, but of similar design to what is there now.

One bit of construction that is necessary and adds to the mess in the village is the restoration of stormwater drainage in downtown. This includes the storm drain grates and catch basins, drain manholes and, in some cases the pipes that interconnect them. These structures are all in the streets and digging them is a messy affair and the temporary patching that was put in place during the winter has made travel in the village a rough affair.

This March, Revitalization will restart. Rock removal for the widened sidewalk below St. Stephen's on South Main Street will be completed. The drainage will be finished, and curbs, streets and sidewalks will be replaced. The sidewalks and streets will be asphalt and the curbing will be granite. Unfortunately, this construction will also be disruptive for both residents and businesses alike. We wish there was a way to accomplish this construction without impact. But, that is impossible by definition. Our goal is to get this work finished before start of the summer. In fact, our contractors must be finished by the end of May.

• MBTA – Of course it is evident that the MBTA is constructing a train through the village. The crossing closures at Sohier Street, Pleasant Street, and Pond Street all have repercussions to village traffic. As you know, Pleasant and Sohier streets are currently under construction. When Pleasant Street is completed, Smith Place will be closed. This spring work should start on Pond Street and the crossing at the Golf Club on North Main Street. But, we don't have start dates for these crossings yet. Each of these construction areas will impact our residents, depending on where they live and the season.

• Other – You may have noticed that there is also construction activity around St. Stephen's Church in the center of the village. Essentially, this project includes a columbarium area around the church overlooking the village and access improvements to the building entrance from Highland Avenue. This work from the village side is essentially complete. You may have noticed construction equipment and materials stored and accessed from the corner of the Common, across from the South Shore Community Center.

As we mentioned last week, please continue to patronize our village merchants. We need a strong, viable business downtown. You can help.

HEALTH NOTES

Getting to the bottom of stormwater runoff

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last September, the Town submitted grant requests totaling nearly a $100,000 to upgrade some of the infrastructure which controls stormwater runoff into our waters. Health Notes at that time indicated that the Town had made significant progress in developing a consensus by groups with different objectives including the Health of the Harbor Committee and the Water Resource Protection Committee, the Conservation Commission and the Greenbush coordinators (known as the Greenbush Gang).

Before Christmas, the Department of Coastal Zone Management of the EOEA awarded the grants and Cohasset received a grant or $45,000 to plan stormwater remediation for stormwater systems in the Town center which enter the harbor through tide gates at the veteran's park near the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

Briefly the grant is comprised of three parts.

• Support of a Watershed Academy under the aegis of Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR). This organization will provide the backbone of any assessment activities needed to support evidence of pollution reported to Town officials. The data will be confirmed by strict oversight and validity sampling by a Board of Health representative and State certified labs.

• The second part of the grant will cover an evaluation of the waters entering Jacobs Meadow. These consist of several sub watersheds covering parts of south Cohasset including much of the Pond Street hills, Ellms Meadow and James Brook. Water samples will be taken over much of the center of Town and recommendations made to provide means for managing stormwater overflows as occurred several times last summer.

• Based on findings from the assessment activities, the Town will select sites for remediation and develop a plan for stormwater treatment of each site including engineering calculations and estimates.

The first phase of work will involve a compilation of available information, and development of a so-called Quality Assurance Program Plan, a roadmap for accomplishing the work. A previous storm water mapping program has identified most drainage structures within the town; however, detailed information regarding the structures and their overall connectivity still needs further definition.

The Cohasset DPW will conduct cleaning of catch basin structures and assist with facility inspection. Five engineering firms were requested to bid to provide technical oversight for the field evaluation efforts, generate an updated drainage plan for the sub-basin and coordinate volunteer assessment activities. Once the drainage system has been verified relative to extent and location, a sampling program will be devised to appropriately assess pollution influences.

It is currently anticipated that three sampling events will be conducted: one during dry weather and two during wet weather. Testing is anticipated to be conducted for dissolved oxygen, salinity, oil/grease, total nitrogen, fecal coliform, enterococcus, conductivity, temperature and acidity. The CSCR will utilize the volunteer efforts of area high school students to conduct system inspection, sample collection and to conduct some of the laboratory analysis. Work will be supervised by the Board of Health with technical input from the successful bidder for the engineering work: Coughlin Environmental Services.

Hopefully, the work now being proposed to the DEP through the department of Coastal Zone Management will allow the Town to begin its Townwide Stormwater Plan. The plan will require participation of many private citizens and considerable resources, but the Town has always solved such problems before when there's a need.

Much till needs to be done, but the work covered by this grant will go far toward implementing planning for activities crucial to the cleanup of Cohasset Harbor which has been labeled by CZM as an endangered estuary and for which the Board of Health has been seeking help for six years. Thanks to a new awareness by many in Town, perhaps because Bassing Beach was closed to swimmers for most of last summer, many in Town are coming to a recognition that something needs to be done about the condition of our coastal water bodies, a condition which is sure to worsen without the care, concern and participation by those using them.

The Olympics nobody watched

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I know folks who can tell you where they were and what they were doing on Feb. 24, 1980, when a team of American college kids won the gold medal for hockey in the Olympic games at Lake Placid.

I also know folks who can't tell you that the winter games are going on right now in Turin, Italy, and they don't much care. For all I know they may even be the same people who chanted "U-S-A! U-S-A!" for Jim Craig. Dave Silk, et al, 26 years ago.

What has happened to the Olympics we used to stay up late to watch?

Have you ever seen an event like the Winter Olympics of 2006 take such a dive in popularity, particularly on television where NBC paid millions of dollars for rights that may have turned out to be not worth giving away.

The last I saw, the Olympics on NBC, CNBC and MSNBC had been knocked out of the box by the Fox Channel's "American Idol." The best in the world had been beaten solidly by, as those who have watched the program can attest, the worst in the world.

What has happened to the Olympics we used to stay up late to watch?

For one thing, there's no dramatic confrontations anymore now that the Soviet Union has been broken up, leaving Kazakhstan with a world class hockey team and scattering Russians throughout the National Hockey League where they are viewed nightly in your living room.

What we need is a bobsled team from Iran or ice dancers from Saudi Arabia to get the old Cold War juices flowing again.

Many of the sports in the Winter Olympics are so obscure that they appear in print or on TV only once every four years. Quick now, who are John Schuster, Joe Polo, Shawn Rojeski and Pete Fenson? Why, they're the American men's curling team.

Curling is like bocce on ice with one man scaling the rock while a man with a broom frantically sweeps the ice in front of it for what reason I've never quite figured out. MSNBC devoted three hours of air time to it on Sunday night.

Me, I'm watching a "Mr. Ed" marathon on TV Land.

There are no stars in these Olympics, too, and the rules that govern viewership say there has to be a beautiful, shapely, young American female contesting for the gold in figure skating. Think Nancy Kerrigan, Tenley Albright, Peggy Fleming, Dorothy Hamill.

Figure skating is one of those sports that relies on judges, not goals or times, to choose a winner and judging took a hit in the 2002 Winter games in Salt Lake City when a French judge admitted fixing the ice dancing competition to assure Russian winners.

Olympic athletes are viewed with as much suspicion as Barry Bonds when the subject of performance-enhancing drugs comes up. Only the other day, members of the Austrian team were routed out of bed in the early morning hours in the search for drugs.

Olga Pyleva, a member of the Russian biathlon team, was kicked out of the Olympic village when she turned up with a stimulant called carphedon in her test. Believe me, a biathloner who skis and shoots a rifle needs no stimulation.

Think of what they did to poor old Dick Cheney and he only had a beer for lunch.

Border collies confined to owners' property

ACO Murphy, victims testify

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"You put far more priority on satisfying the needs of the dogs than the safety of the human beings who live in your neighborhood."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

A group of nine border collies is under "house arrest" until further notice.

At a hearing held Thursday, Feb. 16, Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's dog hearing officer, listened to testimony from four residents who have been threatened by the border collies, owned by Meadow Lane residents Mia and John Dean. In three of the cases, the victims were bitten by one or more of the dogs.

Until selectmen — who will take the matter up Feb. 28 — issue a ruling, Griffin said all nine of the dogs must remain on the Dean property at all times. He said the dogs must also be on a leash when they leave the house, even though they will be on their owners' property.

"I'm not going to expose any residents of the town to danger," Griffin said.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said all four victims requested the matter come before the town to prevent further incidents.

Murphy said on Aug. 25 resident Donald Staszko was out for a morning walk, when six of the border collies circled him and started nipping at his feet. Staszko was then bit on his calf, and was left with a puncture wound that required treatment from the fire department. Staszko, who did not attend the hearing but had provided written account to Murphy, said John Dean was not with the dogs during the incident, but arrived and took charge of the dogs roughly 5 minutes later.

Murphy issued a 10-day quarantine, which is standard with a dog bite to allow the time for the offending dog to show signs of rabies. At the time of the Stazsko incident, only four of the Deans' seven dogs were vaccinated against rabies. Murphy also said the dogs needed to be re-licensed and issued a mandate on re-licensing the dogs by April 1.

Murphy said resident Claire Barnum had provided him a written account of her Dec. 17 incident, and stated she went into Village Greenery on Pleasant Street, owned by Mia and John Dean's daughter Alida. Barnum was half-way through the door when she paused because Alida Dean and her sister Erica, who had brought two of the dogs down to the shop, asked her a question. One of the dogs was being held by the collar while the other one was unrestrained. Barnum said she could not hear the question because both women were speaking at the same time and the restrained dog was making noise. She asked a second and a third time for the women to repeat the question when the unrestrained dog leapt at her and bit her thigh, tearing her jeans. Barnum quickly backed out the door while the dog leapt at her again.

Alida Dean then came out to help Barnum, who was given some first aid supplies by the Windsor Tea Shop. When Barnum asked Dean what she and her sister had been asking her, Dean said they were asking if she had any small children because the dogs were not used to children.

On Friday, Jan. 20, Mary Hartshorne, a 77-year-old resident "was accosted on trails close to the Dean property," Murphy said. Hartshorne had been out for a walk, when suddenly she was faced with two dogs circling her, followed by four more. Murphy said the dogs then began jumping on Hartshorne and tugging at her pant legs. Some started biting at the backs of her legs and tore her pants. The dogs were pushing and pulling, which caused her to fall into a mud puddle and she broke her wrist trying to brace herself. A whistle then could be heard from the direction of the house and the dogs ran home. Hartshorne was able to pull herself up and walked home.

"This put her in fear of her life," said Murphy about Hartshorne's incident. "Based on that, I felt the situation was at a point where I needed to take action." He issued another 10-day quarantine for the dogs and requested the hearing.

While the dogs were under quarantine, another call came in. Kearin Lewis, who lives next door to the Dean family, reported she had been outside with her two dogs when the Dean dogs came running up and in the commotion, Lewis became tangled in her dog's leash and fell. When John Dean heard the commotion, he whistled for his dogs and they left.

Each victim also had the opportunity to testify. Barnum brought the jeans she had on when she was attacked at the Village Greenery, and displayed a large tear, roughly 2-1/2 inches wide, which stretched down the top portion of the thigh. "I had my 7 year-old and my 11-year-old with me, so I guess I'm lucky I walked in the door first," she said.

Hartshorne said she immediately recognized the dogs as being border collies. She said when the dogs approached her, they began nipping at her, like they would when guiding sheep. She said as soon as she hit the ground, she heard a whistle, and at once, the dogs retreated and ran off to the house.

Lewis, the Deans' neighbor, said it has become fairly routine for her to come outside and soon be surrounded by a pack of dogs. She has called the Deans roughly 10 times asking them to call the dogs back to their house. She added there have been times when someone trying to make a delivery to her home will call her from the driveway because they cannot get out of their truck .

The owners' side

The Deans have nine dogs, ranging in age from 8 years old to roughly 6 months old.

"As they have matured, they are becoming more like teenagers," John Dean said. "They are more unruly, more recalcitrant. In the last 6 or 7 months, three have become more problematic in terms of pushing the envelope," he said.

He noted the dog that bit Staszko was pregnant and ready to deliver a litter and that may have attributed to her aggressive behavior. Dean was with the dogs when Staszko was bitten, but said the incident happened before he could call the dogs off.

He said at the Village Greenery, his daughter's shop, it was possible the noise of the door startled the dog and caused it to lunge at Barnum.

The day of the Hartshorne incident, he heard the barks and knew something was going on and called the dogs back to the house when he heard the commotion. He said he did not see Hartshorne fall, and if he had, he would have come down to help her.

Dean explained because the dogs are sheep herders by nature, if they're idle for too long, such as when they are quarantined, they tend to get very antsy. "They're herding dogs who need a job," he said, adding they are intelligent and easy to train, but they do require lost of exercise. He suggested they try to decrease the number of dogs they own, and separate them from each other, as the younger ones tend to excite the entire pack.

"We know there is an issue with controlling the dogs, and we regret the incidents which have happened," Dean said, adding he would ask the Town Manager recommend to the Board of Selectmen that the dogs be put on probation while he and his family work to better train them.

However, Griffin said the threats which have come forward are very serious. "Under law, I have a range of sanctions which run from issuing a fine to having the dogs destroyed. I would prefer not to order to have them destroyed, but I'm not hearing much on what you're going to do to be proactive," he said.

Griffin then asked Dean whether the dogs are leashed when they go outside. Dean replied during the quarantine periods, they have been, but normally, even when walking on conservation land, they are not. He said the dogs need to run free and get a lot of exercise.

"You put far more priority on satisfying the needs of the dogs than the safety of the human beings who live in your neighborhood," said Griffin, adding if he was to recommend placing a restriction on the dogs as punishment, Dean was not giving him any reason to believe he would comply. "You will not be given the option to train (the dogs) because someone could die. Someone could have already died," he said.

Dean said he would be willing to build a kennel on his property to help handle the dogs. He said that would not only help ensure the dogs are securely confined, but it would help separate the dogs to break up the "pack mentality." Griffin said that was a good start, and asked when the kennel could be built. Dean replied, "When the ground thaws."

Griffin pointed out every time the dogs run out of his control "they're breaking the law." However, Dean reiterated that border collies are runners by nature. "These are not Labrador retrievers. To leash a dog like this is inhumane," Dean said.

Griffin said it appeared Dean did not understand the severity of what has transpired. He also said Dean came to Town Hall the day of the hearing to re-license the dogs, after he was told to do so last August. "I would have thought that would have been done long before," Griffin said.

At that point Mia Dean, John's wife, spoke to the incidents. She said she is the owner and the breeder of the dogs and that her husband and children help her. She said they live on a large portion of land that abuts conservation property and has been in her husband's family for many years. She said the dogs have a large field where they can run, but they also like to take walks on the conservation land nearby. "Instinctually, they love to run, but they're not mean by nature. They, in play, have jumped on me. They do get rambunctious in pack, but one on one, they are absolutely magnificent animals," she said.

Mia Dean added they have been attempting to separate the dogs to help gain better control over their behavior. "We have the offenders and they are the teenagers," she said, adding the older dogs are not a problem. She said the dogs hit maturity at roughly 2 years old, which is when they really begin to settle down. "They're just bad kids right now," she said.

"I'm not sure the town can wait for the dogs to mature," replied Griffin.

After the testimony, Griffin said he would file a report with the Board of Selectmen within the next couple of days. "In the meantime, the dogs will be restrained, and you'll have to figure out a way to deal with it. If not, I've told Mr. Murphy to confiscate the dogs," said Griffin.

Murphy added he would recommend the dogs only be allowed out on their own property. "You have adequate acreage," he said. Murphy added even at home, he would like the dogs on a leash when going outside until the problem is solved. Griffin agreed.

The Dean family was not happy with the ruling and Mia Dean said she did not think all the dogs should be punished when they are not all offenders. But Griffin said the hearing was held for nine dogs, and all nine dogs will be subject to the same ruling.

The board of selectmen will hold a hearing on the dogs Tuesday, Feb. 28 during its scheduled meeting. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m., but a time had not been set for the hearing at the time the Mariner went to press. Griffin said he would prepare a report and recommendation for the board and would present the highlights of the incidents during the meeting. The dog owners and complainants will have the right to be present and provide comments with respect to the report. The board may or may not choose to vote on the matter that evening. Selectmen eye pit bull bylaw

Put article on warrant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The article would allow responsible residents to own pit bulls, while ensuring the health, safety and welfare of the town's residents.

Pit bulls have a reputation for being a very aggressive breed of dog. To that end, the Board of Selectmen asked Town Manager Bill Griffin to come up with an article for the April 1 Town Meeting Warrant which regulates pit bull ownership in town.

Although there have not been any pit bull attacks in Cohasset, Selectman Michael Sullivan had requested Griffin look into what other towns are doing to regulate the dogs, to ensure the rules are clear to the owners, and that residents are guaranteed to always have a certain level of protection.

"It's my understanding there are a couple such dogs in town," said Griffin of pit bulls, and to date, there have been no issues at all. To ensure the town maintains that track record, and responsible pit bull ownership is encouraged, Griffin presented the board with a draft article Tuesday, which is very similar to the ordinance adopted by the city of Boston. The board felt it covered all the necessary points and decided to go forward to Town Meeting with the article.

The article states pit bulls, (which includes any dog that is an American pit bull terrier, American Staffordshire terrier, Staffordshire bull terrier, or any dog of mixed breed displaying the majority of physical traits of any one or more of those breeds) have generally exhibited traits such as powerful instincts for dominance, which naturally result in a tendency for fighting; a strong prey drive, which inspires a natural chase instinct that often leads to the aggressive pursuit of cats, rabbits, other dogs, and children; a stubbornness that results in sustained, unyielding aggressiveness once an attack begins; powerful jaws capable of crushing bones and hanging on to victims even while the pit bill withstands infliction of injury or pain; and a combination of stamina, agility, strength, and the will to successfully complete a task.

If passed, the article would amend the town's bylaws to allow responsible residents to own pit bulls, while ensuring the health, safety and welfare of the town's residents. All pit bulls would need to be registered with the Animal Control Officer, in addition to the regular registration and licensure required for all dogs. The article states no household may have more than two pit bulls at any time, with puppies less than nine weeks old as the only exception.

Whenever a pit bull is away from the private property of the owner, it must be adequately and securely led and leashed by a person with the clear ability to physically control and restrain the dog. The dog must also wear a muzzle. If not on a leash, the dog must be in a secure temporary enclosure. No pit bull owner may be less than 18 years old.

Owners of pit bulls must display a sign which clearly indicates there is a pit bull on the premises. The sign must be visible and legible from either the nearest public or private way, or 100 feet, whichever is farther. The sign must be at least 8.5 inches by 11 inches and must either say "pit bull dog" or "beware of dog" in lettering larger than 2 inches in height in letters which sharply contrast with the color of the sign.

There is also a provocation clause which prevents anyone from antagonizing the dog in a way that would spur on an attack.

Any pit bull that is found in violation of the bylaw, whether it be on the loose, or whether it has mauled, bitten, attacked, threatened, or in any way menaced another animal or human, is subject to immediate impoundment. The Animal Control Officer is authorized to house and/or dispose of any impounded Pit Bull at his or her sole professional discretion.

Griffin said he thought the bylaw was an important first step in regulating dogs in town. He said in the future, the board would likely be taking up the issue of regulating the number of dogs allowed for a single household, as there is currently no restriction.

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

	Annual Growth
COHASSET	6.5%
Benchmark Peer Group	5.4%

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart shows Cohasset's average tax bill from 2000 through 2004. A resident's tax bill is calculated by multiplying Cohasset's residential tax rate by the assessed value of their property less any exemptions. Residential taxes represent the largest source of income for most communities and the most significant financial contribution made by most residents. This chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

Starting this week, the Cohasset Mariner will begin to publish a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

"Our goal is to help improve municipal decision-making by providing access to better information," said General Manager Ken Strachan.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Municipal Benchmarking was founded over two years ago by two "frustrated citizens," said Strachan.

Founders Tom Cronin and Bill Haylon had gotten involved in town meetings in their respective hometowns. Long time businessmen, they were surprised at the lack of a source of cheap and readily accessible data and analysis to help communities make more-informed decisions about issues such as pay packages for municipal managers or the need for a Proposition 2 fi override. They founded Municipal Benchmarking to fill that void.

They talked about the idea with Cronin's college classmate Warren E. Tolman, a former state senator and 2002 gubernatorial candidate. Tolman, a longtime proponent of smart government, "loved the idea," said Strachan, and started working with the company.

"City and town officials face tough fiscal constraints and must balance competing constituent demands. I believe that having quality information and analysis — like that provided by Municipal Benchmarking — is essential for making the best of these difficult decisions," said Tolman, who is now Municipal Benchmark's chairman.

The company's methodology stems from the idea that one can learn a lot about how and how not to deliver services by looking at how other similar communities provide those same services. The cornerstone of this approach is to find an appropriate group of similar communities. Municipal Benchmarking derives a community's Benchmark Peer Group by comparing it to the other 350 communities in Massachusetts across 15 different variables.

The variables measure socio-economic factors, such as income per capita or median family income, demographic information, such as population and portion of the population that speaks English as a second language, and geographic factors, such as how big the community is and how many miles of road it contains.

"By looking at the dynamics that shape a community, we can find communities that have similar resources and face similar demands from their citizens, and are a good basis of comparison," said Strachan.

Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group consists of: Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall. That report, at Cohasset's request, includes Marion and Hingham in the top 20 list of comparable towns. Municipal Benchmarking LLC allows towns to swap out two or three of their top-20 towns for other towns they would like to see themselves measured up against. Cohasset chose to include Marion and Hingham instead of its number 19 and 20 towns, Wenham and Winchester, which are included in the analysis depicted in the chart. Hingham and Marion would have been numbers 23 and 24 respectively, and therefore Strachan said including their data would not skew Cohasset's results.

Town tries to protect Sassafras Rock

There is an island in Little Harbor known as Sassafras Rock, which residents coming from Highland Avenue can see as they turn onto Beach Street. Director of Finance Michael Buckley said as far as the town knows, no one owns it. To ensure the land is not built upon, the town would like to take ownership of the land. It will therefore hold a public hearing at a date to be determined in March, and anyone with ownership rights is invited to attend. If no owner can be found, the town will proceed to the Annual Town Meeting with an article to take the property by eminent domain.

Textbooks large part of school improvement needs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With a 13.3 percent increase over last year's budget allocation, the school department says it will be able to move its program forward. Outside of the mandatory contractual obligations, which alone would total a 5 percent increase, there are three categories of increases the school department is looking at. Cost of living salary increases (almost 2 percent), new personnel (4.71 percent) and program improvements (1.5 percent).

The program improvements, which would be the smallest increase, would be roughly $185,000. That figure is exactly half of the $370,000 increase Town Manager Bill Griffin has designated for the school department in his recommended budget, which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 — the state law that limits the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year.

Program improvements have been proposed for all three schools. The Osgood School began its first year of the Scott Foresman reading program this year and would like to continue with it. To keep the program going, it will require $5,356 for kindergarten, $6,860 for grade one, $7,200 for grade two and $4,608 for a new grade two classroom set. The Scott Foresman supplies for Osgood total $24,024.

At Deer Hill, there are many textbook needs. Grades three, four, and five all need new science texts. It would cost $7,500 to purchase the books necessary for each grade, meaning science texts for Deer Hill would total $22,500.

Total	$48,535
High School
English texts	$10,300
Algebra I texts	$5,400
AP texts in science, calculus, statistics, finance	$8,500
70 U.S. History replacement texts	$5,600
35 economics replacement texts	$2,625
Replacement texts for world history, sociology, law, psychology	$1,200
Latin II texts	$260
Spanish I texts	$10,110
French I texts	$6,850
Update library collection	$5,000
Science supplies	$6,200
Fine arts supplies	$6,688
Total	$73,883
Grand total	$185,293

All three grades also need new Scott Foresman books. Grade three needs grammar books, while grades four and five both need reading books. Requests total $3,000 for each school, for a total of $9,000 in Scott Foresman texts for Deer Hill.

In addition, grade three also needs history textbooks which would cost $1,250. Grade five needs MacMillan/McGraw replacement texts which would cost $3,300. The school also needs math interactive software, which costs $2,800.

All tolled, the requests for Deer Hill add up to $38,850.

Science texts are also a big need at the middle school. Grade six needs an entire new set, which costs $2,340, while grades seven and eight need replacement texts for $400 each.

Grade six needs reading texts which would cost $4,000. It also needs Everyday Math texts, which would cost $7,689.

Across the board at the middle school, there is a need for world history and geography replacement texts, which total $1,650, social studies resource materials for $2,250, language arts texts, for increased class size, for $2,100, language texts, also for increased class size, for $1,743. New English teacher supplies are listed at $1,000 and new language teacher supplies are listed at $3,000.

There is a need to replace instrumental equipment, which would cost $1,963. There is also a need to begin a new technology education program, which would cost $20,000.

Program improvements for the middle school total $48,535.

The high school has some significant needs as well, and most are in the form of textbooks. English texts would cost $10,300, and algebra I texts would cost $5,400. Advanced placement texts for science, calculus, statistics and finance would cost $8,500, and students would have the option, as they have in the past, to purchase the books outright from the school.

Honors chemistry textbooks are also necessary, which would cost $3,900. Marine science, finance, and statistics texts would cost $1,250. The school also needs 70 replacement U. S. history texts which would cost $5,600 and 35 replacement economics texts for $2,625. Replacement texts are also needed for world history, sociology, law, and psychology, which total $1,200.

Texts are also required for the high school's language classes. Latin II texts would cost $260, Spanish I texts would cost $10,110, and French I texts would cost $6,850.

The high school's library collection must also be updated, which would cost $5,000. The science program needs supplies, including microscopes, which would cost $6,200. The fine arts department is also in need of instructional supplies, which would total $6,688.

All tolled, the high school improvements would be $73,883. Coupled with the middle school improvements at $48,535, the Deer Hill improvements at $38,850, and the Osgood improvement plans at $24,024, the school budget has accounted for $185,293 in school program improvements for the fiscal 2007 budget.

FEBRUARY IS HERE!
ENROLL NOW, BEFORE CAMPS ARE FULL!
CAMP FAIRS CAN HELP YOU DECIDE

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

With kids back in school and winter weather looming over much of New England, summer seems a world away. It's not too soon, however, for parents to start thinking about ways to create a safe and enriching summer for their children. And the sooner the better! Camps can fill up early and many are full by late February. It may seem early, but honestly...it isn't!

Nationwide, more than 11 million children attend camp each summer. Finding and securing the perfect camp experience for each child can be tricky. If you have not begun your camp search, now is the time!

Camp Fairs can really help! At camp fairs, some families will begin to explore their options while others will finalize their decision and reserve space at the camp of their choice. Wherever you are in the camp search process, attending a camp fair can assist in important ways: Talking with a camp director or representative at a camp fair often helps with making the final decision. And for folks just beginning to look into camp options, stopping by the camps' displays and gathering their materials can provide a sense of what's out there—no better way to jump start the camp search process.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 8

Suggests calculation to determine available school funds

TO THE EDITOR:

The average Cohasset voter never knows what to believe when the uncompromising advocates and critics of the schools go after each other. Their failure to compromise is why we have the out-of-control costs on the Osgood-Deer Hill "Campus."

Perhaps Michael Buckley should be asked to do the following calculation:

a. Start with the all-inclusive actual expenses to run the school system for the year prior to opening the "new" Osgood School. This would include the school budget, building maintenance costs, insurance, retirement, and other related costs paid out of the municipal budget. Do not include debt service.

b. Take the figure arrived at in paragraph "a," above and increase it by the Federal cost of living index (COLI) for each year since the opening of the new Osgood School to the present time and assume that the COLI will be the same for school years 2006-7, and 2007-8 as it was for the year 2005(4.1 percent)

c. Take the enrollment for the year preceding the opening of the "new" Osgood School and very precisely project the enrollment for the 2006-7 school year.

d. Take the average cost of teaching a Cohasset student (weight special education into the equation) for the year 2004 and increase that figure by 4.1percent for 2005-6 and 2006-7. Multiply the number of additional students by the average cost per student.

e. Determine the difference between the original debt service figure and the projected year 2006-7 debt service figure.

f. Establish the year 2006-7 budget based upon paragraph "b" plus paragraph "d" while adding debt service that exceeds whatever was the figure prior to the opening of the "new" Osgood School. Also include a 1 percent per year addition to the budget to keep up with technology changes and provide for incentives to attract teachers.

This methodology could serve to establish a figure for the 2006-7 school-operating budget and could reveal the amount of money that is available to allocate to the Teachers' contract.

Some type of methodology has to be adopted to stop the constant bickering between the school unions and the school committee/town manager. I would remind all concerned that the best MCAS results that Cohasset ever received was the first year-before we ever occupied the "new" Osgood or the renovated Deer Hill and middle high schools.

3 percent exercise for schools not grounded in reality

FROM GROUNDED, PAGE 8

3 percent increase completely fails to recognize that the "one size fits all" mind-set for other town departments is not applicable to the School Department. The school budget is what is. For our schools to deliver the same services next year as they did last year, the 3 percent solution won't work. For the Town Manager or anyone else to suggest that any amount beyond that should be considered as part of a "supplemental budget" for consideration by Town Meeting is more than just engaging in an exercise in semantics. The notion that a 3 percent increase is a "balanced budget" is misleading. In truth, it should be termed for what it really is: "An artificial and contrived budget figure that conforms to the unrealistic requirements of the state law known as Proposition 2-1/2." At least then we would have a starting point that acknowledges the reality of the situation.

Our public officials also do not advance the debate and public understanding of the issues by invoking the old canard that "the taxes are driving people out of the town," as one of our selectman did last week. Who are these mythical people? I have yet to meet anyone in my 12 years in this town who has told me, "We're moving to Hull because the taxes are too high in Cohasset." Certainly, there are senior citizens on limited fixed incomes (as opposed to the seniors on high fixed incomes from their bonds, stock dividends, pensions, etc.) for whom the property taxes are an enormous expense. But state law provides a simple remedy to alleviate this burden: they can go to the assessors' office, fill out a form in 10 minutes, and defer all or part of their property taxes until their home is sold. I know senior citizens who have done this and it has worked wonderfully for them.

Finally, speaking solely as a parent and taxpayer, I fail to understand the apparent negativity which has greeted Superintendent Walsh and the School Committee by members of our other town boards. It is not as if the Superintendent is some CEO who is lining her own pockets with the budget increase she is seeking. She is simply setting out the facts to inform the community of what it costs to operate a quality school system. The hostility toward the presentation of these facts is a simple-minded version of "let's shoot the messenger" on the part of some of our town officials.

The bottom line, which we must face up to as a community, is that every town department is being operated on a shoestring, and the School Department more so than others. The prolonged contract negotiations with the teachers have served to highlight how far Cohasset lags other communities in terms of what we pay our teachers. As someone who has lived in cities and towns large and small prior to living here, I do not see any fat or waste in our town or school budget. While anything in life always can be improved, I have found Cohasset to be an exceptionally well-run community in my 12 years as a resident.

The upcoming budget summit meeting scheduled for Monday, Feb. 27, presumably will enlighten those who still might have doubts about the precarious financial situation facing our schools. Hopefully, our town officials will dispense with the rhetoric and work to make the public aware of what it will take to keep our schools moving along the path of excellence.

Brady, who is Dama Dow's beloved dog, is doing well after surgery. Schoolchildren who ride her bus and their families helped pay for the operation.

year, Julia said she has been putting money into the bank. "I was saving to give it to the animal shelter, but Dama needed it more," said Julia, which is why she handed over all $9.40 to go toward Brady's operation.

Julia has a lab/chow/shepherd named Lucy who is a big part of the Stanganelli family, and although she hasn't met Dow's dog Brady, she knows how important he is to the Dow family. Julia said it made her really glad to be able to donate the money she had been saving to be put toward Brady's operation. "She (Dow) was really happy," Julia said.

Julia's mother Sarah Stanganelli said Julia came up with the idea to give her money to Dow all on her own. "We do a lot for animals in this family, so it doesn't surprise me at all," she said of Julia's generosity.

Stanganelli added Lucy, the family dog, and their calico cat Audrey, were both adopted from local shelters. "There is a lot of generosity toward animals here, whether it's in the yard with a squirrel or donating food and medicine to the animal shelter in Scituate," she said. Julia added recently, they found a bird with a broken wing in the yard and took it to the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham to receive treatment.

Dow said now, more than one week later, she is still fighting back the tears when she thinks of the kindness that has been bestowed upon her. In an interview Tuesday she said Brady had returned home from surgery and he is doing very well. She said her husband James and his friend built a ramp for Brady over the weekend so he can get in and out of the house on his own without having to go up and down the stairs. "We're taking every precaution we can," she said, adding it will take about six months for Brady to fully recover.

HSO Chamber presents Appalachian Spring

On Saturday, March 4 at 7 p.m. at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham, Jin Kim conducts the HSO Chamber Players in an evening of inspirational solo and small ensemble pieces, centered around Copland's Appalachian Spring Suite.

HSO will perform the original instrumentation, written for nine strings, one flute, clarinet, bassoon and piano.

In addition, flutist Jessica Lizak plays three American Pieces by Lukas Foss, clarinetist Kai-Yun Lu performs Movements from Sonatina for Clarinet and Piano by Joseph Horoviz, violinist Peter Krysa plays five Melodies for Violin and Piano by Sergei Prokofiev, and Fred Bednarz, violin, Patrick Owen, cello and pianist Won Hee An will perform Phantasie by Frank Bridge.

Chamber music performed in an intimate, acoustically superb space like the House of Prayer pulls listeners deeply into the music. Jin Kim and the musicians will hold a brief conversation with the audience following the concert.

Tickets are available at Hingham Library and other outlets, or order at 781-740-5694 or www.hinghamsymphony.org. $20 adult, $15 senior, $10 youth through age 18.

Cohasset's Alison Costa navigates the waters at last weekend's South sectional swimming meet.

Sci-Coh swimmers send 10 athletes to state championship

The Scituate-Cohasset swim team had a very successful year, coming in a close second in the Patriot League championship meet.

In the boys competition, Jonny Drybanski received a first in the 200-meter IM and a second in the 100 fly. Rob Lilly placed third in the 50 free and first in the 100 Free.

James Smith III placed first in the 100 Fly and second in the 100 back. Sean Crowley placed second in the 500 free.

For the girls, Mamme Daley placed first in the 500 free and third in the 200 IM. Emily Mulcahy placed second in the 100 Fly. Julia Rogers received a third in the 100 back and Torey Hart placed third in the 100 breaststroke.

Scituate-Cohasset controlled the relays, winning the 400 free (girls) and placing second in the 200 free and third in the 200 medley.

Eighteen swimmers qualified for sectionals, which were held Northeastern University on Feb. 18 and 19. Headling this effort was Caitlin Little, who placed second in the 50 Free.

Scituate-Cohasset had 10 swimmers qualify for the state championship meet to be held this weekend, Feb. 25 and 26. The boys state meet will be held on the 25th at MIT and the girls will compete on the 26th at Wellesley College.

Five swimmers from each school qualified to swim in the state championship meet. The boys who qualified are Jonny Drybanski (Cohasset), Colin Conway (Cohasset), Rob Lilly (Sciuate) and James Smith III (Sciuate). The girls who are traveling to the state meet are captain Mamme Daley (Cohasset), Torey Hart (Cohasset), Allison Costa (Cohasset), Caitlin Little (Scituate), Julia Rogers (Sciuate) and Ashley Scott (Scituate).

Caitlin Little will be competing in both the 50 free and the 100 free. The individual male competitors will be Jonny Drybanski swimming the 200 IM (individual medley), Rob Lilly swimming the 50 free and the 100 free and James Smith III will swim the 100 Fly.

The boys will join together with Colin Conway to compete in the 400 free relay. The girls will join forces to compete in the 200 medley relay and the 400 free relay.

This was expected to be a building year for this team, but it has surpassed all expectations. With only two seniors - James Smith III and Mamme Daley - included in the group

Cambi, Dorian shine at states

By Ben Libby
CORRESPONDENT

FOXBORO - Just last year, Shane Dorian and Dave McKenna wrestled their way into the record books when they became Division 3 state champions in their respective weight classes.

Heading into the 2006 state tournament last weekend at Foxboro, hopes were high again for both wrestlers.

After Friday's early round action ended, both Dorian and McKenna had rolled over their first two opponents. However, things looked questionable as both wrestlers drew tough semi-finals foes.

First, Dorian (145) prepared for a highly touted match with Hopkinton's Eric DeWolfe. DeWolfe finished third last year in the 119-pound weight class, but became a strong wrestler over the summer and bumped his way up to the 145 weight class.

Words couldn't explain the surprises felt by both Dorian and coach Torin Sweeney when Shane looked around the Foxboro gym after being pinned by DeWolfe. Dorian was not in his usual zone where he can dominate, and his slow start costed him the match.

Nonetheless, Dorian shook off the tough loss and beat Wakefield's Devon Brown and Foxboro's Nick Ranko to finish third in his class.

Secondly, McKenna (152) entered his semifinal match against Wayland's Greg "Birdman" Bergmen. Many believed that McKenna would roll over Bergmen as he did earlier in the season. Late in the second period, however, McKenna got stuck by Bergmen and entered the loser bracket.

Then, in his first loser bracket match against Tri-County's John Cavanaugh, McKenna got trapped attempting to perform a special move on Cavanaugh late in the period and got pinned. Still, McKenna finished off his day with commanding 9-2 decision over Burlington's Keith Mantia.

The story of the weekend was the third place finish by junior Nick Cambi at 189. The way he did it was just as amazing as his final result. After losing his second round match versus Hopkinton's Marty Racenis (12-6 decision), Cambi followed the path of both Dorian and McKenna and entered the loser bracket.

Girls build momentum heading into postseason

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

If ever there was a point in time when coach John Levangie wanted his team to begin peaking in its performance, it's now. That dream has come true.

The Lady Skippers have triumphed in nine out of their last 12 games. Two of these victories came last week to bring their overall seasonal record to an impressive 13-7.

The Lady Skippers gave their coach a thoughtful home court gift on Valentine's Day by knocking off Norwell. For the visitors, this game brought trouble from the very start. For the Skipper fans this contest spelled M-O-M-E-N-T-U-M.

Cohasset rocketed off to a 14-2 run in the opening minutes. From there, everything fell into place.

"We finally got on track offensively," said Levangie. "Our defense proved as solid as ever. The press came alive in the second half."

Indeed it did. With another Cohasset run at the beginning of the second half, the Clippers spiraled into a slump.

Freshmen Gabriella Flibotte put up 18 points, followed by Sam Lehr with 11 and Chelsea Grossman and Mia Lieb-Lappen contributing eight each. Lehr also snagged 11 rebounds, giving the Skippers plenty of second chances. The final outcome: a confidence boosting 53-24 Skipper success.

The confidence meter hit another high mark as a result of the next day's trek to Avon. Again, the Skippers dominated from the beginning. In the last minutes of the first half, the Cohasset press further energized their domination, leading to a Skipper 20-2 run.

With a commanding 48-19 lead going into the second half, the Skippers finished off their season with a bang. Lehr led the offensive with 20 points, closely followed by Grossman's 19 and Flibotte's 18. The final score sounded more like a college match-up with the Lady Skippers prevailing by a lopsided 75-36 score.

"The whole team clicked on the press," said Levangie. "They're at a point now where each person on the team understands the strategies as well as the next. This will be a big help in the tournament."

Both Levangie and his players seem optimistic about their postseason potential.

"The girls' phenomenal work ethic will play a big role in their success," said the coach.

Senior co-captain Katie James also showed enthusiasm.

"We're feeling confident going into the playoffs," she said. "As long as we can stay focused, we can do very well."

The tournament information will be released today, and will be available this afternoon on the MIAA's postseason web site, www.massachusetts.ihigh.com.

Let's hope the Skippers get a good draw and keep the momentum going through the very challenging postseason games.

Bouchard, Brian Straughn (below) and fellow tri-captain Brandon Smith will hope to lead their team back on the right path in the postseason. GIRLS TRAVEL BASKETBALL

7th graders make it five straight wins

With the inspiring victory of the Sixers having occurred just before their game, the Cohasset 7th grade team had plenty of incentive to come out firing against their Raynham counterparts two weekends ago. But truth be told, the Raynham Sevens are winless in three years and have yet to lose a game by less than 20 points this season.

Thus, the Cohasset Sevens put their game on cruise control en route to a comfortable 34-10 triumph. Carly Martin enjoyed a career-high game, leading the Blue & White with 10 points. Carly did it all, making sharp cuts to the basket without the ball to await passes underneath from teammates for layups; driving around opponents for power buckets; and on one memorable possession, fighting relentlessly for three rebounds before sinking the ball through the twine.

Guard Rachel Fredey equaled her career-high, set just the week before, with eight points, including an impressive 4-for-4 from the free throw line. Emma Musto turned in her best game of the season with a six point effort, which was matched by Carli Haggerty. Kate French scored a hoop and Lindsay Davis added two free throws, while Emma Quigley directed the offense with her usual selfless passing and Caroline Fein was a thorn in the side of Raynham with her quickness on defense.

Logan Pratt, recently returned from Hawaii, also saw some significant action and pulled down her share of rebounds.

The Sevens now are 8-5 (8-4 in their division) and are in sole possession of third place. They will take on second-place Hanson on the Sunday after vacation week. If the Blue & White win that one, they will be in prime position to overtake Hanson for second to earn a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

8th graders fall, 28-14

Two Saturdays ago, the 8th graders played Raynham, a team they had easily defeated earlier in the year. Unfortunately, coming off their biggest win of the year last week, a strong performance against Abington, the Cohasset team did not show up to play. In the first half the girls were only able to score seven points and allowed Raynham to score 11.

Hoping to build some excitement in the second half Cohasset came out aggressively and scored the first two points after the intermission. But after that brief moment of comeback hopes, Raynham scored easily and frequently to win going away, 28-14.

The only real highlight was a beautiful 16-foot jump shot by Hannah Burgess in the second half. Cohasset will look to rebound after the winter break and build momentum going into the playoffs in March. On the year the V-Eights now are 9-4 and in third place in their division.

Team 56 shows heart

The 56ers took on Hanover two Sundays ago and produced yet another thriller. The first half was all offense with the 56ers showing a well-balanced scoring attack, a clear sign that the team is improving week to week.

The leading scorers for the Blue & White, Scarlett McQuade and Whitney Jaffe, continued their pace. Also filling the net were Allison Whelan, Annie Robinson, and Courtney Monroe. The baskets by Whelan (a beauty from the right side) and Monroe (a swish from the left) were keys in keeping this contest close in the first half.

In spite of the well-balanced attack, Hanover took a 15-10 halftime lead. But as most teams have found out this season, don't count the 56ers out. The team re-grouped for the second half and focused on shutting down the 1-3-1 offense of Hanover. The guard play of Meghan Kearney, Mariel Teague, Julia Thompson, Elizabeth Hagearty, and Annie Robinson continually trapped the guards of Hanover at center court.

The 56ers continually fought off picks, forcing turnover after turnover. The defense was so effective it held the Hanover team to just two points in the second half. The guards also set the offense up for numerous opportunities by beating Hanover's press.

But even with this remarkable defensive effort it did not produce the 56ers the win they so deserved. The offense watched as shot after shot rolled off the rim, but team 56 continued to fight with Whelan, McQuade, and Jaffe pulling down offensive rebound after rebound, only to see another shot roll around and spin out.

The guards also stepped up their offense with sharp passing and well timed give-and-go plays, especially a Kearney-to-Jaffe-back-to-Kearney gem, but these shots also fell just off the mark. Team 56 continued hustling, diving, stealing and, beating Hanover to every loose ball, but the clock eventually did the 56ers in, dealing Team 56 a 17-14 heartbreaking loss.

Defending Div. 3 champs ousted by Pembroke

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

PEMBROKE - Another point here or there, and things could have been different for the defending Division 3 state wrestling champions.

Cohasset won the pre-match coin toss, giving them the advantage in setting up the match-ups they wanted. But led by two hard-fought victories from junior Steve Tressel and senior Eric Johnson, the Titans of Pembroke High moved on to the Division 3 South sectional finals against Rockland with a 40-29 win over Cohasset on Wednesday night.

At 160, Tressel matched up with Cohasset senior Dave McKenna, a state champion last year at 145. Tressel pinned McKenna in all three of their prior match-ups this season, but the Skippers co-captain was on his game on this night, and was down just 4-3 heading into the third period.

McKenna started the third period on top of Tressel and stayed that way for the whole two minutes, but could not turn his opponent over the pin. Tressel kept that 4-3 lead and earned his team three critical points.

The match of the night came at 119, with Johnson squaring off against Cohasset junior Ryan McLellan. It was a spirited match throughout, and a clutch takedown by Johnson with 24 seconds left in the third period sent the match to a one-minute sudden death overtime.

Johnson narrowly avoided a loss with 27 seconds left, and then picked up two points with 10 seconds remaining to get the 6-4 match win.

"If we get the three points in those matches, it's 35-34, us," said Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney afterward. "Things pretty much worked out as we had planned [with the match-ups] except for those close matches, which could have gone either way."

The match began at 130, where Pembroke senior Ben Hannon defeated Cohasset's Steve Manly with a second period pin. Cohasset junior Adam Smith, who has wrestled better and better as the season has progressed, took a 12-3 decision over the Titans' Ryan Kopper to put his team on the board with four points.

Cohasset's Shane Dorian, shown here in action at the Division 3 South individual sectionals, scored an impressive 14-5 win over his Pembroke opponent on Wednesday. The Titans, however, won the match, 40-29.

After Pembroke picked up six points via forfeit at 140, Cohasset star Shane Dorian scored an impressive 14-5 victory over sophomore Dan Longo in a match-up of two wrestlers who will be competing at All-States this weekend.

The scoreboard showed 12-8 in favor of Pembroke at this point, and everyone in the gym knew this was going to be a match. The Titans had soundly defeated Cohasset in a December dual meet, but Titans head coach Dave Vining said he knew things would be different this time around.

At 152, Pembroke freshman Adam Bowker fought back from an early deficit to defeat Cohasset's Gannon Dorian, 13-5. That set the stage for the Tressel-McKenna showdown.

Junior Dan Wandell made quick work of his Cohasset opponent in the 171-pound division with a first period pin. At 189, Cohasset's George Miller fought hard for the pin, but had to settle for a 6-4 decision over Pembroke senior Tim Beam.

The 171 and 189 matches showed the slight difference between the two teams that showed throughout the contest. Pembroke was better able to finish off its opponents and did well to avoid pins when a Skipper wrestler had the advantage. The Titans earned four pins (for 24 team points), while Cohasset could only get two.

Those Skippers pins came from junior Nick Cambi at 275 and freshman Mike Froio in the last match of the night at 125. Particularly impressive was Cambi, who was wrestling two classes above his usual level; he will be competing at All-States this weekend at 189.

Pembroke ultimately clinched the match with pins from freshman Joe Eldridge (103) and senior Karl Gumpright (112).

In his first loser bracket match, Cambi squeaked by Dedham's Frank Grenham via a 4-0 decision. After Grenham was Mount Greylock's John LaCasse who also was sent packing by Cambi after a 4-3 loss.

Then, Cambi turned on the jets and cruised over Southwick's Brett Jeffery 9-2 before finishing his day with a 9-3 triumph over Hamilton-Wenham's Tom Zagorski.

"Nick Cambi wrestled the best tournament I think he could have," said Sweeney. "Finishing third in that weight class, he beat some really good kids along the way."

Juniors Adam Smith (140) and Ryan McLellan (112) both had solid tournaments, each winning a couple matches.

If Dorian, Cambi and McKenna can get on a hot streak and come out hard, Cohasset wrestling could have a good weekend at North Andover this Friday and Saturday. And one can never count out a wrestler who's guided by coaching legend Torin Sweeney.

traveling to the state championship, this team has a great opportunity to improve and return to the title meet next year.

Head coach Jon Fortin and assistant coach Alissa Anotonowicz could not be more pleased. But for Fortin, it is even more noteworthy that "many swimmers on this team have achieved their personal best times this season."

"This group really came together as a team, which is difficult to sometimes achieve when joining two schools into one team, and that accomplishment means more to me than any record," said Fortin.

Limited space left for spring lacrosse

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse has completed its spring registration period, but a limited number of roster spaces remain available at some age levels.

"We've been lucky to come through our registration period with just about our preferred roster sizes at all levels," says Chuck Jaffe, director of the program, which will field 14 boys and girls teams in grades 3-8 this spring. "We have just a few open spaces, and we will give them out on a first-come, first-served basis."

Jaffe notes that the lacrosse organization starts practices in early March and, each year, winds up with a few children who only decide that they want to play after a friend tells them about the start of workouts. Typically, at that point, it is too late to add the additional kids at that time.

"This year, more than most, we may have some extra flexibility – particularly on the boys side of things," Jaffe says, "but ideally we will have everyone who wants to play signed up soon, before they wind up missing out."

Registration costs $150 for one player and $275 for two. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse begins practicing in March, completes its season in June and works throughout the spring to avoid scheduling conflicts with the other youth sports in town.

To get registration paperwork, contact Jaffe at CAJaffe@aol.com or at 781-383-9858.

For more information, visit www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse looking for coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season.

Cohasset will field 14 teams this spring - for boys and girls in grades 3-8 - a number large enough to stretch the available coaching staff thin.

For the first time in several seasons, the shortage of coaches is a problem with the boys program, and not just the younger, emerging girls teams. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with roughly 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.

Throughout its history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills.

At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys and girls have one weekly practice, which is held on the weekend. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858, or write him at CAJaffe@aol.com.

Watershed Academy to start March 8

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) invites students to join its Watershed Academy. The Watershed Academy is a series of instructional classes that will train students to conduct coastal research projects. In this Academy session, students will learn to identify urban NPS (Non Point Source) pollution impacting James Brook, a waterway that runs through Cohasset Center and empties into Cohasset Harbor. Once properly trained, Academy students will work with the town board of health and a private consultant to verify the James Brook drainage system, conduct water quality sampling, develop pollution load estimates, and identify appropriate storm water BMPs (Best Management Practices).

Classes will be held on Wednesday evenings from 7:15 – 9 p.m., beginning March 8 and continuing through April 26. Interested students should call CSCR at 781 383 0129, or email Jack Buckley at jbuckley.cscr@verizon.net. Student hours in the Academy may be transferable to course credit, upon approval of the student's host school. Don't miss this great opportunity!

Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is a newly founded educational nonprofit organization that emphasizes research in the environmental sciences. Among its goals, CSCR's mission is to inspire students to become stewards of the region's marine environment; engage students in the study of coastal watershed issues; teach students how to research real environmental issues; encourage awareness about the environment; and promote activism within the community. CSCR is located at 40 Parker Ave in Cohasset. Visit: www.cscr.org.

Finding family harmony on Caribbean cruise

By FRAN GOLDEN

ABOARD THE CARNIVAL LIBERTY -- Ah, togetherness, relaxation, that's what a family vacation is all about, even if your family is a bit, well, unconventional.

And so I found myself on Carnival's newest ship in the Caribbean, with my daughter, 21, son, 18, and soon-to-be-ex-husband; boys in one cabin and girls in the other. The boys' cabin soon began to resemble "Animal House" despite the fine efforts of the stewards, but blissfully it was not my problem.

We'd chosen this cruise for its eight-day itinerary that included port calls at San Juan, Antigua, Tortola, St. Thomas and Nassau, as well as two full days at sea -- a little more interesting than the standard Caribbean routes.

To assure we'd get to the ship on time, we arrived in Fort Lauderdale a day early and spent a comfortable night at the Marriott Harbor Beach Resort right on the beach and with a nice spa for those who want to get an early start on relaxing.

On to the ship. While out wandering at 6 our first evening onboard, we overheard a woman on her cell telling a friend she was having a great ole' time. "I've been drinking since 2," she slurred. Welcome to the party.

But the great thing about a cruise is everyone can do their own thing and go their separate ways. On a big ship like this, people hardly meet up unless they want to. The Liberty seems a fitting name.

As a family, we vowed to at least get together for lunch and dinner each day (the boys missed one dinner, though, because the Pats were playing; the game was broadcast onboard).

Daughter, ex and I all vowed to not gain weight on the cruise, so hitting the ship's big and well-equipped gym was a goal, mostly in the mornings (when skinny son slept in).

Days at sea were otherwise spent sunning and napping, reading and watching in-cabin movies. In other words, relaxing. At night we watched the production shows and guest singers and checked out the bars.

One afternoon, the kids and I entered the late-afternoon movie trivia contest -- part of a long list of activities for those who want them -- and we won (a genuine plastic gold Carnival trophy).

We celebrated in the ship's lively casino, where I was up $25 before both kids put their hands out. That experiment was not repeated.

Old San Juan is pretty, with its pastel colonial buildings, and on our arrival we wandered the streets checking out the views from historic Fort San Cristobel before stopping at El Patio (102 San Sebastian) to try some Puerto Rican cuisine. While a guitar player lazily strummed out tunes, we dived into mofongo (garlicky mashed plantain), fried plantain, hearts of palm salad, fried olives stuffed with cheese, beer and margaritas and, of course, rice and beans.

Back on the ship, the kids decided to enter the "Who Wants to be a Millionaire" contest, attended by a crowd of about 150 mostly older passengers. They tied to win, coming back to the cabin with medals. Both were giggling, and they said they were told by several audience members they were smart kids.

One afternoon I felt like some extra exercise and convinced the ex to join me on the jogging track. We walked more than three miles (around and around the track) while we talked about life, dating and some upcoming legal stuff. We were both totally relaxed, walking in a light breeze and warm temperatures as we watched the sun set in shades of yellow over the very blue, nicely calm Caribbean. While people told us pre-trip we were crazy to want to travel together, it was a nice way to solidify our post-marriage friendship.

We toured sleepy Tortola (named by Columbus for the turtle dove), which quickly became my favorite of the Caribbean islands visited on this cruise. It's the kind of place where chickens (and sheep) do indeed cross the road to get to the other side, where steep green mountains grow out of the turquoise sea and jewelry stores and other tourist outlets are minimal.

The ship was wonderfully quiet in the morning when we called at St. Thomas, the majority of the 3,700 passengers having rushed ashore, so we took full advantage of the empty gym (no waiting for equipment).

When we did go ashore, we wanted the beach, so we avoided crowded Charlotte Amalie, known for its numerous duty-free shopping opportunities, and instead caught one of the open-air buses to Magen's Bay Beach, where we ate burgers and drank cold beer at the beach shack and spent the next several hours reading and sunning on lounge chairs, resisting the "Painkillers" being hawked by bikini-clad barmaids.

We found Antigua pretty low-key once you get out of hustling, bustling St. John's. We again hit the beach, our cab driver, Walter, suggesting Millers by the Sea, which cost us only $12 each way to get there (we prearranged for Walter to pick us up after two hours in the glorious sun).

The final full day of our cruise was to include a call at Nassau in the Bahamas, a port my family has visited many times in the past. We were debating whether to hit the Paradise Island beach, the straw market (where negotiating is a sport), the Pirate Museum or all three.

But we woke up to clouds and rain, 46-mph winds and 12-foot swells, enough to cause the captain to cancel the visit.

We didn't mind, really, as the extra day at sea gave us time to pack and veg out, although our suntans could have used another day of refreshing. The Carnival Liberty's onboard team scurried to add indoor activities, and the cruise line kindly deducted $25 per passenger from everyone's bill as a goodwill gesture.

We were all talking to each other at vacation's end, but, for some reason, the cab ride back to my place (where the cars were parked) from Logan did us in. Everyone started arguing. The cabbie must have thought we were nuts.

Our vacation experiment was a success. We all relaxed. We all had fun. Only next time, we'll take separate cabs home.

Rates for eight-day Carnival Liberty sailings in the Caribbean are priced from $749 per person. For more information, call 800-438-6744 or go to www.carnival.com

Quilt show and luncheon coming to Cohasset March 4

Cohasset's 13th Annual Quilt Show and Luncheon, will be held Saturday, March 4, from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., at The Second Congregational Church in Cohasset This year, more than 60 quilts will be on display. Tickets are $12 each and include a sit-down luncheon where volunteer waiters serve homemade strata, salads and a selection of desserts.

"When the idea of a small quilt show and elegant luncheon came to mind, we thought it would be just a one-time, cheerful way to spend a March Saturday," says Carol Sandblom, one of the event's original organizers. "It was not intended to be a fundraiser, but if we made a little money, it would go to charity. We must have struck a chord: over the past 12 years we've shown 650 quilts and donated over $16,000 to charity."

"We decorate the tables with linens and beautiful flowers to help bring a hint of spring to the midst of winter," Sandblom added. "It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

"...over the past 12 years we've shown 650 quilts and donated over $16,000 to charity."

— Carol Sandblom, one of the original organizers

The quilts displayed come from all over the South Shore and beyond. And each quilt has its own story which is shared in the show's program. This year's show includes both new and antique quilts, as well quilts from the 30's and 40's.

All proceeds will be shared between the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Center's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets should be bought in advance at the Second Congregational Church next to Cohasset's Town Hall on Highland Avenue. Stop by the church office from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday to Friday, or call 781-383-0345 for information.

Class of '56 to award scholarship to CHS senior

To mark its upcoming 50th reunion June 2 through June 4 in Cohasset, the Cohasset High School Class of 1956 will be awarding an Alumni Scholarship to a deserving CHS 2006 graduate.

Class of 1956 alumnus Joel Pratt said, "While we were planning the reunion, classmate David Truesdell suggested we should do something for the school. The scholarship idea seemed perfect.

"We all remember friends at Cohasset High who were able to further their education because they got help. And we remember some who could not. We hope to give a boost to a young person who might not otherwise be able to improve his or her chances in life without some help," Pratt said.

"We believe that we are the first Cohasset class ever to offer a scholarship. It is our hope that what we are starting will become an ongoing CHS Alumni Scholarship," he added.

"It is our hope that what we are starting will become an ongoing CHS Alumni Scholarship."

— Joel Pratt

Seniors applying to four-year colleges or universities, two-year community colleges or trade schools will be eligible. The scholarship will not be based solely on academic achievement. Candidates must also have shown potential to succeed and clear financial need. Cohasset High School will administer the selection process with the participation of representatives from the Class of 1956. Winner will be announced at CHS Awards night May 31.

Members of the Class of '56 have already begun soliciting donations from its alumni. Anyone who attended Cohasset schools with the class at any time before graduating is considered a class member. Contributions will also be welcomed from any and all Cohasset alumni.

The Town of Cohasset has agreed to collect the donations so they will be tax deductible. Donation forms are available at the Middle-High School office at 143 Pond St., as well as the Treasurer's Office at Town Hall on Highland Ave.

"Cohasset Middle High School Principal Joel Antolini told me that he strongly supports our efforts, as he wants to find ways to involve more alumni in the school," Pratt said.

For scholarship information call Ed Leonard at the CHS Guidance Office, 781-383-6102 or Joel Pratt, 207-255-4740.

Jewelry, art show helps 3A Farm Fund

Tickets are now available for a Sunday brunch, jewelry and art show to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter's 3A Farm Fund.

The event will be at the Scituate Country Club on Sunday, March 5, from noon to 4 p.m. A cash bar will be available. Tickets are $25 each.

The shelter is raising funds to relocate to the 3A Farm, at the corner of Route 3A and Mann Lot Road. A 2,500 square foot facility will be built to accommodate the growing area need to help stray, homeless, injured, and surrendered companion animals from Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. To learn more, visit www.3afarmfund.com

Tickets may be purchased for $25 each by calling the Shelter at 781-545-8703 or sending a check — made out to "3A Farm Fund" — to Scituate Animal Shelter, PO Box 823, Scituate, 02066.

OBITUARIES

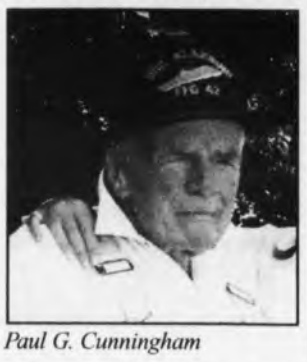
Paul G. Cunningham

WWII U.S. Navy veteran

Paul Gilmore Cunningham Sr., 89, of Cohasset, formerly of Lexington, died Feb. 5, 2006, one month before his 90th birthday.

Born in Boston, he was the eldest of nine children of Spurgeon and Mary Elizabeth (Murphy) Cunningham. He was raised in Cohasset and graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree. He graduated from Harvard University in Cambridge, and worked for Tucker Anthony as an investment advisor until his enlistment in the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Cunningham served as midshipman and later as an officer aboard the USS Greene and USS Tillman, supporting the invasions at Casablanca, Salerno and Anzio. He served his last year in active service as the skipper of a Motor Torpedo Boat, PT 460, patrolling the English Channel, and received a commendation ribbon for performance in the Normandy invasion as Commanding Officer while patrolling off the coast of France.



Paul G. Cunningham

After military service he held positions from salesman to groundskeeper with IBM, Lexington Golf Club, Lexington Tennis Club, Hayden Ice Center, and Wellesley College.

He was a firm believer in the benefits of regular physical exercise and being outdoors and enjoyed being active rather than leading a sedentary lifestyle.

Husband of the late Ann Frances Lyon, he leaves a daughter, Cynthia McCormack, and her husband John of Gorham, Maine, two sons, Paul. G. Cunningham Jr., and his wife Nancy of Portland, Maine, and Philip L. Cunningham, of Lexington; 10 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; two sisters, Nancy Pillet, and her husband Jean of Dinard, France, and Barbara Corey, of Petersham; 10 grandchildren; two great-granddaughters; many nieces and nephews; and a great-niece and great-nephew. He was the brother of the late Calvin, Spurgeon, James, John, Perry, and the late Cornelia, Cunningham.

Arrangements by Douglas Funeral Home. A Celebration of his Life will be held in the spring in Cohasset. Contributions in memory of Paul and Ann Cunningham may be made to the Salvation Army or the Alzheimer's Association.

Robert B. Bell

U.S. Marine Corps Korean War veteran

Robert B. Bell, 72, of Reading, died Feb. 19, 2006.

The son of Marguerite B. (Saxon) Bell, and the late Frederick B. Bell, he was born in Barre Vt., and was raised and educated in Reading. He graduated from Reading Memorial High School, and attended UMass in Amherst, and the University of Lowell.

Mr. Bell served as a sergeant in the U.S. Marine Corps during the Korean War.

As was his father, Mr. Bell was a local businessman who owned and operated Bell's Barber Shop in Reading.

He had a passion for baseball, having played in high school and in college, as well as professionally, with the Carolina League, as a second baseman. He was a faithful sponsor of reading Youth Baseball.

He was a member of the Good Samaritan Lodge AM & FM, Reading; a member of the Wakefield Lodge of Elks BPOE, Wakefield; and a former member of the Meadow Brook Golf Club in Reading.

He leaves his loving wife, Ellen (Sillars) Bell; his mother, Marguerite B. Bell, of Stoneham, three daughters, Kathleen Sartorelli, and her husband John of Chelmsford, Susan Enis, and her husband Timothy of Westford, and Karen Mungenast, and her husband Kurt of Reading; two sons, Thomas M. Bell, and his wife Nancee Caughey of Intervale, N.H., and Richard W. Bell, and his wife Susan Caughey of Marshfield, .14 grandchildren; two brothers, Richard E. Bell, of Reading, and Stephen S. Bell, of Groton; a sister, Barbara L. Cornell, of Cohasset; and several nieces and nephews. He was the son of the late Frederick B. Bell.

A funeral service was held Thursday at the First Baptist Church Reading. Arrangements by Douglass, Edgerley & Bessom Funeral Home Reading.

In lieu of flowers memorial gifts may be made in his memory to Reading Youth Baseball, c/o David Gray, 29 Libby Ave., Reading, MA 01867 or to the First Baptist Church, 45 Woburn St., Reading, MA 01867.

Carbon monoxide alarms required

"The Cohasset Fire Department stands ready to educate and assist homeowners meet the new requirement for carbon monoxide alarms."

— Fire Chief Roger Lincoln

State Fire Marshal Stephen D. Coan and Chief Roger Lincoln wish to inform homeowners that as of March 31, carbon monoxide alarms will be required in all residences with potential sources of carbon monoxide. The vast majority of homes will not be required to install hard-wired systems although, where hard-wired systems are required by regulation, the deadline is Jan. 1, 2007. The Board of Fire Prevention Regulations recently passed emergency regulations to implement the law known as "Nicole's Law."

"Each year we see the devastating effects of carbon monoxide poisoning," Coan said. "Many of these incidents are avoidable with early detection and warning as provided through this new law.

"Consumers should work with their local fire departments to educate themselves carefully, because not every CO alarm on the shelf at the local hardware store will bring your home into compliance with these regulations," he said.

Chief Lincoln said the fire department is ready to help.

"The fire service urged passage of this legislation and the Cohasset Fire Dept. stands ready to educate and assist homeowners meet the new requirement for carbon monoxide alarms. Call at 781-383-0616," he said.

Consumer Information — The Dept. of Fire Services is distributing "A Consumer's Guide to Requirements for Residential Carbon Monoxide Alarms." This guide and information about the regulations can be obtained from local fire departments and on the DFS web site: www.mass.gov/dfs/osfm/pubed/firesafetytopics/carbon_monoxide_safety.htm.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission also has information in both English and Spanish on common sources of carbon monoxide in the home and recognizing the www.cpsc.gov/CPSCPUB/PUBS/464.pdf.

General Requirements — For most residential buildings with fossil fuel burning equipment or enclosed parking areas, the new regulations require carbon monoxide alarms on every level of the home or dwelling unit including habitable portions of basements and attics. On levels with sleeping areas, the alarms must be placed within 10 feet of the bedroom doors. The regulations allow the following options for CO alarms:

- Battery operated with battery monitoring
- Plug-ins with battery backup
- Hard-wired with battery backup
- Low voltage system
- Wireless
- Qualified combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarm.

Acceptable Combination Alarms — Acceptable combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarms must have simulated voice and tone alarms that clearly distinguish between the two types of emergencies. The State Building Code mandates that only photoelectric smoke alarms are permitted within twenty feet of a bathroom or kitchen. Consumers are urged to check with the local fire department on whether a specific alarm meets the code requirements.

Alternative Compliance Option — Owners of larger buildings with centralized or minimal sources of carbon monoxide may wish to consider the alternative compliance option contained in the regulation.

Enforcement — Fire departments are currently required to inspect smoke alarms when homes are being sold and transferred. Starting March 31, 2006 or Jan. 1, 2007 where hard-wired alarms are required, fire departments will now inspect all residences upon sale and transfer for carbon monoxide alarms.

Uggams joins local actors for 'A Raisin in the Sun' reading

Broadway and television veteran Leslie Uggams will join a cast of local actors in a reading of Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun" on Monday at Boston's Shubert Theatre. Joining Uggams will be Jacqui Parker, Vincent Siders, Darius Williams, John Thompson, and Derek Jackson of Brockton.

Uggams will portray Lena Younger, the matriarch of a family living on Chicago's South Side in the 1950s. After her husband passes away, Lena's family grapples with the proper way to use his life insurance check. With strong urging from their mother, the Youngers decide to spend the money on a new home in a white suburban neighborhood.

The story of an American family whose hopes and dreams are constantly deferred, "A Raisin in the Sun" was the first play written by an African-American woman to be produced on Broadway when it premiered in 1959 with a cast that included Sidney Poitier, Ruby Dee, Louis Gossett, Jr., and Claudia McNeil. Most of the original Broadway cast reunited for a 1961 feature film version. In 2004, the play received its first Broadway revival with an all-star cast led by music mogul Sean "Diddy" Combs, Audra McDonald and Phylicia Rashad, and directed by Kenny Leon. Local audiences may recall that Leon also directed "A Raisin in the Sun" at Boston's Huntington Theatre in 1995. That production featured Esther Rolle in a magnificent and still memorable portrayal of the matriarch.

Audience members who attend Monday's reading are also invited to register for free acting workshops to be held next Tuesday and Wednesday evening by the Education department of the Wang Center for the Performing Arts. The acting workshops are led by professional actors and directors and are open to participants of all acting abilities 14 years old and above. Registration is on a first-come, first-served basis and will take place during the intermission at Monday's reading. Advance registration is not available.

The American Voices: Drama, Dialogue, Downtown play reading of Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun," under the directron of Steven Maler and starring Leslie Uggams, will take place Monday, Feb. 27 at 7 p.m at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston. For tickets and information, call1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

Movie review

'Eight Below' avoids mush

Actor Paul Walker conveys genuine concern for the dogs he works with in "Eight Below."

Eight Below (B+)

JAMES VERNIERE
FILM CRITIC

Attention penguin-loving moviegoers: All aboard for another trip to the frozen South Pole to fall in love with and be edified by a "truthy" story of animal survival.

"Eight Below" re-creates a fact-based survival story involving a team of Siberian huskies, which probably means it's mostly fabricated. The film is a happy return to the good-old days when the Disney company knew how to make charming live-action family films. Directed by Frank Marshall ("Alive," "Arachnophobia"), the film is inspired by a real-life story from 1957 that was the basis of a Japanese movie (1957 was also the year Disney released its canine landmark "Old Yeller").

Like "March of the Penguins," "Eight Below," which was shot in British Columbia and Greenland, is both spectacular-looking and a tad too eager to anthropomorphize its lovable beasties. But with the help of the handsome young actor Paul Walker ("The Fast and the Furious"), who brings an easygoing masculinity and genuine sense of concern for the well-being of the animals, "Eight Below" works surprisingly well, in spite of that tone-deaf title. Of course, Walker has the help of an amazing supporting cast, most of whom have fur and four legs.

Walker is the aptly named Antarctic guide and sled-dog musher Jerry Shepard, a young, competent outdoorsman assigned to take Indiana Jones-like scientist "Doc" McLaren (ever-reliable Bruce Greenwood) to a perilous mountainside in search of a meteorite (some of these scenes appear to be played on sets).

Jerry's cohorts back at camp include team clown Cooper (an amiably goofy Jason Biggs) and sexy bush pilot Katie (an appealing Moon Bloodgood), who is Jerry's ex-girlfriend.

At their destination, a storm blows up, forcing Jerry, Doc and everyone to evacuate by air, leaving Jerry's beloved "kids" - regal Maya, princely Max, twins Dewey and Truman, weathered Old Jack and three others - behind, chained together.

When Jerry is told they cannot go back to retrieve the dogs until spring, something everyone believes is equivalent to a death sentence, he is heartbroken, and that is when the film's action begins in earnest. Stranded in the open during the raging storm, the dogs somehow survive; most break free and go on a series of adventures across spectacular frozen wastelands.

Brrr. As the frigid days and long nights of winter pass, the dogs evade horrific dangers, in one case a (CGI) leopard seal, and learn to feed themselves. While I find it impossible to believe a starving dog would feed another starving dog, the scenes undeniably tug the heartstrings. The dogs even have some fun, in one case rummaging through an abandoned camp site.

But what's most fascinating is that Marshall manages to stage scenes in which the animals actually appear to communicate with one another on cue, without actually talking as they do in a scene in Disney's "Snow Dogs." At this point, the dogs have fully taken center stage, while Jerry is back in civilization trying to persuade Doc and others to finance an expedition to return to the dogs in the unlikely event some have survived.

Although the leopard seal will terrorize very young children, kids should love "Eight Below" and maybe even want to learn more about life in the still-mysterious icy wilderness.

Moviegoers have been in love with man's best friend since the days of such canine superstars as Rin Tin Tin and Lassie.

To that list, we can now add Maya and the gang. Mush!

Rated PG, "Eight Below" contains scenes of nature-movie violence and animals and humans in peril.

Tynan brings his tenor to town in time for St. Patrick's Day

Legendary tenor Ronan Tynan promises plenty of Irish favorites just in time for St. Patrick's Day when he plays Boston's Berklee Performance Center on Saturday, March 11.

"Every year at this time, I make sure the programs are even more Irish than usual. The Irish want to hear the Irish songs, especially in March, and I'm happy to oblige. It's fun for me," explained Tynan by telephone last week from his New York home. The Dublin native will also perform selections from "Ronan," his self-titled solo debut album for Universal Classics. The album reached number two on Billboard's Classical Crossover Chart, just behind Josh Groban, and was the eighth best-selling classical crossover album of 2005.

"When I recorded 'Ronan,' I wanted people to see that I could sing all kinds of music. I think it shows a greater versatility than any other album I've ever done," says Tynan, a founding member of The Irish Tenors. "The material on the album has tremendous depth and weight. I wanted to sing a greater variety of music and spread my wings a bit."

In addition to a busy touring schedule, Tynan, 45, will go back into the recording studio in April to begin work on a new faith-based album to be released this fall. At least two of the selections on the upcoming album will be songs with which Tynan has a long history.

"When we were selecting the music, we chose two songs that I had sung as a child in church. Now, of course, my depth of understanding has increased."

Tynan, a Trinity College-educated medical doctor who, disabled from birth, had both legs amputated at age 20 following a car accident, has found contentment with the performing career he launched in his early 30s.

"I'm happy inside myself. You have to be happy with who you are."

Music Circus Productions, the producing arm of The South Shore Music Circus, will present "An Evening with Ronan Tynan" Saturday, March 11 at the Berklee Performance Center, 136 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2000 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

THAT RINGING IN YOUR HEAD

Tinnitus is a potentially debilitating condition characterized by ringing, buzzing, or other sounds in one or both ears without any outside source. Tinnitus is a symptom, not a disease, and no one knows its cause. It often occurs along with noise-induced hearing loss or age-related hearing loss (presbycusis). It can also be a side effect of medication (including aspirin, quinine, and some antibiotics). In addition, tinnitus can be a symptom of Meniere's disease. If tinnitus is associated with hearing loss, a hearing instrument will increase the sounds that should be heard and may help drown out the ringing. Special devices are available that produce "white noise" that may mask the annoying sounds.

We bring you this column on hearing in order to better educate our friends here in the Weymouth area on the importance and benefits of taking care of their hearing and thus enhancing their quality of life. If you are having problems with your hearing, or if a family member seems to be experiencing hearing difficulties, we welcome you to call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. We offer comprehensive hearing services, including testing, evaluation, fittings, and follow-up care. Located at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health. Visit us on the web at www.familyhearing.net.

P.S. Vertigo is another symptom of Meniere's disease.

Historic override could come before voters

Number could be as high as $2M

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has passed 28 overrides since 1988, and this year, will be asked to do so again.

Although a final figure, or figures, have not been completely settled upon, at a joint meeting held Monday, Feb. 27, the idea was floated for the town and school department to ask voters to support allocating all the funding they need — roughly $640,000 for the town and $1.3 million for the schools — through a Proposition 2-1/2 override.

Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law passed by Massachusetts voters in 1980 which limits the amount a town can raise its property taxes each year to 2-1/2 percent more than was raised the year before, plus taxes that will be paid from new construction and substantial renovations to property. It also provides a mechanism for a city or town, with approval from its voters, to override the tax cap and increase property taxes above the 2-1/2 percent to generate more revenue.

"We need to be sure we're at a level where we can succeed and there is a political reality. If we reach too far, we'll go backwards."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

Cohasset is a town which does not have a large commercial tax base, and therefore the majority of revenue coming into the town is from property taxes. That is part of the reason the town has had to go for Prop. 2-1/2 overrides year after year. With more commercial development, which is a task currently being worked on by the Economic Growth and Development Committee, the town could rely less on residential taxes.

There are three kinds of overrides — capital exclusions, debt exclusions, and operating budget overrides. Capital exclusions are very rare and they raise taxes only for one year to pay for specific projects that will be paid off within the year. Cohasset has passed three capital exclusions over the years, including one for fire equipment and another for DPW equipment.

Debt exclusions are passed by a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting and a majority vote at the ballot box. Debt exclusions are used solely to cover special projects.

Pack attack

New homes for five dogs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A group of nine border collies which have threatened and/or bitten four Cohasset residents will be separated permanently, in an effort to break up the "pack mentality" which may have contributed to some of the attacks. The dogs will also undergo a behavioral analysis to determine whether they are a threat to humans on their own.

At a dog hearing held during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen's meeting, the board said it agreed with recommendations brought forward by Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's dog hearing officer. Until five of the dogs can be placed in good homes, all nine will be restrained at all times while outdoors — with the exception of showing the dogs to an interested buyer — and are not allowed to leave the property of their owners, John and Mia Dean of Meadow Lane. The board will take a final vote on a revised set of recommendations at an upcoming meeting.

"We have a range of options," said Griffin, in terms of dealing with the dogs' behavior, adding the maximum penalty would be to order one or more of the dogs to be destroyed. He said that was not an option he recommended.

WHO WILL BE THE NEXT MR. SKIPPER?

Weathervane at Deer Hill could be town's next senior project

Cook Estate developer chosen

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The home that sits atop Deer Hill that belonged to the late Jane Bancroft Cook is going to remain and be the centerpiece of a new 45-home "senior" development that will include 12 units of affordable housing.

Selectmen voted last week to accept Weymouth-based Weathervane Construction Corporation's $4.9 million proposal to build Cape-style condominiums for those 55 and older on the Cook Estate off Sohier Street.

If Weathervane signs the Land Disposition Agreement by March 31, as expected, the three-year-long "Cook saga" could be coming to an end. The LDA is a detailed purchase and sales agreement that also spells out how the property will be used when sold to a developer, addressing such issues, for example, as the commitment to construct affordable units.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said the board was looking forward to working with Weathervane.

"The Town is pleased that a local company, Weathervane, based in Weymouth is the selected tentative developer for the Cook Estate," Koed said.

"The Town of Cohasset is excited to be moving forward on this project."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

"This has been a complicated process dealing with the state procurement laws (MGLA Chapter 30B) on top of the general complexities involved with any real estate transaction. The board of selectmen is committed to working diligently to make this a success.

"Weathervane submitted an exciting design and proposal and, again, the Town of Cohasset is excited to be moving forward on this project," he said.

President Jim Bristol, who is the fourth generation of his family in the business, explained why the company did not return the RFP (Request for Proposals) when the town first advertised for proposals two years ago. He said while the Cook Estate is a "beautiful property that excited us," at that time what the town was looking for did not match up with Weathervane's experience. The project was for close to 100 units with a desired concentration on rentals.

But after reading recent newspaper articles, he said the project "sounded like it was becoming our cup of tea and we would have a good shot of at least coming in for an interview."

Weathervane — which is currently constructing the 150-home adult-active community, dubbed the Village at Weathervane, one-half mile from Columbian Square on 170 acres in South Weymouth — was the sole bidder in this round.

Weathervane offers seven base styles of homes ranging from 1,600 to 2,400 square feet. Depending on the options selected, the actual price of the homes may vary from base prices.

Bristol said Weathervane plans to build 22 homes ranging from 1,900 to 2,400 square feet of which there are four styles that would sell in the $699,000 to $969,000 range; and 22 smaller homes (of which there are three styles) from 1,600-1,800 square feet. Of the smaller homes, 12 would be affordable with the remainder priced in the $599,000 to $669,000 range.

Seventy percent of the affordable units — whose initial pricing is estimated at $175,000 — would be "local preference"

Cohasset Board of Health seeks mutual aid agreement

Town Meeting to have final say

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

By entering into the agreement, Cohasset would be able to use the resources from any of the other 27 towns in the region that also have inter-municipal agreements.

Cohasset's fire and police departments routinely work with other towns to provide mutual aid to citizens. The Board of Health would like to form the same kind of working relationship with health boards in other towns, and will ask Town Meeting to approve an article April 1 that would make that possible.

Members of the Board of Health came before Selectmen Tuesday asking for support for the article. Selectmen said forming new partnerships with other towns was a great idea and voted unanimously to support the article.

The Board of Health asked Kerry Dunnell of the Cambridge Public Health Department to attend the meeting and speak to the importance of forming a mutual aid agreement with other boards of health. The Cambridge Public Health Department serves as the coordinator for Massachusetts Emergency Preparedness in Region 4B, of which Cohasset is a part. Region 4B is comprised of 27 cities and towns which stretch from Winthrop to Scituate, and by entering into the agreement, Cohasset would be able to use the resources from any of the other 27 towns in the region who also have inter-municipal agreements.

Dunnell explained after Sept. 11, the way people viewed emergency preparedness changed. She said it makes a lot of sense to provide support over community lines, and increase the resources available to a town. She explained events that threaten public health can sometimes overwhelm the departments that provide health resources in a community, even if there is no declared emergency. An incident may require immediate attention and towns may not have the manpower to take action, which is where having more bodies available makes a difference.

Dunnell said there was recently a Hepatitis A scare in a town near Boston, and with the number of residents coming in to be vaccinated, its two employees were not enough to meet the demands. Therefore, members of health boards from other towns were called in to assist with vaccinations, which would not have been possible without an agreement. While there was no emergency situation, having the additional help ensured the residents were vaccinated more quickly.

Selectman Michael Sullivan asked whether the town would be opening itself up to any more liability by offering services to another town, or taking people into its town. Dunnell explained Cohasset employees will remain Cohasset employees and the town has the last say in all matters, and the same is true in other communities. "If you need them to come back, you can do it. You retain control and all the liability that goes along with it" she said. Dunnell pointed out the agreement is in place to make things more clear in terms of what is expected when responding to another town or accepting aid, and sets up a process to follow to eliminate confusion.

Board of Health Chairman Peggy Chapman noted while individual towns pay for the cost of its responders to provide aid in other towns, there is the ability to ask for reimbursement from the state for those costs. "The Board of Health is unanimously in favor" of the article, she said.

Must register to vote by March 10

Friday, March 10 will be the last day to register to vote for the upcoming Annual Town Meeting on April 1 and the Annual Town Election on April 8. Registration sessions will be held at the town clerk's office on Friday, March 10 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day, may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Macquarie Bank acquiring Aquarion Water Company

No change in local operations

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Aquarion plans to continue its evaluation of the most cost-effective ways to supply its customers with water to meet the demands of a growing population.

An Australian bank is acquiring the parent company of Aquarion Water Company for $860 million.

There will be no change to the operation in Hingham, Hull, and North Cohasset and no expected rate increases. Aquarion will continue to supply water to customers in these communities under its current name. Macquarie Bank Limited of Australia is acquiring the United Kingdom-based Kelda Group, which is Aquarion's parent company. The acquisition is subject to regulatory approval.

"This is great news for Aquarion customers," said Aquarion President and Chief Executive Officer Charles V. Firlotte, noting Macquarie and Aquarion's shared focus on "high-quality water, customer service excellence, and operating efficiency.

"Macquarie is a well-respected organization and an international leader in infrastructure investment," he said. "Of particular interest is Macquarie's depth of experience in the regulated utility arena."

Aquarion Vice President of Operations Larry Bingaman said the acquisition will benefit Aquarion's customer base "with a continued focus on service delivery and investment in infrastructure."

Aquarion plans to continue its evaluation of the most cost-effective ways to supply its customers with water to meet the demands of a growing population, according to Bingaman.

This includes seeking a permit to bring Free Street Well No. 4 in Hingham online "as a permanent water source," said Bingaman. "We expect to see an evaluation of this well coming on line and a recommended level [of withdrawal] in March."

Last May, Secretary of Environmental Affairs Ellen Roy Herzfelder determined that the project requires a full Environmental Impact Report. Concerns center around potential negative environmental impacts. The Massachusetts Water Resources Commission has classified the Weir River basin, in which Well No. 4 is located, as highly stressed.

Among the some 60 areas of study the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs asked Aquarion to look at was a comprehensive review of the supply and demand needs of its customers.

In response, Aquarion hired the engineering firm Tata & Howard to take a look at projected population growth, the associated water demand, and the best way to meet those demands. The results of this study will determine Aquarion's future direction.

TOD gains approval from Planning Board majority

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Four out of five Planning Board members voted to recommend approval for an article which would allow the formation of a new Transit Oriented Development overlay district near the proposed train station on Rte. 3A.

The board held a hearing Feb. 22 on the article, but a compromise could not be reached on the language. Therefore, the hearing was postponed until Wednesday, March 1 to allow Town Counsel and Town Planner Liz Harrington to make necessary changes. The Board of Selectmen was scheduled to vote a recommendation on the article Thursday, March 2 after the Mariner went to press.

While the majority of the Planning Board felt the changes allayed any concerns it had about the article, member Bob Sturdy was the lone vote against recommending the article. He said he worried the new district would adversely affect the downtown area, as business on Rte. 3A could take its business.

"The downtown can't exist unless it has retail shops," he said, adding if the TOD is formed and shops are built which cater to commuters, people will be more likely to stop at those shops on their way to and from work, rather than in the shops downtown. He also said he worries about the character of 3A, and what would happen if the TOD was allowed. "The Witches of Eastwick didn't do any shooting on Rte. 3A to my knowledge," he said.

However, the Economic Development Committee has been looking at ways for the town to grow its commercial tax base, which would help the town rely less on residential taxes for revenue. It proposed establishing the TOD, which is an overlay district that would make it possible to have mixed-use development in a limited area surrounding the new train station, as one possible solution. The TOD would also allow for more dense development than is allowed under current zoning, and a residential component would be required.

Members of the EDC have said currently, the area where the train station will be (at the gateway to Cohasset from Hingham) is lacking any kind of character and the town has the opportunity to build something which can be attractive as well as provide some revenue and new housing options for residents. EDC chairman Peter Brown said construction of the TOD should be aligned with the MBTA construction to help assure the two are in synch with each other. Members of the EDC attended the meeting and said they agreed wholeheartedly with the changes that had been made concerning the language and asked the Planning Board to recommend the article.

* New growth is new revenue that gets added to the tax levy. Under Prop. 2-1/2, the levy can increase one year to the next by 2.5 percent, plus new growth. New growth is calculated by adding up the value of all new construction and substantial renovation and multiplying by the previous year's tax rate. The new growth money becomes a permanent part of the tax levy.

such as sewer construction and school renovations, and their taxes go away when the debt is paid off, which can take years.

The town will look to pass an operating budget override this year, and it will likely be for $1.9 million. While members of the School Committee have said the town should ask residents to vote on only one override figure, some members of the Board of Selectmen say that is too risky.

"We can't afford to have an override that's going to fail," Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said, adding if the town is given the option of all or nothing, the town could end up with nothing.

Koed added while there is the thought that everyone should stand behind the figures they truly need, "There is a political component, and the closer you get to a higher number, the less votes you're likely to get," he said. "We need to be sure we're at a level where we can succeed and there is a political reality. If we reach too far, we'll go backwards."

Operating budget overrides require a majority vote both at Town Meeting and the ballot box, and they permanently increase taxes. Override questions can only be placed on an election ballot by the Board of Selectmen. Operating budget overrides require a majority vote of the entire Board of Selectmen, while debt exclusions require a two-thirds vote of the board.

For an override to pass, there is a two-step process. First, a budget must be passed at Town Meeting which includes an override figure. From there, an override question can be put on the election ballot. The town would need to hold a special election, most likely on May 6, as the Board of Selectmen must vote to hold a special election 30 days in advance, and May 6 will be the first Saturday after that 30-day period. Holding a special election costs roughly $5,000.

Griffin noted if the Board of Selectmen decides to go with more than one override option, it would require a pyramid override vote on the ballot. Each question must win by a majority vote, and if the larger figure wins, all items included in the lower override also pass. If both receive a majority vote, it is the largest number that wins, not the one that received the most votes. For example, if 1,000 people voted for a $1.9 million override and 501 vote yes while 499 vote no, and 600 people vote for a $1.5 million override and 400 vote yes while 200 vote no, the $1.5 million override wins because a greater majority voted yes, even though more people voted in favor of the $1.9 million figure.

The Board of Selectmen will finalize its override figure and decide what funding levels will be put on the special election ballot, if necessary, at its Tuesday, March 7 meeting.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

RESPECTING EACH OTHER'S OPINION

Hey Cohasset, how are we all enjoying the blast of Winter that is finally here? March has arrived however and somewhere on the other end, spring is coming. As we head into this dreary time of the year when it is so in-between, we also have some major issues within our budget for the town etc. One thing to remember if at all possible, is that everyone in town has their own opinions about what should or should not take place, how it should happen and so on.

It is so important for every one of us to keep this in mind and remember that at the end of Town Meeting and voting etc, we all still live in town as neighbors.(with our own opinions but still as neighbors) I get so upset at times as I can already see and hear the arguments happening and some of what is happening is so ugly. Opinions and beliefs are fantastic for us all to have, how we share them and present them is the issue. OK, off my soapbox onto the rest of the column.

DEAN'S LIST

The University of Maine at Farmington recently announced the fall semester dean's list and Cohasset resident, William McArthur III was on it. Super work!

BUDGET COFFEE

Are you interested in hearing what is included in the 13.7 million fiscal 2007 School Budget...what programs will be cut and how will class sizes increase if the school budget decreases? Attend an informational coffee with members of the Cohasset school committee at Our World Children's Museum Tuesday March 14 at 9:30 a.m. Bring your children let them experience Our World Children's Museum while you learn about the Cohasset School Budget. For more information call Cindy Swartwood at 781-383-6864.

REC OPENINGS

The Cohasset Recreation Department has limited openings in their children's programs including Indoor Soccer, Pre-K Sports, Arts and Crafts and more. For more information or to register your child, call 781-383-4109.

SLÁINTE!

Did you know that Sláinte—(say slawncha)—means cheers!

Why not kick off your St. Patrick's Day with a night of Celtic enjoyment on Saturday, March 11 at 7:30 p.m. and have some cheers with friends new and old? The South Shore Art Center's Celtic Odyssey: Fiona and John Owen exhibition sets the scene for a festive gathering, an Irish pub with beer and whiskey tastings, food, music, dancing and a creative silent auction of all things Irish....artwork, jewelry, golf outings, trips, knits and more. Music by The Exiles, an Irish Trio presenting music both traditional and hot! Proceeds will benefit the Art Center's exhibition and education programs, with the educational outreach to area schools a particular focus. Space is limited, so reserve today. Tickets are $50, ($40 for SSAC members). For reservations visit www.ssac.org or call 781-383-2787 but there have been several incidents that can't be ignored. By breaking up the pack, he felt some of the concern could be lifted, but not all, as resident Claire Barnum was attacked by a single dog when she entered Cohasset Greenery, owned by Alida Dean, John and Mia Dean's daughter. He said therefore, the dogs must also be constantly restrained, at least for the next six months. At the end of that trial period, the Deans could have the option to ask for another hearing and try to have the restriction lifted by the board.

Griffin conducted the first dog hearing Feb. 16. Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy had requested the hearing on behalf of four residents, three of whom had been bitten by one or more of the Dean dogs. At the hearing, Murphy gave his testimony, as did John and Mia Dean and three of the victims — Barnum, who was bitten by one dog at Cohasset Greenery; Mary Hartshorne, a 77-year-old resident who was out for a walk when a group of dogs circled her, bit her, and pushed her off-balance which caused her to fall and break a wrist; and Kearin Lewis, the Dean's neighbor who says the Dean dogs are always up on her property and one day circled her and caused her to trip over her dog's leash. Donald Staszko was also circled by a group of dogs and bitten while out for a walk, but did not attend the hearing to provide testimony.

Border collies are by nature sheep-herding dogs, which means they love to run free. They also have a tendency to try to "herd" things other than sheep. The dogs will circle cars and nip at the tires in an attempt to move them where they want, as they would when herding, and have tried the same technique with people, which is how most of the incidents happened.

"I've tried to take a difficult situation with the number of dogs and strategically reduce the size of the herd to a reasonable number."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

After the first hearing, Griffin compiled a report of his findings and a list of recommendations and gave it to the Board of Selectmen, which hands down rulings in dog hearing cases. He suggested the three "red dogs" which have been called the "offenders" by their owners, be permanently removed from the Dean property. Griffin had suggested the dogs be removed within two weeks, but the board agreed to provide some flexibility to allow the Deans to match them up with capable owners.

Griffin also recommended two additional dogs be removed within two months, and again, the board agreed there could be some flexibility if needed to ensure the dogs are placed in good homes, as long as the family is being proactive. Murphy will be visiting the Deans periodically to ensure the process is moving forward.

"I've tried to take a difficult situation with the number of dogs and strategically reduce the size of the herd to a reasonable number," said Griffin.

Because the dogs would be removed from the Dean property, the board wanted to ensure whomever purchases the dogs will be protected as well. Barnum had raised the point at the beginning of Tuesday's hearing that the dogs which the Deans are being asked to get rid of are the ones that have been biting. "I have a scar and what if that was somebody's face?" she asked, noting when she opened the door to the shop, her 7-year-old son was fortunately behind her, but had he gone in first, the situation could have been much different.

Selectman Rob Spofford asked Barnum whether she thought the board should ultimately recommend the dogs be put down. "Is that what you're saying?" he asked.

"Yes it is," she replied, adding "It's a horrific recommendation to make, but it is very important to make sure it doesn't happen again. I did nothing to warrant being attacked."

Resident John Kenney, a former town police officer who is a member of the Massachusetts Federation of Dog Clubs and Responsible Dog Owners and has worked for the MSPCA, suggested a behavioral analysis be conducted on the dogs. He said he has been in touch with the Deans since he first heard of the incidents and has since spoken to a doctor that specializes in behavior analysis and she would be willing to evaluate the Dean dogs for temperament, if the Deans are willing. He said he would also be willing to help place the dogs into loving homes which can keep up with the demands of the breed, and would also help set up training for the dogs.

The Deans said they would be willing to participate, and the board made sure they understood any costs incurred for training, behavior analysis, etc., would be their responsibility.

The Deans will also be restricted to owning no more than four dogs at any time, after the removal of five dogs is complete. While breeding was prohibited in Griffin's recommendation, the board said it might be flexible and allow one more litter. The Deans said the mother dog is approaching the age where breeding may no longer be an option, and if she had one more litter, it would be her last. The board agreed to add a provision in the ruling that would allow the Deans to have more than four dogs, provided the additional dogs were all under 6 months old.

Until the Deans are down to four dogs, all nine dogs must be restrained and controlled at all times, and may not leave the Dean property. John Dean is also required to build a kennel structure or fence enclosure within one month of the order issued by the Board of Selectmen. Upon full compliance, the four remaining dogs will be allowed off the Dean property, but only if on a leash.

After six months of compliance, the Deans may petition the Board of Selectmen to lift the restraint order on the dogs, which would require another public hearing. If at any time the Deans are found to be in violation of any part of the orders, the Animal Control Officer is authorized to seize any dogs which are in violation.

The Board of Selectmen will vote on a revised set of recommendations which take Tuesday's hearing into account at an upcoming meeting. For more information, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

meaning they would be initially offered to Cohasset residents or those with ties to the community. Examples of local preference would be current residents, children or parents of current residents, and/or employees of the town. The affordable units (which would be interspersed throughout the complex) would be filed through the state's local initiative program or LIP application process to be included in the town's affordable housing inventory.

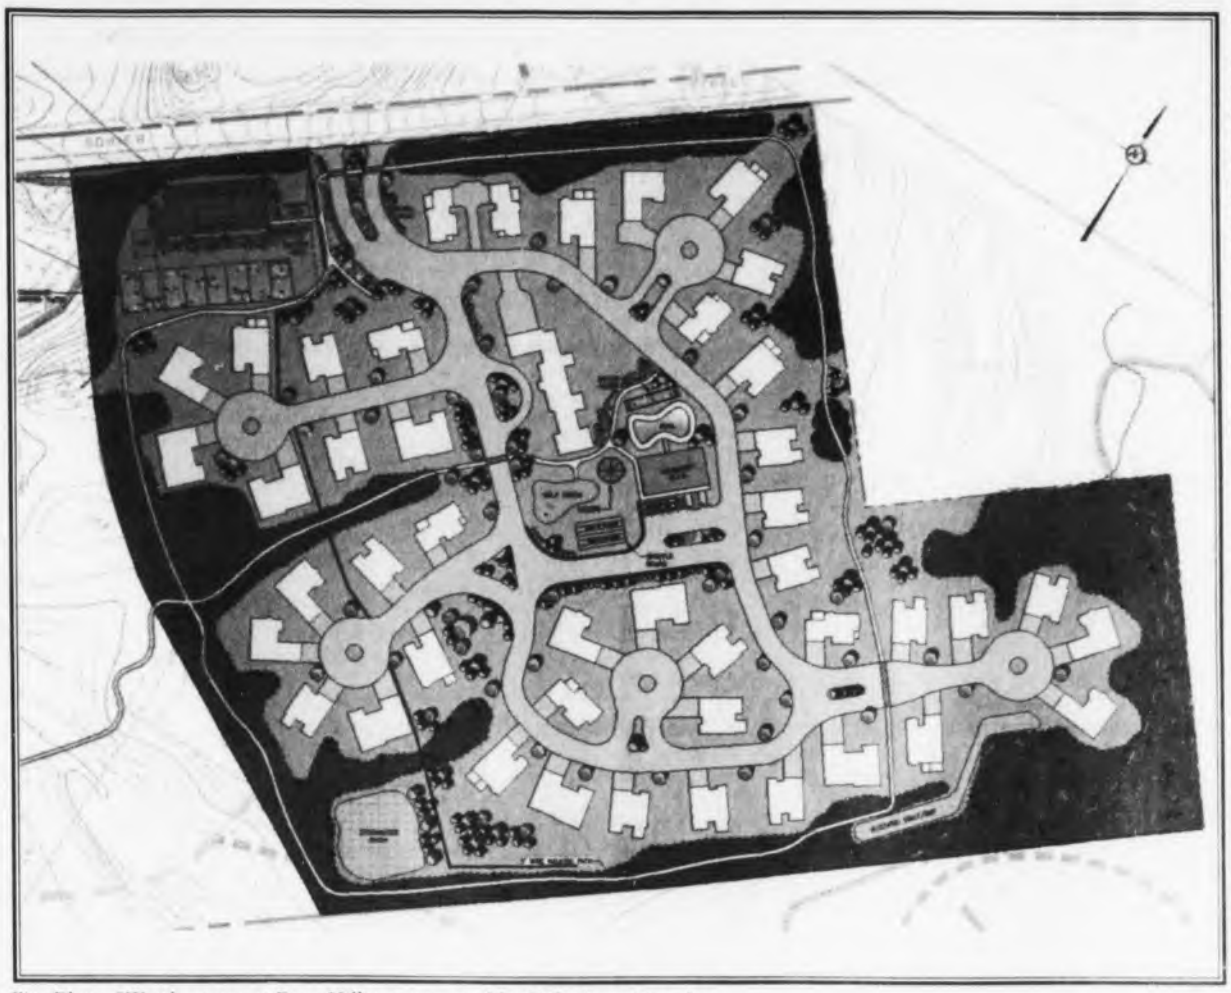
Rental units, which have been the subject of contention during previous Cook proposals, are not part of the Weathervane project. Town Manager Bill Griffin explained the RFP had a minimum of 45 units and the option of for-purchase units, rental units or a combination. "The RFP left it to the developers to decide the mix of units provided that 25 percent are affordable," he said.

The condominium homes, set on a series of cul de sacs, would all be unattached with "exclusive use" concept that is almost like a subdivision lot. The concept provides flexibility, Bristol explained. All the smaller homes fit where larger homes are planned so if the market dictates more of the smaller homes, the project could accommodate that.

Carl Erickson, who works for Bristol, explained that on paper the "exclusive use" areas look like small lots. The unit owner has exclusive use of that area, subject to the condominium removing the snow and maintaining the landscaping.

"The development looks and feels like a single-family subdivision, yet from the town's perspective, it is one big lot," Erickson said.

The existing Cook house, which would be part of the condominium association, would be renovated and sold for whatever the market would bear.



Site Plan of Weathervane at Deer Hill was prepared by Gale Associates, Inc.

The development proposes a community center, which would be in the center of the site, as the focal point of recreational activities on the property. The center would house the central mail facility and have a common room for community activities. Other activities such as a putting green, bocce and tennis courts, a community garden plot, and walking trails are also proposed.

William J. Seymour of Gale Associates, engineers for the project, said preserving the Cook house would limit disruption to the top of the hill and set the architectural tone for the project. The entrance would be close to the existing driveway to the estate.

Seymour said the topography of the site allows the residences to be pushed off the top of the hill and built down slope providing a sense of neighborhood and privacy.

A small treatment plant and leaching field on site would handle sewage. Seymour explained the units are expected to generate about 7,000 gallons per day of wastewater, which is 3,000 less than the Department of Environmental Protection threshold of 10,000 gallons. Therefore the developer will not have to seek a ground-water discharge permit, which could be time consuming.

As proposed, all the homes would have full basements and two-car garages, however ground conditions may necessitate some homes being built on slabs, Erickson said. Heat would be forced hot air powered by natural gas; the air-conditioning system would use the same ductwork.

In responding to a question from selectmen last week about rental units, Bristol explained that Weathervane builds a "for-sale" product. He said rental projects for the 55-plus set are "struggling." He pointed out a project in Pembroke that is looking to switch from rental to for-sale units.

Bristol said he is excited about the opportunities to develop the Cook Estate.

"We have a long 12 months ahead of us to complete the permitting process and meet the schedule outlined under the Cook agreement," he said. "We look forward to working closely with the Town and its departments, and the abutters and other interested parties following the development of the Cook Estate."

The Cohasset project will be called "Weathervane at Deer Hill." In addition to South Weymouth, Weathervane is developing an eight-lot subdivision in Hingham on Stevens Way, located off of Fresh River Avenue. Weathervane at Chestnut Gardens in Hingham received Planning Board approval under the flexible residential development (FRD) bylaw in February. This development includes 23 homes, of which two will be affordable. Site construction is expected to begin this spring/summer.

The Cook project has been in the works since 2003 but wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project. Subsequent developers pulled out because of tight permitting deadlines.

The town set a minimum bid for this round of $4.9 million, $4.5 of which will cover the purchase price of the 19-acre site from the Cook heirs. The balance will cover the town's costs.

Get a grip with a graph

Get a grip on how wisely your tax dollars are spent with the new At-A-Glance Benchmark charts featured in the Cohasset Mariner.

We can learn a lot about how our town delivers services by seeing what other towns are doing.

Each week we will feature a chart comparing an area of interest such as education spending or fire staffing to our town's peer group, which is made up of the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts.

Each week the chart will look at a different topic concerning town government, including taxes, police spending, municipal salaries, debt, land use, and more. The idea behind Benchmark charts is that we can learn a lot about how effectively our town delivers services by looking at how other similar communities provide those same services.

Community Newspaper Company, publishers of the Cohasset Mariner, is offering this valuable service for our readers as a way to judge their community by its peers.

These charts put a wealth of information at our fingertips.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Waltham-based Municipal Benchmarking, a company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, educators, taxpayers, union members, and others make more informed decisions.

According to company founders Tom Cronin and Bill Haylon, Benchmark charts are a source of "readily accessible data and analysis."

The charts have the kind of practical information we all need to make sound decisions, providing a unique tool for a wide array of people.

What a great service this is during budget time!

Last week's chart compared Cohasset's average property tax bill with its peer group. This week's looks at Educational Staffing. (See page 11).

Check out the charts each week. In the Municipal Yardstick report, available at Town Hall, all of the back up data is provided.

With the help of our computer technical staff, we hope to add the charts to our Web site www.cohassetmariner.com which will carry all the graphs we are running as they appear in the paper. We will let you know once the graphs are launched on line.

POLITICAL NOTES

Cohasset Political Forum to discuss energy issues

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be hosting a session of the Cohasset Political Forum on Saturday, March 4 at 9:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset to discuss the complexities surrounding U.S. energy policy.

Topics may include the administration's energy task force and corporate cronyism, the political implications of American dependence on foreign oil, a range of expert opinion on oil supply and production capacity, drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, and public reaction toward energy conservation.

To prepare for this discussion, visit www.energycommission.org and other recommended reading described on www.cohassetdems.org.

For more information contact Agnes McCann at 781-383-0222.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

For some, toll of taxes is reality not 'myth'

TO THE EDITOR:

Re: Mr.Quigley's letter in the Feb. 24 Mariner: Well, you're meeting one of those "mythical people" who have to consider leaving a beautiful home, in a beautiful town, due to taxes.

Mr. Quigley, I hope you have had 12 good years in Cohasset. We have had 46 great years in Cohasset, until what has become a "tax crisis," for us.

In 2001 our rates were $5,567; in 2006, our taxes are $10,044.

I personally knew a Hingham family with good incomes who way back in the 60s were saying, "If they can't afford to live here, they should leave." And he was in town politics! Hopefully, and thankfully, we have some town government officials who don't feel the same way.

Sure the deferred taxes are a consideration. Maybe you will never have to consider moving from what you care for or paying another 8 percent. Yes, 8 percent to defer my taxes, is a wonderful choice?

Yes, some of us folks are out there.

Thoughts on issues, columns and Route 3A

TO THE EDITOR:

There are several items I look forward to reading in the Cohasset Mariner each week.

One is the progress of the commuter rail construction. I really appreciate the continuous updating of information on what to expect. Thanks guys.

One other is under School Notebooks. "Life at CHS". We no longer have youngsters in the school system so it is wonderful to read about the social and academic activities, as sports are so well covered elsewhere in the paper. So, thanks Chris for writing about the other aspects of being a student at CHS. Hope you are not a senior and if you are please find someone to carry on!

Also it was fun reading the article about Mr. Leary. It has been many years since our children were at CHS. I shall be forwarding it to them and they will most likely remember him perhaps more from the "then" photo than the "now" photo.

But aren't youngsters somewhat unkind? Just think of what they will be thinking of their own 2006 photos when they look at them in 2036? What fun that would be! Good luck and thanks Mr. Leary you are well appreciated and have a good time whatever you do. If you read this please don't give me a grade.

There is something I do not look forward to and that is driving along 3A in Cohasset. Granted this is one of our largest commercial areas but does it really have to look so like edging on urban "clutter"? Do any remember a while back when Bergson's moved across 3A to what is now Bank of America? Memory serves me that they were held up or at least severely criticized about their landscaping plans. Think of that! Trees/bushes did not meet certain board's expectations. It seems that those expectations have blown away. Perhaps by all the traffic. There are a few locations that look attractive but it seems that many others could certainly improve.

Also, it is wonderful to have this column in the paper for all to be able to share thoughts with Cohasset residents.

Library funding is literally losing ground

TO THE EDITOR:

In all the news about the Town's budget issues, one fact seems to be lost: While most departments are concerned that they will not be able to maintain or add to their current budgets without an override, our library actually has been facing a reduction in its proportion of the town's budget for almost two decades. This year the actions and their effects are more severe than before.

- Back in 1988, when our library was in its old location on South Main Street, its allocation was 2.2 percent of the Town budget. The recommended allocation for fiscal 2007 is 1.4 percent.
- The library is understaffed. The old library had about one staff member for every 10,000 items circulated; the new library has one staff member for every 15,000 items circulated. Today there are almost five times as many visitors each day as there were at the old library.
- Perhaps most disturbing, or at least most visible, cleaning and maintenance of this beautifully restored building has been grossly under-budgeted since its opening in 2003. The new library is 60 percent larger than the old one, and the base custodial budget for fiscal 2007 is less than it was in fiscal 2001.

This steady decline has occurred despite urgent requests from the Trustees every year for more equitable funding. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library provides more services than tax dollars support. The Friends of the Library raise over $10,000 each year to cover the costs of books, museum passes and programs that otherwise wouldn't exist. Volunteers offer services for the housebound, host events, repair and cover books and call patrons about held books. The library's endowment also contributes up to prudent limits to buy new books.

We urge our Selectmen and Town Manager to fully fund our budget, within the balanced budget to be presented at Town Meeting. Otherwise, our new library, which hosts over 450 visitors each day, could become a shambles.

'Greenbush guys' complete first year

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Just to give you an idea, last week alone we dealt with 28 local issues, questions, and problems.

Believe it or not, the end of January was the first anniversary of these commentaries on the Greenbush project. It was just over a year ago that we were appointed to interface with the Greenbush on behalf of the Town. Around Town Hall, we are known as the "Greenbush Guys." I guess that sort of sums up our role working for the Town Manager. If anything smells like, tastes like, or looks like Greenbush it lands on our desk.

The variety of comments and issues we deal with every day is astounding. But, we might add, we do enjoy it. Being able to do our best to support Town's people to make this project less intrusive for them is a personal reward for us. But, like all things in the real world, not all problems have smooth solutions. Rest assured, we both do the best we can on your behalf.

Just to give you an idea, last week alone we dealt with 28 local issues, questions, and problems. However, there is another side to our function that may not occur to most people. We are also the Greenbush Project's communication channel into the Town. Whenever, the project has questions or needs information, we provide it to the MBTA and their contractor Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB). So, our role is really one that requires constant, two way communications.

Street closings

The most recent construction site to close is Hull Street (Route 228) near the Glastonbury Abbey. This site will be closed for about six weeks. There are detour signs posted, but we are not particularly pleased with their clarity and are working with CBB to remedy the deficiencies.

Sohier Street continues to be closed and will remain a construction site into May. Based on observations by our safety forces, they have undertaken a trial without a traffic detail at Route 3A and Sohier Street in the afternoon. Please let us know if you think this trial is causing serious inconvenience or safety hazards.

Pleasant Street work continues near the South Shore Art Center. Again, there are signage problems. When detour signs are blown down by the winter winds, CBB is not very good about re-erecting the signs. In some cases they have laid on sidewalks or streets with their mounting nails pointing up. This is clearly a dangerous situation. But, getting adequate response from the contractor is not easy, since construction is their focus, not signage. But, to residents and visitors, detour signage is important. So, we will continue to press this issue.

Later this year, CBB will return to Lower King Street to finish their work at this site. Final paving, crossing gates, sidewalk and other items need to be finished here along with the necessary equipment for a traffic light at North Main and Forest / King. The reason this work was stopped before completion was so the crews could work on the infrastructure at Sohier and Pleasant streets. The remaining work in the area of King Street is not critical to the railroad right of way construction. Completing the King Street work will generally not require any substantial road closures, since it is mostly off of the road. If you are interested, the reason a traffic light is being installed at Forest / King / Main is that under some circumstances the light must keep cars from queuing up across the tracks or into the intersection.

Safety

In these articles, we very often talk about safety. To date, most of our articles have dealt with safety during construction. Construction sites are very dangerous places. Just because the workman have gone home does not mean that the construction site is safe. To the contrary, if someone falls or otherwise injures themselves, there will be no one around to offer assistance. Please, as a practice, stay out of construction areas. For those of you with children, from the youngest to high schoolers, make sure they know construction areas are totally off-limits. Heaven forbid, your child should have an inadvertent accident in a construction zone.

But, there's another type of safety we need to start worrying about! The current plans are that trains may be running on the tracks, for testing purposes, as soon as January 2007. Think about it. That's only 10 short months away. Once trains start running there is a whole new set of safety issues to think about. We've all read about catastrophes that can happen at railroad crossings as cars "try to beat the train" or, children on bicycles don't pay attention to flashing crossing lights or barrier gates in the "down" position. Yes, train operation is totally different and presents new safety hazards.

There is a program underway, called Operation Lifesaver (OL). This program is traditionally focused at the school-aged children. OL is a national program (see oli.org for more information). It is based on the idea of training the trainer. That is, one or more of our safety officers is selected, and attends special classes designed to train these officers to become safety trainers. Then the officers will bring the Operation Lifesaver into the schools to teach school children the ins and outs of train safety. To learn more about this training, we plan to attend one of the training classes very shortly, ourselves.

This however, does nothing to bring the safety message to the general adult population. A recent letter from the General Manager of the MBTA, Dan Grabauskas, put forth a plan to reach the general adult population. We think that this is very important concept. Cohasset is blessed with a large number of civic, educational, political, religious, and other organizations. All of these are very active in their respective fields of endeavor. If you belong to such an organization and are interested in understanding more about train safety and are willing to carry the message back to your respective organization, we'd love to hear from you. Any organization is welcome. We are establishing list of citizens who are interested in learning more about train safety. Ground tackle's clues to harbor health

MARINER'S CORNER

STEVE BOBO

This is the first in a series of columns whose purpose is to stimulate a general recognition of the part our maritime heritage has had in shaping the character of Cohasset.

"The way to gauge the commitment of a fisherman, a waterman or a yachtsman in a harbor is to find out if he pays attention to his ground tackle. If he does, he's down at the shore in a storm, particularly if he has a fit of conscience about not replacing that shackle or frayed line. The more occasional sailor stays home — unless he's really fallen in love with the boat that's out there on its mooring.

"Recently, in Cohasset, the harbormaster and others have been receiving complaints about the early and severe corrosion of ground tackle including anchors and chain. Some have reported that the metal is shiny and clean, which speaks to sulphur (from plant material), which corrodes the material, away from the presence of oxygen. Others say that the corrosion is of a reddish tinge, which comes from conventional rusting. This appears to occur at the boundary between air and water. We don't have enough real data to know.

Inquiries at nearby harbors such as Scituate and Hingham, and even some reports from Bailey's Creek where we have a large Marina indicate nothing unusual. From the flukes of recovered ancient anchors we know that, after long immersion, the exposed flukes generally tend to be corroded; those buried are generally less corroded (see illustration).

But the problem in Cohasset Harbor seems to be that the life of much of the ground tackle is being shortened ostensibly because of changes in the water in the harbor. Recent analysis from very little data indicates that the harbor in certain areas is less salty than in previous years. Other phenomena say that we are seeing changes such as more nitrogen, leading to increased growth of several species of aquatic plants and die off of others. There has been a die off of shellfish, some damage to lobsters, and fewer fish in some places and more in others. Also, of course, the harbor has become sufficiently polluted, having been closed for most of last summer to prevent swimming, and to have become one of many estuaries along the coast to have been cited under the Federal Clean Water Act.

Progress has been hard on our environment; particularly, our coastline. Fortunately, more people have become involved in trying to solve these complex problems. The Selectmen have formed a committee of knowledgeable people, the Harbor Health Committee that has become increasingly effective in identifying the problems and recommending solutions. And the Center for Student Coastal Research is planning this spring's activities to help obtain appropriate and well-qualified data as a part of the high school's spring semester's activities. They will help identify stormdrains, which contribute significant pollution in tributaries to the Harbor.

Wrought iron anchor circa 1840 brought up by Cohasset fisherman.

Others are working to correct the long-standing abuse, which has been the lot of many of the nations estuaries. But only by the participation of everyone who considers it important to preserve a healthy and attractive coastline will we be able to preserve the beauty and tranquility we have come to associate with our life in Cohasset.

HEALTH NOTES

Taking charge of your medications

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

But the fact is that we all need to carefully screen the medications we take.

"A 1992 study by Susan Lynn, University of Pennsylvania, asserts literature in the late 1970s often (erroneously) claimed that Americans were 'overmedicated' with drugs such as amphetamines and minor tranquilizers and that, regardless of available scientific knowledge, enduring drug myths have helped determine American drug policy since 1900.

Four years ago, Jennifer Collison, a Canadian women's rights activist, wrote "One of the worst forms of abuse by doctors is the over-prescribing and under-informing of women when it comes to potentially dangerous drugs. And many of these drugs are created and distributed to treat the harm caused by last year's miracle drugs."

A recent article by Jim Evans a consultant on fitness for seniors and San Diego talk show host asserts people may take medications for non-existent problems, prescribed for them by doctors who for one reason or another don't have enough information about the patient.

Modern forensics principles declare that overmedication is one of the things to look for by medical examiners as a cause of death.

So, what are we to believe? It often seems that media is hinting that the medical industry is more interested in profit than the health of its customers. While the concept is not preposterous, it's highly unlikely that such a bias is a part of any conscious plan to heedlessly do harm to its customer base. Similarly, fast food chains, although often doing so, probably have no specific plans to get us fat and raise our cholesterol.

There may be specific instances of abuses; from the volume of citations on the web, it seems that medications for behavior modification as well as medications routinely given to elders and possibly women, as noted above, may seem to be a problem. But the fact is that we all need to carefully screen the medications we take.

What has really happened is that after drug companies and pharmaceuticals were permitted to advertise, just like nail polish, perfume, soap and lawn fertilizer, we concluded we may need some of these pharmaceutical chemicals in the same way our gardens need lawn chemicals. So, now everyone who thinks they have something wrong sees a doctor who obviously prescribes something, and we're caught up in a trap. "I did it because the doctor told me to."

The question is how much to listen to advertising, and there are examples of advertising working too well; after all, we don't need the fast food calories; we don't need the extra fertilizer; how much medicine do we need? The answer is we have all the good advice we need from the same sources we get our bad advice; the media:

"Read the labels on the bottles or the inserts that came with your medications and check for unexpected side effects when taken with other medications or even with certain foods or nutritional supplements. If you have any questions ask your pharmacist.

"If you are seeing specialists who prescribe something, check with your primary care physician to be sure there's no conflict with something you are already taking. And, of course carry a complete list of all your medications and share it with all of your physicians including dentists and oral surgeons as well as eye doctors.

"Ask your primary care physician why you are taking certain medications — particularly if you feel you don't have the condition for which the medication is supposedly designated. Educate yourself to ask the right questions and take control of your health. After all, you (or your insurance company) is paying the bill. Make sure you get what you are paying for.

"When starting new medications, ask your doctor about prescribing the lowest dose possible to help your condition. Side effects at a lower dosage means not to increase the dosage.

Stay active, even if it takes an effort. Remember, if you don't use it, you'll lose it, and that goes for your mind as well as your body. Something as simple as walking or climbing stairs a few more times a day can help to control your weight and metabolize your medications more efficiently.

But above all, use commonsense.

The truth about blogs

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I didn't realize that the marriage of former First Lady Hillary and her husband, First Philanderer Bill, had reached such a sanguine stage until I read last week that Hillary had been awarded a Purple Heart.

Several thousand veterans must have read the same news item because they were reported to be up in arms over the alleged presentation to a civilian of the medal which is reserved for those are wounded or killed in combat.

The false item was on Wikipedia for 132 days.

Of course, Bill himself might have deserved one for the wounds he suffered from flying pots and pans in the White House kitchen in the wake of the Monica Lewinski affair. But I digress.

The problem with the story of Hillary's Purple Heart was that it wasn't quite accurate.

True, the Military Order of the Purple Heart did present an award to Hillary for her help, as a senator, in preserving a Purple Heart postage stamp and establishing Aug. 7 as Purple Heart Recognition Day.

But the story reported on the politically conservative blog NewsMax.com began: "New York Sen. Hillary Clinton has put in for a Purple Heart award — and she received the decoration yesterday."

Could it be that Newsmax.com is gearing up to do to Hillary what the Swift Boat Veterans for Truth did to John Kerry when she runs for reelection in November and runs for something else in 2008?

Blogs and the Internet are probably the most far-reaching and, in most cases, the best development in the news business since television made current events move across the screen and into our living rooms. But who among them can you trust?

The poster boy for misinformation on the Internet is John Seigenthaler, the retired NBC newsman, who was trolling through his own biography on Wikipedia, the popular, online encyclopedia, when he came across this notation:

"For a brief time, he (Seigenthaler) was thought to have been directly involved in the Kennedy assassinations of John and his brother, Bobby. Nothing was ever proven."

This was news to Seigenthaler and everyone else, including the wildest conspiracy theorist.

Naturally, he wanted to find out who planted the lie in his biography. Wikipedia could only give him an Internet Protocol Number 65-81-97-208, an unidentified customer of Bell South, which promised an investigation that went nowhere.

Eventually, a Nashville, Tenn., man confessed that he planted the false entry as a joke. "I didn't think anyone would ever take it seriously for more than a few seconds," he said.

The false item was on Wikipedia for 132 days. The free encyclopedia has had as many as 16 million hits in a month. It was picked up by Reference.com, Answers.com and who knows how many other Internet sites. How many took it serious?

In the course of covering scores of elections, national, state and local, since 1952, I have received tips of congressional wannabes driving drunk, a city councilor out with a woman not his wife, state senators molesting kids and yada, yada, yada.

None were provable and none saw the light of print.

Can we say the same for the blogs?

Override gains support from parents

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Some Cohasset residents still have the Olympics on their minds and have instructed the School Committee and Board of Selectmen to "go for the gold."

At a joint budget meeting held Monday, and a Board of Selectmen's meeting Tuesday, parents came out to support going for an override which could be as much as $1.9 million. Roughly $1.3 million would be for the schools, while the general government budget would receive roughly $488,000 for improvements and $155,000 to pay the benefits for the new school personnel hired as a result of the additional school funding.

"There is nothing frivolous in these budgets. It's critical to have an infrastructure you can depend on," said Meg Bertolami, 24 Stevens Lane. She added she was shocked to hear of the lack of manpower at the fire department due to funding issues, as well as the lack of supplies at the schools. "It's the whole picture," she said.

The school department says it needs an increase of roughly 7 percent every year just to open the doors, and past budgets have resulted in many setbacks. With a 13.3 percent increase, it will take a small step forward to being where it would like to be.

"This budget moves us forward, but not at great leaps and bounds," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy, as year after year, the schools are only given enough money to temporarily stop the bleeding. "We've had a wound and we've put a band aid on it. This year, stitch it closed and let us heal," she said.

While an override this year will help get things back on track, with the 7 percent necessary every year just to cover the fixed costs means even with a large override this year, taxpayers are not necessarily off the hook for fiscal 2008.

Members of the committee said they were going to certify a budget figure of $13,987,198 during a public budget hearing Thursday, after the Mariner went to press. That figure would be a 13.3 percent increase over last year's allocation, and would require a roughly $1.3 million override for the school department alone.

"The budget was built from the bottom up and we're going to stand behind that number," said School Committee member Rick Flynn.

Without a Prop. 2-1/2 override, the school department must work with a 3 percent increase for fiscal 2007. Three percent is an increase of roughly $370,000, which would give the school department a budget of $12,714,714.

Resident Mark Flibotte listens closely as town officials discuss the override numbers for the school budget last Monday evening.

Town Manager Bill Griffin discusses the possible override figures during Monday's budget summit with the School Committee, Advisory Committee and Selectmen.

Advisory Committee chairman Donna McGee offers suggestions on how to reduce the override figure during Monday's budget summit at the middle-high school library.

The fiscal 2006 school department budget was $12,344,382. To cover contractual obligations and fixed costs alone, it will need $637,109. Couple that with $238,655 for a cost of living increase for teachers (the teacher's contract is not yet settled), and the school department automatically needs $13,220,146.

Town Manager Bill Griffin's total recommended school department budget, at $12,714,714, leaves the school department with a shortfall of $505,432 just to stay where it is. The school department would like to add new personnel, in the amount of $581,759, as well as some program improvements for $185,293. To make that dream a reality, the school department would need a $1,272,484 override.

If the town was to go for the $1.9 million override and it failed, on the school side there would automatically be a $266,778 shortfall for contractual obligations, as those obligations total $637,109 and the Town Manager allocated $370,331 total for the schools.

There would also be no cost of living increase included in the budget, which would be an additional $238,635 shortfall. Coupled with the contractual obligations shortfall, the schools would have to make $505,413 in cuts just to maintain the services it currently does.

To make up that $505,413, no new personnel would be hired. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she has also considered not filling positions if staff members decide to retire this year. She said there are currently five contemplating retirement, which if not filled would yield $265,000.

Without new personnel, Walsh said there will be no new adjustment counselor for grades six through 12, which she said has been an issue for the past two years. The ratio for guidance staff to students at the middle school is more than 400 to one. School safety concerns would not be addressed without an evening custodian at Osgood and Deer Hill or a resource officer for the district.

There would also be no new elective offerings at the middle-high school due to a lack of staff, and more students would be enrolled in study halls, rather than taking the upper level English, math, or foreign language classes. An additional $248,402 would be cut in various supplies and materials, including textbooks.

The Board of Selectmen has not yet voted on what would be included in the $488,000 figure (the town portion of the proposed override), but has plans to go through its needs and prioritize them on Tuesday, March 7 with the Advisory Committee.

Where did the roughly $1.3 million school override figure come from?

School budget allocation for FY06	$12,344,382
Manager's recommended FY07 school budget	$12,714,714
Difference	$370,332
Contractual obligations/fixed costs for FY07	$637,109
COLA increase (placeholder until contract settled)	$238,655
Minus the $370,332 allocated by the town equals	$505,432
Add program improvements ($185,293)	$690,725
Add new personnel ($581,759)	$1,272,48

Why a 13.3 percent increase?

- To support the district's Strategic Plan.
- To meet the needs of contractual obligations (salaries) and fixed costs.
- To expand Cohasset's full day kindergarten program (maintain class size at 17).
- To establish and maintain class size, k-12, at levels that are supported by research recommendations.
- To provide curriculum offerings in health for all students at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.
- To reduce class sizes at the middle and high school — foreign language, music, English, mathematics.
- To provide additional student support in grades 6-12.
- To provide reading support for middle school teachers/students as Action Planning Committee recommended.
- To provide an athletic trainer (.5) to meet MIAA requirements and reduce cost of hiring EMTs to cover necessary athletic programs.
- To provide professional development opportunities and consultants to support teachers in reading and math instruction.
- To increase school safety (provide additional building security with two evening custodians at Osgood and Deer Hill and a secretary/receptionist at the high school).
- To expand studies in the area of engineering and technology (beginning with grade 8).
- To expand enrichment opportunities during the school day at Deer Hill.
- To add a school resource officer to provide collaborative support for parents, students, and staff.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

The official list from the state treasurer's office of "per diems" collected by state legislators in 2005 for "mileage, meals and lodging" expenses reveals that through December 31, lawmakers have collected a total of $614,667. Per diems are paid by the state to senators and representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These per diems are paid to legislators above and beyond their annual salaries which range from a low of $55,569.41 for rank and file members to a high of $90,569.41 for the House speaker and Senate president. The 2005 statistics indicate that legislators received annual payments ranging from $10 to $16,110 and that 41 legislators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. These figures are not necessarily the final ones for 2005. State law does not establish a deadline that legislators must meet in order to collect the per diems. Critics say that some legislators will wait several more months into 2006 before they file for additional per diems from 2005 in order to avoid having their full payments appear on the initial list released by the state treasurer's office.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a legislator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These payments are not taxable and range from $10 per day for legislators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Legislators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones that collect the highest total of annual per diems.

The Legislature approved, as part of the state budget in 2000, a provision doubling these per diems to the current amounts. Supporters of the hikes said that the per diems had not been raised for many years despite the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. Some opponents said that the hikes were excessive while others argued that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous. They noted that other state workers and most private workers are not paid additional money for commuting. The House and Senate did not hold a separate roll call vote directly on the doubling of the per diem. The hike was included as a small section of the comprehensive $21.5 billion fiscal 2001 state budget that was approved on roll call votes by both branches.

The legislator who received the most money in 2005 was Rep. Daniel E. Bosley (D-North Adams) with $16,110. The other top ten recipients include Rep. William Pignatelli (D-Lenox) $13,230; Rep. Denis E. Guyer (D-Dalton) $10,332; Rep. John W. Scibak (D-South Hadley) $9,480; Rep. Stephen Kulik (D-Worthington) $9,102; Sen. Stanley C. Rosenberg (D-Amherst) $8,760; Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) $8,580; Rep. John P. Fresolo (D-Worcester) $8,460; Rep. John J. Binienda (D-Worcester) $8,388; Sen. Michael R. Knapik (R-Westfield) $8,250 and Rep. Peter V. Kocot (D-Northampton) $8,250.

LOCAL LEGISLATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2005
Here are the numbers of days that local legislators certified that they were at the Statehouse in 2005. The dollar figure is the total amount of per diem money that the state paid the legislator in 2005. A total of 41 legislators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that these 41 legislators were never at the Statehouse in 2005. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

TAX DEDUCTION FOR HOME HEATING- Beacon Hill Roll Call has received several inquiries from readers about the status of legislation allowing taxpayers to deduct a portion of home heating oil costs. The legislation was in fact signed into law in November by Gov. Romney. The new law allows up to an $800 tax deduction for the purchase of home heating oil, natural gas and propane between November 1, 2005 and March 31, 2006 by individuals who earn less than $50,000 per year and families that earn less than $75,000. For more information go online to www.dor.state.ma.us/help/guides/abate_amend/Personal/Issues/HomeHeating.htm

Another new tax break provides up to a $600 tax credit to all taxpayers for the winter purchase of energy efficient residential home heating items including home insulation, new window installation and fuel efficient furnaces and boilers. For more information go online to www.dor.state.ma.us/help/guides/abate_amend/Personal/Issues/HomeHeatingCredit.htm

CANCER PRESUMPTION (S 2257)- The House and Senate approved and Gov. Mitt Romney signed into law legislation expanding to officers of the state police K-9 unit the protections of the current law that creates a presumption that certain types of cancer in a police officer or firefighter is a result of their job. The law places the burden on insurance carriers to refute the presumption by proving that the illness resulted from something other than the worker's job.

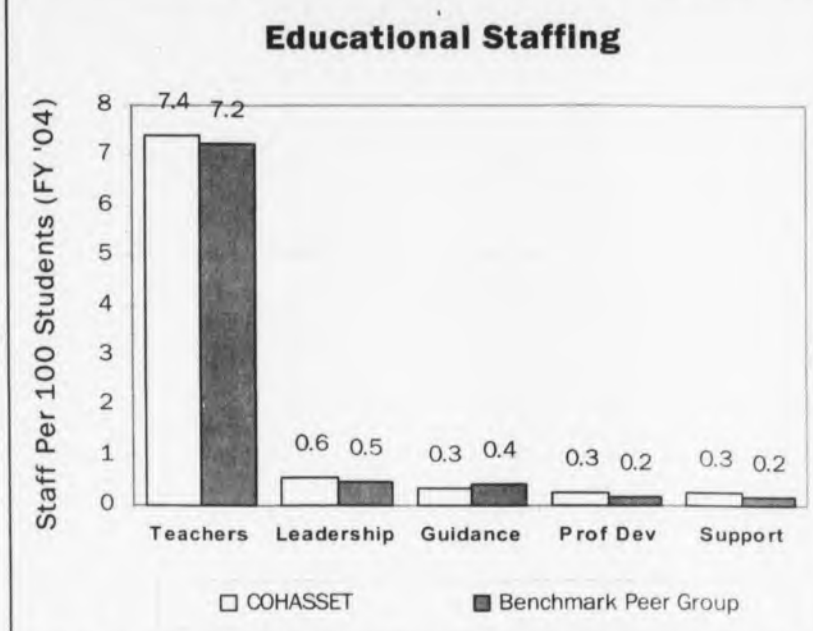
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (ww.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. Staff data is for instructional staff. Teachers does not include paraprofessionals. Guidance includes guidance counselors and psychological services. Professional Development includes instructional coordinators and professional development. Support includes library, technology and media services.

This chart breaks down Cohasset's educational staffing in 2004 per hundred students. Education staffing includes teachers, district and school leadership, guidance counselors and providers of psychological services, instructional coordinators and professional development, and library, technology and media services. This chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By looking at staffing by functional category, one can get a sense for how a school district has allocated its staff to serve its student population.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

Last week, the Cohasset Mariner began to publish a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

"Our goal is to help improve municipal decision-making by providing access to better information," said General Manager Ken Strachan.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Municipal Benchmarking was founded over two years ago by two "frustrated citizens," said Strachan.

Founders Tom Cronin and Bill Haylon had gotten involved in town meetings in their respective hometowns. Long time businessmen, they were surprised at the lack of a source of cheap and readily accessible data and analysis to help communities make more-informed decisions about issues such as pay packages for municipal managers or the need for a Proposition 2 1/2 override. They founded Municipal Benchmarking to fill that void.

"Our goal is to help improve municipal decision-making by providing access to better information.
—Ken Strachan,Municipal Benchmarking

They talked about the idea with Cronin's college classmate Warren E. Tolman, a former state senator and 2002 gubernatorial candidate. Tolman, a longtime proponent of smart government, "loved the idea," said Strachan, and started working with the company.

"City and town officials face tough fiscal constraints and must balance competing constituent demands. I believe that having quality information and analysis — like that provided by Municipal Benchmarking — is essential for making the best of these difficult decisions," said Tolman, who is now Municipal Benchmark's chairman.

The company's methodology stems from the idea that one can learn a lot about how and how not to deliver services by looking at how other similar communities provide those same services. The cornerstone of this approach is to find an appropriate group of similar communities. Municipal Benchmarking derives a community's Benchmark Peer Group by comparing it to the other 350 communities in Massachusetts across 15 different variables.

The variables measure socio-economic factors, such as income per capita or median family income, demographic information, such as population and portion of the population that speaks English as a second language, and geographic factors, such as how big the community is and how many miles of road it contains.

"By looking at the dynamics that shape a community, we can find communities that have similar resources and face similar demands from their citizens, and are a good basis of comparison," said Strachan.

Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group consists of: Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall. That report, at Cohasset's request, includes Marion and Hingham in the top 20 list of comparable towns. Municipal Benchmarking LLC allows towns to swap out two or three of their top-20 towns for other towns they would like to see themselves measured up against. Cohasset chose to include Marion and Hingham instead of its number 19 and 20 towns, Wenham and Winchester, which are included in the analysis depicted in the chart. Hingham and Marion would have been numbers 23 and 34 respectively, and therefore Strachan said including their data would not skew Cohasset's results.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the School Committee candidates: The school system is talking about an override of at least $1 million to keep the district moving forward. With a failed override last year, and the town's history of passing substantially smaller overrides, is this a wise move?*

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Barbara Buckley

I fully support the proposed FY07 budget and override as presented by Dr. Walsh and the School Committee. This budget was built upon Cohasset's Strategic Plan and requests funding for what is actually needed to begin to restore the quality in our schools. Many bright people with varying priorities and viewpoints worked on the Plan. It would be unwise to create a budget that doesn't fulfill the Plan's broad goals.

I view the budget through a teacher's eyes, and I see essential personnel, support and supplies for classrooms. Not fat. Not waste. We can all agree that 28 students in a second grade classroom is unacceptable. As enrollment continues to grow, we need to provide the teachers, paraprofessionals, support personnel, classroom furnishings, textbooks and educational equipment necessary to accommodate these additional students.

Nearly half the override amount is for new personnel (and it's no wonder additional teachers are needed when our enrollment is growing by an average of 2.8 percent per year) and program improvements, such as expanding full-day kindergarten, replacing outdated textbooks and increasing course offerings. CHS upper-classmen don't belong in study halls. They belong in AP classes and exciting electives that will prepare them for the challenging college years ahead.

What is even more telling is what has not been included in the budget. Significant repairs and maintenance to all three schools, MCAS tutoring, middle school paraprofessionals and technology department line items as recommended, all have been shelved for FY07. These exclusions, and many more as outlined in the budget document, show that the budget is a trim one. The Cohasset Public Schools' mission statement indicates that achieving excellence is paramount. Voters need to decide if they are indeed committed to excellence or merely satisfied with mediocrity. A yes vote for the override says yes to excellence.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Rick Flynn

Yes. The job of the School Committee is to advocate for the school community in the context of the town as a whole. During my tenure as a School Committee member I believe we have taken the budgets presented to us by the administration and tried to responsibly review those requests to provide the best educational program. In some years this has meant substantial cuts to initial budget requests and in others a strong backing for budgets as presented. However, in all cases my belief has been that the citizens should have the final say at the ballot box.

In many instances that has meant successful Proposition 2-1/2 overrides and in others failed overrides. But in all instances the voters had the final say. At the same time this is not just a case of the School Committee operating in a vacuum to review and decide on the final budgets. Before final decisions are made budgets are exhaustively vetted by many groups from the PSO to the Board of Selectmen to the Advisory Board.

When the Mariner asks if our budget request is a wise move, my answer has less to do with the decision of the School Committee and much more to do with the strong input I have received from concerned school and non-school citizens. I have been strongly urged to move forward with a budget request that will positively move our district forward in terms of lower class sizes, additional elective offerings and a teacher's contract that reflects strong support for our staff. My sincere hope is that the voters who we are advocating for show up at the polls and support their position.

Without that follow through, many of the budget discussions we are currently undertaking become hollow exercises and our "commitment to excellence" becomes a path to mediocrity.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Steve Fusco

I believe Dr. Walsh and the school committee should present a single number they believe will move our schools forward. This override will pass only if they then can successfully educate the public about the details of their request and negative implications of not passing the override. The school committee should hold a series of public forums, post the budget on the web, and use articles in the Mariner to highlight critical areas of the budget. Many people in town seem to know the dollar amount of the override, but few have any specific knowledge of the line items.

Reducing the total override amount in the hope that it will be more palatable to voters would be shortsighted and would imply some portion of the requested funds is not absolutely necessary.

Unfortunately, we need an override just to maintain our current fiscal obligations. Higher costs for personnel, energy, insurance, books, technology, as well as an increasing student body are continually increasing our fixed expenses, even without adding staff or new curriculum offerings. The question we must ask ourselves in the face of declining MCAS scores, class size increases, and significant parent dissatisfaction, are we as a community looking to maintain the status quo or are we looking for improvement?

This vote is as much about how we feel about ourselves as a town as it is about anything. What value do we place on our schools and our reputation? That said, there are some people in town on fixed incomes who feel they simply cannot afford to pay more taxes or fees. Like in any democracy, the majority must decide. I feel that once people have a detailed understanding of the funding requests, they will do what is right for our town and our schools

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Lee Jenkins

Some additions in the proposed '07 budget — teachers for math, languages, programs for accelerated learners, textbooks — have merit. Other additions — nighttime custodians to check windows and doors, — make no sense. The administration should be applying their management skills to address quality of effort issues instead of just inflating payroll.

After the '06 Budget override failed the Superintendent and School Committee had a wonderful opportunity to show they got the message. The popular misconception is voters said "No" to teachers and our children, but many voters told me they said "No" to unaccountable spending — schools should spend money as if it is their personal budget.

They did not get the message. Despite pleas from the community, the current school committee voted 3-2 in June to eliminate teachers and add administrative positions. Many people, myself included, also questioned fee for service costs, and whether non-core programs were cost neutral. For instance, the Town of Milton, our benchmark for pricing full-day kindergarten at $1,800, never had a full-day program; neither do our surrounding towns. Only the towns of Sharon and Plymouth have a tuition-based program — both charging $4,000/student. Without applying the real cost of a full-day kindergarten in a clean, heated, air-conditioned room with the teacher/student ratio parents want, the Superintendent is taking necessary funds away from the students we are mandated to educate.

The Benchmark study states Cohasset has been providing more per pupil spending than our peer group, but more dollars have not produced better test scores as seen in MCAS results or curriculum as reported by the Curriculum Review Committee.

Until the schools provide a budget that is not obscured by misleading offsets, net costs, and a substantial lack of detail, the voters won't know if the dollars are earmarked for the classrooms to improve education.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMAN

For the Selectman candidates: Given the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2, how can the Town reconcile its needs to deliver services provided by employees (teachers, police, fire, public works, etc.) when salaries and benefits are the largest line items in the budget and rise faster than 2-1/2 percent per year?*

SELECTMAN/Ted Carr

When costs rise faster than revenues, there are only two ways to have a balanced budget: 1) increase revenues; or 2) decrease costs. As Selectman, I would search for additional revenue sources to fund our town's strategic objectives and would remove any unnecessary expenditure. If the budget remained unbalanced, however, Cohasset voters would need to express their preference for spending versus taxing.

Regarding revenues, Proposition 2-1/2 limits increases in taxes on real and personal property. Other sources of town revenues such as excise taxes, permit and license fees, state funding, and an expanding tax base are not constrained by Proposition 2-1/2. If elected, I would find creative ways to increase revenues from sources other than property taxes, applying my state and Federal connections to obtain local funding and exploring sustainable opportunities for town growth.

Reducing costs may be more difficult. After 25 years of scrutiny under Proposition 2-1/2, our town budget already is lean. It received a shock in 2004 when decreased state funding under Chapter 70 simultaneously reduced our revenues and increased our town's educational costs. One area I would explore is whether competitive procurement can generate further savings. Regardless, we currently have an immediate shortfall that needs to be addressed.

While adding to this dilemma, Proposition 2-1/2 also provides the answer. Proposition 2-1/2 allows a community to pass a town referendum to override its limitations on property taxes. The override can reference either specific or general funding requirements, on either a temporary or permanent basis. If budget scrutiny and alternative revenues cannot balance the budget on an ongoing basis, an override can provide the solution. In this way, Proposition 2-1/2 puts the ultimate decision of whether to raise property taxes in the hands of the right people — the taxpayers of Cohasset.

SELECTMAN/Roger Hill

First, creating a bigger commercial tax base, this can take some of the pressure off of the homeowners in town. Currently, approximately 90%+ of our town's tax revenues come from single-family homeowners. In essence, we are a "bedroom community." While it has its advantages in that we have a New England Village, when it comes to taxes the homeowner gets hit the hardest. That is why creating more of a commercial tax base will help resolve some of the problem. We have to very carefully balance this growth to ensure it is within the character of Cohasset. The Growth Committee has been looking precisely at this option and their work should be continued with the other town boards as well.

Second, the majority of our town services are spent on salaries. We must ensure when negotiating our contracts that a balance is struck so that the contracts are both fair and equitable to the town and to its employees. It is of great concern that many of our town employees can't afford to live in town anymore.

Thirdly, when looking to the future, we need to make a concerted effort to reduce the town debt. While the town has made strides in investing in new facilities, the obligations to pay them are still with us and will be a long time. Right now, 14 percent of our budget is spent on paying debt when most towns our size are in 5-10 percent category. Once some of the debts are paid off it will create room in the budget for other priorities.

It will not be easy and will take time, but we need to find solutions together as a town.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For both school committee and selectman candidates: When it comes to the budget, the town appears to be split into two distinct "camps" – the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communication and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the "two sides?"

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Buckley announces run for school committee

Barbara Buckley

My name is Barbara Buckley and I am running for School Committee.

- Resident since 1998
- Math teacher at Hingham Middle School, previously taught grades 2 & 3 at Osgood
- Family – husband Jack teaches at Cohasset High School, 3 boys, ages 7, 9, 10
- Chair of the Save Three Teachers fund, frequent volunteer in the schools

I am running for School Committee because:

- I am an advocate for students and will approach all School Committee matters from that vantage point.
- I know what quality classrooms and schools look like, how they work and what they need. I can offer this important perspective to allow us make the decisions that will be most beneficial to students.
- Through my classroom work, I know where dollars provide the most return on the investment we make.
- My family is one that cannot afford continually increasing taxes. I will work with town committees and the schools' administration to scrutinize every expenditure.
- I will work with other School Committees, Superintendents, and Parent/ School organizations in Massachusetts to ceaselessly lobby the state for restoration of local aid to towns. I intend to take a leadership role in this regard.

On April 8, I hope voters will join me in putting students first and allow me the privilege of serving on the School Committee.

Jenkins cites her experience, leadership

Leonora C. Jenkins

Leonora C. Jenkins enthusiastically announces her candidacy for the three-year term on the Cohasset School Committee.

"I am a candidate for a seat on the School Committee because I believe we can and must provide our children with the education they need to succeed in today's competitive world and that there are fresh and creative ways to achieve this goal by intelligently managing the growth of our school system.

"Our schools are where the foundation of our children's learning and social skills are formed. To ensure a nurturing environment, we must be vigilant in maintaining an exceptional quality of teachers, administration, curriculum, and programs. However, our schools exist within the context of our community and we need to be aware of the impact the cost of education has on our community as a whole.

"We can meet the challenge of keeping a balance between community and school needs by being more focused on keeping the dollars in the classroom, and by reevaluating existing assumptions and operating procedures. In short by creating an action plan of 'Progress Through Priorities'.

"My priorities begin with:

- Focusing resources in the classroom
- Providing a strong basic foundation in areas of study essential to our students' lifelong success
- Returning Cohasset to one of the top school districts in the state
- Taming the growth in administrative and non-classroom positions
- Creating annual budgets with Proposition 2-1/2 in mind while being aware of the current budget for potential deficits and enacting immediate solutions.

"Public education is a big business and its success needs to be assessed both financially and qualitatively, using real numbers and agreed upon benchmarks – otherwise our students will be short changed.

"At the April '05 Annual Town Meeting the report issued by the School Budget Investigation Committee made three key recommendations: to develop a truly realistic and balanced school budget within available revenues, to share with and disseminate financial information to the Town; and to put an end to the idea that overrides are an annual necessity.

"The Benchmark Study shows us Cohasset's district funded per pupil spending is $181 above our peer group and $1,223 above Hingham. The Massachusetts Department of Revenue lists Cohasset as #9 in the state for average real estate taxes: $2,429 more than Hingham. More money per pupil, more tax dollars per household, and yet at 1100 Cohasset's SAT scores are less than those of Hingham at 1160.

"As a resident of Cohasset since 1978, I have a unique historical perspective on how as the community has steadily increased funding for the schools, the elected officials and administrators have failed to keep the dollars in the classroom, or to provide the educational alternatives of other public schools. Parents and taxpayers deserve better.

"They deserve a leader who will bring the needed oversight to the School Committee that was found totally absent by the School Budget Investigation Committee. A leader who will return accountability and credibility to the school system. A leader who will work with the town-side to effect economies in shared expenses. A leader who will work to correct the issues of concern identified by the Cohasset Curriculum Renewal Committee in November 2005. A leader who will identify priorities and vote to keep teachers, not cut teachers while increasing administration as our current school committee voted in June. Parents deserve a leader who will work diligently to foster a 'culture of learning' in our schools.

"The time is now. Together we must apply innovative thinking to find solutions to the challenges facing our schools and ultimately our community. Together we can do better."

'Lee' and her husband, Leland, have been town residents for 27 years raising and educating their two daughters, Jessica and Rebecca in the Cohasset schools. She volunteered extensively particularly in school math, computer, art and music programs.

Lee has served on the Cultural Exchange Committee and the Council on Aging and was an active member of the Community Center on both the Board of Directors and the Program Committee. She was also a Brownie Leader, Youth Symphony Coordinator, Sunday school teacher, host mother for 23 foreign students and teachers, METCO Host mother and currently is a member of the Community Garden Club. Lee co-founded the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers which has been looking to achieve fiscal responsibility and accountability in all town finances.

Jenkins has a B.A. in Psychology from Rosemont College and has extensive experience in the Public Sector. Currently, a local small business owner, Lee realizes the importance of commonsense and sound business practices in creating and working within an approved budget.

Book signing at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will host a book signing by Jennifer Grisdale Krieger, formerly of Cohasset, on Sunday, March 5, 2-4 p.m., at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street.

"What? No Spaghetti and Meatballs?!? A charming collection of stories and musings about everyday life in a culturally diverse family," is about a proper Bostonian who marries a "good Jewish boy from Brooklyn," with an older sister who married an Italian Catholic.

Krieger is an award-winning journalist and non-fiction writer, but most importantly, she is a mother, and a staunch advocate of the family unit (La Famiglia!). If you like Dave Barry or Erma Bombeck, you will enjoy her talk. For more information, please call the Society at 781-383-1434, or email at cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Straughn's goal in extra period sends Cohasset to next round of tournament

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High hockey team was an infirmary on ice Monday night.

With most of the boys playing with a fever that spread throughout the Skippers locker room late last week, it sure didn't help matters when Cohasset's Division 3 South preliminary round game with Southeastern Regional went into overtime.

Fortunately for the Skippers, senior winger Brian Straughn made sure that overtime didn't last too long.

Just 20 seconds into the extra frame, Straughn broke up a 3-on-1 in the neutral zone with a back-check and went the other way on a break-in. After making a good move around a Southeastern defenseman, Straughn let go a wrister from the top of the circle.

"The first eight minutes are crucial; we can't get down too far too early. If we can stay within a goal after that first period, I think we have a chance."
Cohasset head coach Ben Virga

The shot trickled through the goalie's legs and into the net, giving the Skippers a scintillating 3-2 win at Asiaf Rink on the Brockton High School campus. As a result, Cohasset traveled to Natick last night to take on third-seeded Medfield in a first round match-up played after the Mariner went to press.

Cohasset head coach Ben Virga said he and assistant Ryan Murray would have a good sense if their team had a chance at the upset after the first eight minutes of the game.

"We can't be a half-step slow at the beginning of the game. If we are, it's over," Virga said Wednesday. "The first eight minutes are crucial; we can't get down too far too early. If we can stay within a goal after that first period, I think we have a chance.

"Our problem lately has been that we go into a big game and get down 3-0 after five minutes, and it's really tough to come back from that."

That problem was at its worst in the Skippers' final two regular season games against Pembroke and Westwood. Cohasset was down 6-0 after the first against Pembroke, and wound up losing 8-6. Westwood blew out the Skippers by a 9-0 score.

Straughn concurs with his coaches' emphasis on coming out strong at the beginning of last night's game.

"The key to both those games [Pembroke and Westwood] was that we started terrible," said the tri-captain Wednesday night. "We have to put that first goal in against Medfield."

The Skippers' chances of doing that would be helped immensely with some good

CHS lady hoopsters get a second chance

First round win over Bristol-Plymouth sets up rematch with Cathedral

By Mark Goodman

Div. 4 South tourney
Skippers @ Cathedral
Today, 5 p.m.

Directions to the game

- On Route 93-North, take Exit 18 and turn right onto Massachusetts Avenue
- At the intersection of Mass Ave. and Harrison Avenue, turn left onto Harrison Avenue
- Turn left onto Northampton Street
- Pull into parking garage on the left. The South End Fitness Center gymnasium is on the fourth floor.

Last year's Cohasset High girls basketball season ended with a loss to Cathedral in the Division 4 state tournament.

Tonight, the Lady Skippers are hoping to administer some payback.

After Tuesday night's 52-28 win over Bristol-Plymouth in Taunton, Cohasset gets another crack at the Roxbury-based school. Tip-off is scheduled for 5 p.m.

Senior co-captain Mia Lieb-Lappen says she and her teammates are confident they can make things different this time around.

"We're a different team this year," Lieb-Lappen said. "Last year, Casey (Anderson) was our go-to person. This year, our scoring is much more spread out.

"The first time we went there, I think we were intimidated by the atmosphere; we were totally blown out of sync. Personally, I'm happy we got a rematch."

Turnovers was the Skippers' main problem against Cathedral last season. The team was without injured starting point guard Chelsea Grossman in that game, and Lieb-Lappen and fellow senior captain Katie James both said Wednesday that having Grossman this time around will make a huge difference.

Sci-Coh swimmers reflect on successful season

The Cohasset-Scituate High School Swim team season culminated this past weekend at the state championships.

The Division 2 boys state championship meet was held at MIT on Saturday. James Smith III, a Scituate senior, placed seventh in the 100 fly with a time of 57.40.

Other swimmers participating in individual events and in the 400 relay were Scituate junior Rob Lilly, Cohasset sophomore Jonny Drybanski and Cohasset junior Colin Conway. Each participant achieved a personal best for their swims and set new team records.

The Division 1 girls state meet was held Sunday at Wellesley College. Caitlin Little, a senior from Scituate, finished sixth in the 50 free with a time of 25.63, which was a personal best time and set a new team record. In addition, Little placed 17th in the 100 free, which also set a new team record.

Little was joined by Scituate freshman Julia Rogers, Cohasset freshmen Torey Hart and Alison Costa, and Cohasset senior and team captain Mamme Daley to swim the 200 medley relay and the 400 free relay.

"This was a fantastic way to end this season," said head coach Jon Fortin. "We had so many achieve personal bests this year. To place second in the league, to have many attend sectionals and to have this number qualify for states was awesome.

"This group paved the path for this team to become a powerhouse."
Head coach Jon Fortin

"Even more important to me are the unspoken heroes of this team - those swimmers who came to practice every day and achieved personal bests and grew not only as athletes and swimmers but as team participants. To watch this group grow through failures and successes and to develop life skills that one learns not always in the classroom but on the playing fields was rewarding to me, personally. This group paved the path for this team to become a powerhouse. We have such strong summer swim teams in both towns that it makes sense to have a strong high school program as well. And this team should be proud of their individual accomplishments as well as the way they developed as a team."

GIRLS TRAVEL BASKETBALL REPORT

Streaking Sevens snare sixth straight

Despite playing with a roster depleted by a combination of illness, injury, and vacation schedules, the Cohasset 7th grade girls basketball team rolled to its sixth straight victory by a 30-17 margin over Hanson Sunday afternoon at the Cohasset High gym.

In addition to the aforementioned obstacles, the girls also had to combat the expected rust and lack of conditioning accumulated from the vacation layoff. Indeed, signs of rust abounded in the first half, as a lack of timing, a collective poor shooting touch, and overall lazy ballhandling conspired to limit the Cohasset girls to just nine points – and only two field goals – in the first half.

However, their defense held firm and thanks to a combination of a tight 2-3 zone and a full-court man-to-man defense, the Bue & White managed to take a 9-8 edge into the intermission.

Some timely coaching tips at the half about passing to the right spots, combined with a renewed focus by the Cohasset girls, resulted in a Blue & White run at the start of the second half which saw their lead quickly zoom to 16-8. Lindsay Davis sank a bucket from outside, Carli Haggerty worked some magic inside, and Kate French scored on a nice move to the hoop to propel the Seven-Ups into a commanding lead which they continued to build upon.

Although Hanson stopped the Cohasset momentum to make it 16-10, the Blue & White hit the gas again to boost the margin to 22-10 with about five minutes to go – and it was lights out for Hanson.

Seven of the eight Seven Ups who suited up figured in the scoring, with Haggerty leading the way with 14 points (including 6-of-8 from the free throw line), Davis hitting for six, French scoring four, Amy Costa and Emma Musto notching a hoop apiece, and Rachel Fredey and Caroline Fein sinking a free throw each.

Logan Pratt also contributed some valuable rebounding and made the nicest assist of the day on a nice give-and-go from the corner to Musto.

The contest was of huge significance for the Sevens because it pushed them slightly past Hanson in the race for second place, which earns a bye in the opening round of the playoffs. Both Cohasset and Hanson now are 9-4 in the division (9-5 overall), but Cohasset has the edge if it comes down to tiebreakers.

However, the Blue & White girls still must win their next two games, this Saturday at Weymouth and Sunday at home vs. Norwell, if they are to be assured of claiming the second spot. But, with injuries and illnesses still plaguing the team (only six girls were able to make the Tuesday practice this week), the Seven-Ups must re-energize their efforts and their focus if they want that bye.

V-Eights fall to Hanson

The 8th graders played league-leading Hanson this past Sunday and lost 30-18. Cohasset played shorthanded with only six players, as four girls were unavailable to play because of vacation absences and injury.

Nonetheless, the six players who were available, Tori Lehr, Isabelle Franklin, Erin Fontaine, Hannah Burgess, Lucy Noble and Chelsea Silvia, played hard and valiantly against a full complement of Hanson's tall and physical team. Relying on a tight 2-3 zone and outside shooting, the Blue & White girls were able to keep the game close in the first half, trailing only 18-12 at the break.

In the second half, the Cohasset six were noticeably tired and were unable to keep up the offensive production. Cohasset was led in scoring by Fontaine's five points (including a three point shot), Franklin's five points, Lehr's four, and two points apiece from Burgess and Silvia. As usual, Noble provided strong defense and rebounding.

For the year, the Cohasset V-8s are now 9-5 with the final two games this weekend before the playoffs start the following Friday.

health. Virga gave his players Tuesday and Wednesday off in hopes of allowing them to recuperate from Monday's game and fight off their current sickness.

It isn't often that a team doesn't practice between tournament games, but Virga said he felt he had to do it.

"I like our chances a lot better [against Medfield] if we're 100 percent healthy," said the third-year coach.

Against Southeastern, Cohasset carried play in the beginning and took advantage on a power play at the eight-minute mark of the first period. Junior defenseman Conor Holway pursued the puck into the corner in the offensive zone and made a nice centering pass to senior tri-captain Mark Bouchard, whose one-timer found the back of the net to give the Skippers a 1-0 lead.

It was around that time that Virga says the players' illness began to affect their play, and Southeastern would tie it up before the first intermission.

Cohasset still managed to keep their opponents off the board for most of the game, thanks to the strong play of defensemen Corbin Faber and Dan Sullivan.

"They were huge back there," Virga said. "Their back-checking was tremendous. Overall, they just did a great job."

The Skippers regained the lead halfway through the second when sophomore Charlie Czerkawski picked up a loose puck in the corner, skated in toward the crease and stuffed it in for a 2-1 Cohasset advantage.

The lead held until there were five minutes left in the game, when the Skippers lost a key face-off in their defensive zone. A couple missed assignments later, Southeastern had tied it.

Cohasset had to kill a penalty just a minute after that to help send the game into overtime, setting the stage for Straughn's dramatic goal.

So should the presence of Cohasset's freshman phenoms, Gabby Flibotte and Sam Lehr. Those two were up to their usual tricks on Tuesday, with Flibotte dropping a game-high 20 points and Lehr putting up a double-double (11 points, 15 rebounds).

Lieb-Lappen says that despite their relative tournament inexperience, Flibotte and Lehr will be up to the challenge in what figures to be a crazed postseason atmosphere.

"They're phenomenal, and they've done well under pressure all year," Lieb-Lappen said. "They'll be fine."

The play of Lehr could be especially key, as Cathedral, like most teams, don't have the height to match a quality 6-foot presence in the lane.

Cohasset will also need to stay out of foul trouble as, with James missing the tournament while recovering from knee surgery, the Skippers' starting five - which also features junior forward Lacey Richardson - plays just about the whole game.

The Skippers can also be counted on to stay with their trademark press defense, which has worked so well in the last month, continuing right into the game with Bristol-Plymouth.

"The press really helped us break them down, both defensively and offensively," James said.

The Cohasset-Cathedral winner will take on the victor of tonight's West Bridgewater-Marian game on Monday. Site and time were still to be determined as of the Mariner's press time.

SPORTS NOTES

Limited space left for spring lacrosse

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse has completed its spring registration period, but a limited number of roster spaces remain available at some age levels.

"We've been lucky to come through our registration period with just about our preferred roster sizes at all levels," says Chuck Jaffe, director of the program, which will field 14 boys and girls teams in grades 3-8 this spring. "We have just a few open spaces, and we will give them out on a first-come, first-served basis."

Jaffe notes that the lacrosse organization starts practices in early March and, each year, winds up with a few children who only decide that they want to play after a friend tells them about the start of workouts. Typically, at that point, it is too late to add the additional kids at that time.

"This year, more than most, we may have some extra flexibility – particularly on the boys side of things," Jaffe says, "but ideally we will have everyone who wants to play signed up soon, before they wind up missing out."

Registration costs $150 for one player and $275 for two. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse begins practicing in March, completes its season in June and works throughout the spring to avoid scheduling conflicts with the other youth sports in town.

To get registration paperwork, contact Jaffe at CAJaffe@aol.com or at 781-383-9858.

For more information, visit www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Gymnastics and sports class registration

There are still openings for the following Session 2 gymnastics classes at the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset.

Mondays, 4:45-5:45 - Beginner/Intermediate girls, ages 7-12

Tuesdays, 1:45-2:30 - Tumble Bugs, boys and girls, age 3; 2:30-3:30 - Sports for Kids, boys and girls, ages 4-6; 3:30-4:30 - Sports for Kids, Ages 6-10, boys and girls

Wednesdays, 3:45-4:45 - Beginner/Intermediate girls, ages 5-8

Thursdays, 11-11:45 - Tumble Bugs, boys and girls, ages 3-4; 4:30-5:30 - Beginner/Intermediate girls, ages 7-12

Fridays, 11:45-12:45 - Gym Explorers, boys and girls, ages 4-6

Classes run through May. Call the South Shore Community Center for more information, (781) 383-0088.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse looking for coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season. Cohasset will field 14 teams this spring - for boys and girls in grades 3-8 - a number large enough to stretch the available coaching staff thin.

For the first time in several seasons, the shortage of coaches is a problem with the boys program, and not just the younger, emerging girls teams. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with roughly 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.

Throughout its history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills.

At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys and girls have one weekly practice, which is held on the weekend. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858, or write him at CAJaffe@aol.com.

Join the Boston Men's Baseball League

The Boston Men's Baseball League is now accepting registrations for the 2006 season.

The Boston Men's Baseball League provides amateur players of all ages (18+, 30+ and 40+) an opportunity to continue playing baseball. Teams are based in Boston and all around the Boston Metro suburban areas.

This coming season, we expect 53 teams and more than 1,000+ players – more than all other Boston area baseball leagues combined. In 2006, we will celebrate our 18th year and again be New England's largest amateur adult baseball league.

Players can pre-register now by visiting http://www.bostonbaseball.com. For those without internet access, please call 617-BASEBALL.

International basketball tour

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club invites applications for its 2006 Rovers team's summer tour to Europe. This tour is open to boys completing the 8th and 9th grades in June who have had significant basketball experience.

This Colonials' tour will bring the Rovers team to Belgium, France, and the Netherlands in August. In Belgium, the Rovers will be the first team from the USA to take part in the Flanders Trophy Tournament. As on all the team's tours, Colonials' players will be hosted by the families of their basketball peers at each stop on the tour. Several stipends are available for players with financial need.

Colonials' teams do not hold tryouts and rely on references and an assessment of the applicant's commitment to school, community, and basketball. Founded in 1980, the New England Colonials International Basketball Club is a non-profit program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world.

For additional information, please contact the New England Colonials at (508) 668-1935 or by E-mail at necolonials@aol. Interested players may learn more about the program online at the team's website located at www.NewEnglandColonials.net

PREPARING FOR CAMP MEANS MORE THAN PACKING YOUR TRUNK

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

ADDRESSING YOUR CHILD'S CONCERNS & EXPECTATIONS
• Remind yourselves about why you chose your camp. Something special must have caught your attention. Discuss what's exciting and/or potentially intimidating. Set some goals together, being honest about your expectations.
• Take a look at the camp's Web site, video, & print materials again with your child. Now that you've selected the camp, you can view these differently. They can be useful springboards for discussion.
• Attend the camp's Open House. Meet the camp director and key staff members. Ask any questions you have. Be up-front about your concerns and your child's.

HANDLING HOMESICKNESS
• Feeling homesick is completely normal; most campers (and many adults) miss home when they are away. Camp directors are experts in recognizing and treating homesickness. Follow their advice after you arrive at camp.
• Before you get to camp, the ACA, New England offers these tips to minimize homesickness:
1. Practice sleeping away from home. Visit friends and/or relatives for progressively longer periods of time – first one night, then two or three nights. Having a recent memory of a successful time away from home can help a child get through the first few days of camp.
2. Discuss what will happen if homesickness hits at camp. Ask children up to around 10 or 11 if you will support them always overcoming homesickness and stay at camp.
3. Consider packing something to remind the camper of home, (a favorite photo or stuffed animal). Remind campers that they always have their memories of home and loved ones with them as well.
4. Pre-address and send mail to camp in advance of opening day or bring a couple of letters to give off when you deliver your child. Encourage campers to write a few lines of words of encouragement to themselves.
5. Be positive in your letters. Bad news and sad news are tough to read at camp.

PACKING POINTERS
• Pack enough clothes so the kid at camp on day five doesn't have to hand-wash underwear in the sink. Weather and activity requirements should help with packing, but err on the side of more.
• If your child takes medication, send the medication in the original bottle along with dosage instructions.
• Use waterproof labels. Stickers, drill pinpoint-tip pens, indelible laundry markers, or iron-on labels are all options. Check with camp director for specific rules and recommendations.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

'Great Books' program at Deer Hill School

It's not too late for Deer Hill students to join the nationally acclaimed after school "Great Books" literary program. Junior Great Books is the highly regarded elementary school book group program established in 1962 and designed to bring great literature to life while helping students discover the joys and depth of life-long reading.

Trained parent volunteers will lead book group discussions for one hour after school, from 2:15 - 3:15 p.m., beginning next week. Fourth graders will meet on Mondays, fifth graders on Tuesdays and third graders on Wednesdays. Sessions run through April 12th.

Deer Hill fifth-grader Mollie Chipman reviews one of the books being offered as part of the "Great Books" reading program.

CMHS artists win prestigious awards

Several artists from the Cohasset Middle High School were recognized in a Boston Globe Scholastic Arts Program awards ceremony held on Sunday, Feb. 5 in Boston. Now in its 56th year, the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Program was started in 1950 and is a state-level affiliate of the Scholastic Art Awards Program started in 1927 in New York City. The Scholastic Art Awards Program is the largest and longest running program of its kind in the country.

The Program is open to all students in Grades 7 – 12 in all public, private and parochial schools in Massachusetts and nominees are chosen by the Arts Department faculty at their school. Submissions include paintings and drawings, sculpture, and photography and thousands of pieces from schools all over Massachusetts are submitted for consideration.

According to Mrs. Mary Charwat, Arts Department Chair at Cohasset Middle High School, "Because this is such a competitive program, the standards for nomination are very high. We're thrilled to have had 10 artists nominated to submit their artwork. They should be very proud".

John Rohrer won a Silver Key and an Honorable Mention for his photographs; and Katie DeWaal won a Silver Key for her mixed-media piece.

Among those chosen to represent Cohasset were Sophie Bertolami, Caitlin Hurley, Amanda Thompson, Sarah Malone, Katharine Murphy, John Burgoon and Sophie Bertolami.

Each piece is reviewed by a panel of arts educators and then individually shown to the judges and voted upon. Individual works may win Gold Key, Silver Key and Honorable Mention awards. Award winners from Cohasset included John Rohrer, who won a Silver Key and for an Honorable Mention for his photographs; Katie DeWaal, who won a Silver Key for her mixed-media piece; and Emily Bertovich, Christine Coner and Colin Quinlan, who received Honorable Mention awards.

"These are prestigious awards in the arts community, adds Charwat. "To have been selected from the thousands of submittals is an indication of the talent these young artists possess".

The Gold Key and Silver Key winners had their artwork exhibited during the month of February at the Mass. Transportation Building in downtown Boston. Gold Key winners had their artwork sent on to a national competition in New York City.

Getting ready for the Mr. Skipper contest!

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

I hope everyone enjoyed the winter break and took time to frolic in the beautiful and surprisingly warm weather. It was indeed a vacation to remember, even if the snow did not appear until the very end of the week. Oh well, getting away from the stressful environment at the school was essential for future productivity.

The Varsity Hockey Team won a gritty preliminary tournament game in overtime on Monday to end Southeastern Vocational Technical Institutes dreams of a tournament bid. The quarter will be halfway over as of this Friday, thus leaving the seniors with about a semester left in their high school careers. Now, the news for this first week back from vacation, and predictably it's chock-full of interesting happenings around the school.

• The drama club will have met on Tuesday from 4:30 pm to 6:30 pm.

• The school council will have met on Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the main office to discuss upcoming events around the school.

• The state Drama Festival Preliminaries will have been on Friday. The Jr. District Music Festival will have also taken place on Friday. Mrs. Stephanie Noble is coaching the drama club.

The annual Mr. Skipper pageant will be held on Friday, March 10th in the High School auditorium. The competition is open to any male in the High School (grades 9-12) and you must have signed up by Tuesday, Feb. 28. Therefore if you are reading this and have not yet signed up, I am afraid it is too late. Tickets are at a premium and were sold out last year before the pageant, so make sure you purchase yours from Dr. Gill or Mr. Leonard during lunch.

Anyone interested in advertising or donating something for a raffle for Mr. Skipper should contact Dr. Gill or Mr. Leonard.

• The Jazz Ensemble will be entering a Nation wide music contest entitled "Big Bad Voodoo Daddy High School Jazz Band Competition." This contest will pit High Schools from all over the United States against each other for a chance to win a performance by the Big Bad Voodoo Daddy Jazz Band at their school in April.

• March is music in our schools month so we will be looking for something exciting to exude from the music department all month.

• Congratulations to the Varsity Swim Team which competed well at the Sectional and State Tournament last week. Results from both tournaments will be available in the upcoming weeks.

• High School Sports physicals will be held on Friday, March 10th at 2:35 pm in the High School nurse's office. If you are planning on participating in spring athletics please make certain that you have a current physical on file in the nurse's office or show up for the physicals on March 10th.

• The PSO is sponsoring a Read-a-thon for the Middle School this month, which will begin today and end on March 13th. Students will set goals and find sponsors and then record how much they have read in log sheets located in homerooms. Prizes will be issued to the homerooms that log the most minutes and raised the most money, as well as individual students who raised the most money and logged the most minutes. Sounds like a fun and educational event, good luck to all the students who participate.

Done already, the news wasn't as abundant as I predicted, but it was still plentiful in knowledge. It is after all, the first week back from vacation and things are still re-gearing up here at the High School. The following week should bring more news and excitement as the much-anticipated Mr. Skipper pageant draws nearer.

For the first time you can get your home heating oil tank tested and oil lines inspected with...

THE TankSure® PROGRAM

An EPA Approved Technology

You can virtually eliminate the possibility of a leaking oil tank or oil line affecting your property.

Did you know that?

1. This testing process for above ground oil tanks is now available through many oil dealers and HVAC companies. This includes inspections of oil lines.

2. This technology is approved by the EPA (US Environmental Protection Agency) and the API (American Petroleum Institute).

3. This testing process can measure the thickness of your tank and is key to predicting when you need a new one, before the old one leaks due to internal corrosion.

4. Many quality service providers in your area offer the annual test and oil line inspection for less than $40.00.

5. Many service providers include funding up to $1,000 toward a tank replacement when you need a new tank, based on this annual test.

To locate a service provider near you offering this valuable test;

Honduras in the rough

Central American escape goes the distance with wild animals, Mayan ruins

By TANIA MEJER

COPAN RUINAS, Honduras -- Men in jeans and straw hats walked along the highway that snaked through the mountains from San Pedro Sula to Copan Ruinas; fruit stands and shantytowns speckled the route.

A small landslide caused by some heavy rains made part of our drive difficult, but my local guide, Eli, told me this was nothing -- there had been times when he was unable to bring tourists to Copan because labor strikes blockaded this road.

I'm in my mid-20s,and this was my first solo trip. And to a country where I didn't speak the language, nonetheless.

I was armed with a sense of adventure, a quest to learn a little about Central America and a notebook filled with key phrases a friend had taught me (I memorized the phrase "I am a vegetarian").

I stayed in this quaint town near the Guatemala border for two nights. The major tourist draw is the nearby ancient Mayan ruins. My base here was the Hotel Marina Copan, located by the town's central plaza. From here (or just about anywhere in the small town of Copan Ruinas), the ruins are just a few minutes' drive or short walk away.

At the ruins, I was surprised when the ancient city seemed smaller than it appeared on the map. Hard to believe this city once housed 20,000.

After climbing to the top of one temple, Eli saw a hole in the ground, and with a long piece of grass we enticed a tarantula into a game of tug of war until several of its furry legs were out in the open. When its large, hairy abdomen quickly moved toward my hand, I instinctively jumped back. But it was cool to see the spider nonetheless.

From the temple top we had a good view of the ruins, which included numerous statues and intricately carved art pieces uncommon to other Mayan cities -- Copanians were considered the most artistically advanced of the Mayan world. A highlight here is the largest hieroglyphic stairway in the Mayan world, which dates to the year 749.

Besides the view above ground, tourists also can access several archaeological tunnels around and under the ruins.

Though it would have been easy to stay here all day, my stomach was growling. Back on the unnamed streets of Copan Ruinas, my guide and I took a relaxing siesta, starting with hibiscus tea and traditional Honduran food (beans and rice with small, thick corn tortillas, avocados and salsa) at local eatery El Meson del Caminante. After lunch, I wandered along the cobblestone streets of Copan Ruinas, which I had to share with numerous toylike taxis -- they have only one wheel in the front, and it was fun to see them barrel down the uneven streets packed with so many people it looked like they would topple over.

In this town, I was surrounded by locals and Guatemalan tourists; I even ate dinner (and attempted, somewhat successfully, some very basic conversation) with a few Guatemalan men when the only open spot at a restaurant was at their outdoor table.

Next morning at the airport -- where there was no ID required and the schedule was "whenever" -- I caught the hour flight (with a stop in between) to Roatan, one of the Bay Islands off the Caribbean coast of Honduras, an area that draws divers from around the world.

On Roatan, I headed to Anthony's Key Resort, a spot well known to divers and snorkelers.

Talk about a change of pace and culture. The Bay Islands, though Honduran, are culturally more Caribbean, and most of the people I met at Anthony's were Americans -- the wealthy kind. I actually felt a little out of place, but that was remedied over drinks and conversation with some of the other resort guests -- even rich divers can be friendly.

The resort offers dive and snorkeling excursions daily (you also can shore dive). Be aware the resort does not have much of a beach. The main attractions are underwater -- even close to shore the brightly colored coral and schools of fish are highly visible.

For those who prefer their sightseeing above ground, there is an optional canopy tour, which I also checked out.

With a harness strapped on and a camera around my neck, I jumped up to be clamped onto the zip line and literally zipped through the rain forest. From above, I saw an iguana in a tree, and a small monkey came right up to me on one of the zip line platforms.

Surprisingly, the guides didn't point out flora and fauna; for them it was more about getting the group from one platform to the next.

Another day, I set out to explore on foot, wandering across the road from Anthony's to the Carambola Botanical Garden. The circular paths of the garden have dozens of well-labeled indigenous plants, but the real fun was hiking up a trail to the top of Carambola Mountain (parts are steep and hiking boots are recommended), where the view is spectacular. If you walk quietly and carefully when you hear rustling in the trees, you just might spot some monkeys on the way up. I saw them along with lizards (which dart around the path with every step you take) and mosquitoes (which bite regardless of how much insect repellent you use).

After the hike, I needed a rest. Luckily, on the deck of my Anthony's cabana, right above the water, I was able to curl up on the hammock with some Gabriel Garcia Marquez. Now if only I could read the original work in Spanish.

If you go:

When to go: Though climate varies in different regions of Honduras, your best bet is to go during dry season, roughly November through May on the mainland, January to August on Roatan.

Staying there: Rates at Hotel Marina Copan (www.hotelmarinacopan.com) are from $75 per night. Seven-night packages at Anthony's Key Resort include meals, airport transfers, snorkeling/diving and other resort activities. Snorkeling packages are $675-$975; diving packages $675-$1,075, depending on the season. All prices are per person, based on double occupancy. Go to www.anthonyskey.com

Shapleigh exhibit coming to town

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an exhibit of the paintings of Frank Henry Shapleigh (1842-1906) of Boston. He did many paintings of Cohasset as his wife was the former Mary Pratt Studley of Cohasset.

Shapleigh enjoyed long walks along the town's shores, cane in hand, in company with his Cohasset nephew Kenneth Beal, sometimes going as far as Scituate. From these walks came a series of oils showing Cohasset's coastline and the sea, as well as family homes in and around the village.

The first of Shapleigh's Cohasset oils known to be exhibited, was one titled "At Sandy Cove." Shown at the Boston Art Club in 1874. In 1965 the Society held another exhibition at the Maritime Museum in the village, and several people from Cohasset and Hingham loaned their Shapleighs for that exhibit.

The opening reception for the exhibit will be held on Sunday, March 12, from 2 to 4 p.m. The Society paintings will be on display, and through the graciousness of the Vose Galleries of Boston, who have agreed to loan four of their Shapleigh's, which will be exhibited, and may be purchased. If anyone has a Shapleigh that they would like to loan for this exhibit, call at 781-383-1434 or e-mail at www.cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

The following is a list of the Shapleighs that will be exhibited. They were painted between 1876 through 1889.

- View of Harbor Entrance, Cohasset
- Christopher James Farmhouse
- John Willcutt House, Elm Street
- Laban Worrick House, 93 South Main Street
- Nathaniel Treat's Boatyard, Sandy Cove

Vose Galleries

- Whitehead, Cohasset
- Stormy Day At Cohasset
- Pleasant Beach
- Mt. Washington and Ellis River at Jackson, New Hampshire (Shapleigh died here in 1906).

Remember to circle your calendar, March 12, and join for an enjoyable afternoon of local art. The exhibit will continue through April 12.

Teen dance

There will be a Dance at the Garage on Friday, March 10, from 7 to 10 p.m. for all sixth through eighth graders. There will be a door charge of $5 per person and snacks and refreshments will be on sale.

The Blizzard of 78 tragedy and rescue

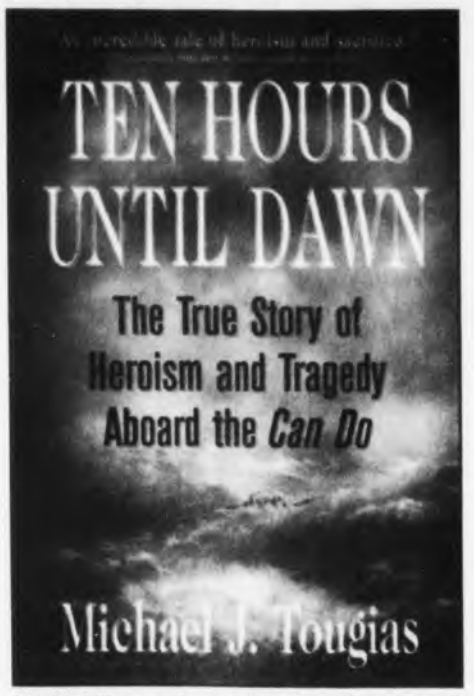
Cohasset Library will host a narrated slide presentation by award winning author Michael Tougias based on his best selling book "Ten Hours Until Dawn," on Sunday, March 5, at 2:30 p.m. Tougias' novel is about a sea rescue and tragedy during the Blizzard of 1978

During the height of the Blizzard of 1978 the pilot boat Can Do, with five men onboard, set out from Gloucester to assist a lost Coast Guard boat and an oil tanker that was in a Mayday situation. "Ten Hours Until Dawn" tells the story of what happened on that awful night when the seas were producing monstrous waves of 40 feet and the wind was screaming at 100 miles per hour.

Using slides of the boats, the men involved, and photos of the storm, Tougias will take the viewer through this incredible night where many lives hung in the balance. With the aid of maps Tougias will show the progression and location of these boats off the Massachusetts coast, and explain what happened and why.

This account is one of the few ocean tragedies we know exactly what happened due to the existence of audio recordings of Coast Guard and Can Do crew taped the night of the storm. The tapes span a 10-hour period during the crew's fight for survival. Tougias will play a portion of the tape at the presentation.

Praise for "Ten Hours Until Dawn" includes a Booklist review which said, "Arguably the best story of peril at sea since Sebastian Junger's 'Perfect Storm'. Superb!" Former Governor Michael Dukakis said, "What a story! Tougias' research and writing make the readers feel they are onboard the Can Do during the Blizzard of '78. 'Ten Hours Until Dawn' is a gripping book about a fascinating event of courage and tragedy." And Nathaniel Philbrick, National Book Award winner, said the book is "An incredible tale of heroism and sacrifice." More about the book and the author can be found on the web at www.michaeltougias.com.



Michael Tougias' book, "Ten Hours Until Dawn" is the subject of a talk Sunday at the library.

OBITUARIES

Marjorie C. Wood

Worked over 30 years for Johnson & Johnson Co.

Marjorie C. "Mardi" (Roy) Wood, 61, of Cohasset, formerly of Marshfield, died Feb. 26, 2006, at the Harbor House in Hingham, after a long illness.

The daughter of Marjorie C. Roy, and the late James Roy, she was a longtime resident of Weymouth, and attended Weymouth Public Schools.

Mrs. Wood worked for over 30 years at Johnson & Johnson Co. in the Orthopedic Surgical Department.

After retirement, she enjoyed walking, needlepoint, sailing, and reading.

She leaves her loving husband, Peter J. Wood; her mother, Marjorie C. Roy; a daughter, Lauren M. Luscombe, and her husband Shane L. of Weymouth; two beloved grandsons, Matthew P. Luscombe, and Daniel G. Luscombe; a niece, Nancy A. Wood; two nephews, Mark H. Wood, and Frederic H. Wood III, and their families; and many friends.

A memorial service will be held Friday at 11 a.m. in St. Stephen Church in Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Interment is private in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be made to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Leukemia and Lymphoma Research, 10 Brookline Place West, 6th floor, Brookline, MA 02445.

Roy V. Leonard

Founder and president R.V. Leonard Co.

Roy V. Leonard, 90, of Cohasset, died March 1, 2006, at Sunrise Assisted Living, in Cohasset, after a brief illness.

The son of the late Edward and the late Mary (Williams) Leonard, he was born in St. Louis, Mo., and attended the St. Louis, Mo. public schools. He lived in Arlington for 40 years before moving to Cohasset five years ago to be close to his daughter.

Mr. Leonard was the founder and president of R.V. Leonard Co. of Somerville, and Weymouth.

Husband of the late Mary (Banks) Leonard, he leaves five daughters, Brooke Kennedy, of Marshfield, Maryanne Leonard, of Marshfield, Kate McGee, of Silver Springs, Md., Dianne Leonard, of Phoenix, Ariz., and September McGee, of Laguna Beach, Calif.; and six grandchildren.

A funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. Gary Ritts March 3, at 11 a.m., in the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

Interment is in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, Massachusetts Chapter, 311 Arsenal St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Quilt show and luncheon coming to Cohasset March 4

Cohasset's 13th Annual Quilt Show and Luncheon, will be held Saturday, March 4, from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., at The Second Congregational Church in Cohasset This year, more than 60 quilts will be on display. Tickets are $12 each and include a sit-down luncheon where volunteer waiters serve homemade strata, salads and a selection of desserts.

"When the idea of a small quilt show and elegant luncheon came to mind, we thought it would be just a one-time, cheerful way to spend a March Saturday," says Carol Sandblom, one of the event's original organizers. "It was not intended to be a fundraiser, but if we made a little money, it would go to charity. We must have struck a chord: over the past 12 years we've shown 650 quilts and donated over $16,000 to charity."

"We decorate the tables with linens and beautiful flowers to help bring a hint of spring to the midst of winter," Sandblom added. "It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

The quilts displayed come from all over the South Shore and beyond. And each quilt has its own story which is shared in the show's program. This year's show includes both new and antique quilts, as well quilts from the 30's and 40's.

All proceeds will be shared between the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Center's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets should be bought in advance at the Second Congregational Church next to Cohasset's Town Hall on Highland Avenue. Stop by the church office from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday to Friday, or call 781-383-0345 for information.

Jewelry, art show helps 3A Farm Fund

Tickets are now available for a Sunday brunch, jewelry and art show to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter's 3A Farm Fund.

The event will be at the Scituate Country Club on Sunday, March 5, from noon to 4 p.m. A cash bar will be available. Tickets are $25 each.

High quality, stamped .925 sterling silver jewelry — some with handcrafted stones — will be presented by Silpada Designs' independent representative Janice Wright. Visa, MC and personal checks will be accepted. See jewelry samples at www.mysilpada.com/janice.wright

At the jewelry show, there will be a silent auction of art donated to the shelter's 3A Farm Fund by local artists and photographers, including signed and numbered prints of watercolors by Don Paiva. The local artist's paintings depict coastal landscape and nautical scenes of the South Shore, Cape Cod and the Islands. Also included will be paintings by Mara and photographs by Judith Enright.

The shelter is raising funds to relocate to the 3A Farm, at the corner of Route 3A and Mann Lot Road. A 2,500 square foot facility will be built to accommodate the growing area need to help stray, homeless, injured, and surrendered companion animals from Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. To learn more, visit www.3afarmfund.com

Tickets may be purchased for $25 each by calling the Shelter at 781-545-8703 or sending a check — made out to "3A Farm Fund" — to Scituate Animal Shelter, PO Box 823, Scituate, 02066.

Life is a cabaret for Callanan

Weymouth actress to light up stage in Company Theatre concert

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Mary Callanan can be forgiven for interrupting a telephone conversation last week to accept a delivery at her Weymouth home. It was raining outside and the always in-demand performer couldn't afford to let the package containing her new publicity stills get wet. Callanan will need the new headshots this month to promote not only her March 7 concert at the Company Theatre in Norwell, but also her second anniversary as an original cast member of the Boston company of "Menopause The Musical."

Familiar to Boston audiences from "Menopause" and a previous four-year run in "Nunsense" at the now-defunct Theatre Lobby in the North End, Callanan hopes next week's appearance in Norwell — part of the Company Theatre's new Tuesday night cabaret series — will help her reach an even more local audience.

"I'm thrilled with this opportunity to perform in Norwell. It will be great to do a show in my neighborhood. What makes it great, too, is that it represents a brand spanking new audience for cabaret," explains Callanan, who performs her cabaret act every Friday night at the Encore Lounge at the Marriott Hotel in Boston's Theatre District. "Cabaret is all about telling stories. It works whether it's in a hotel bar, a church basement or a legitimate theater."

For her Norwell outing — where she will be backed by her longtime accompanist, Hanson native Brian Patton — Callanan plans to spotlight the music of female vocalists including June Christy, Peggy Lee, Jo Stafford, and Rosemary Clooney.

"Brian and I chose to focus on these ladies because they are our favorites. Whether they were singing to two people or to 10,000 it was an intimate experience for their audience. It was as if they were singing right to you. Jo Stafford had such a great tone to her voice and I love June Christy, too. Her signature song, 'Something Cool,' is a story song about remembrance which I really love to sing."

Kathy St. George (Soap Star) and (right) Mary Callanan (Earth Mother).

Although she admires them all, Callanan admits to having a special place in her heart for Clooney whom she saw in concert many times in Boston and New York.

"Rosemary Clooney had style. She also had two distinct careers, prior to and after her 1968 nervous breakdown. Her voice was so beautiful in the early days and she lost some of that later on but she still had an amazing gift to share. She had such a strong sense of self. After she recovered enough to return to recording and giving concerts, she really turned the microscope to self-examination which made her cabaret work so affecting. Rosie also believed strongly in the lyrics and so do I."

Callanan also believes strongly in the message of "Meno-pause," which uses familiar tunes reworked with new lyrics to celebrate women going through "the change." Callanan plays a lost-in-the-60s "Earth Mother" in the show, which she says speaks to both women and men.

"Cabaret is all about telling stories. It works whether it's in a hotel bar, a church basement or a legitimate theater."
Actress, Mary Callanan

"It's an excellent ladies night out for sure but men also really enjoy the show. We've had men doubled over with laughter, probably because they recognize that some of the women in their lives are going through these experiences."

The women in Callanan's "Menopause" life include her co-stars Kathy St. George and Hingham native Adrienne Cote.

"You have to love the people with whom you work and I love Kathy and Adrienne. The three of us have been in this show together since day one and we've become good friends."

After such a long run, they have also become very familiar with the material. Some performers might become bored but not Callanan, who once toured with Marie Osmond in "The Sound of Music."

"As long as you still believe in what you're saying, then the show will carry you through. You just have to give your all to the show."

Callanan may be about to begin her third year in "Menopause," but that's a short run compared to the more than 20 years that she and pianist Patton have been performing together - a partnership that Callanan clearly values.

"I always say that I never play without a net and Brian Patton is my net. Brian and I share a brain. We each know what the other is going to do all the time. We're like one person when we share a stage."

(Mary Callanan and Brian Patton will perform "Sing Out, Sister" The Great Ladies of American Song" Tuesday, March 7 at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park, Norwell. Opening for Callanan and Patton will be John King of Weymouth. For tickets, please call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com. Mary Callanan can also be seen in "Menopause The Musical," now in an open-ended run at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart Street, Boston. Tickets are available by calling 800-447-7400. For groups of 15 or more, please call Barbara Conlon at 617-426-4499, extension 25. Callanan and Patton also perform every Friday, from 9:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., in the Encore Lounge at the Marriott Hotel, 275 Tremont Street, Boston.)

Movie review

Director shackles 'Freedomland'

Freedomland (C+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

"Freedomland" reminded me of tests many of us once took asking us to identify the thing that didn't fit into a picture.

A drama involving race relations in a powder-keg section of northeastern New Jersey, the film is based on a novel by Richard Price, also the author of "Clockers." So far, so good.

The cast features Samuel L. Jackson and Julianne Moore, both justly acclaimed actors, and stalwarts Edie Falco, Ron Eldard and William Forsythe in crucial supporting roles. OK.

Producer Scott Rudin recently completed such films as "The Life Aquatic," "Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events" and "The Royal Tenenbaums." All right with me.

The director is Joe Roth. Wait. Here it is. This guy's last movie was "Christmas with the Kranks." Roth, a Boston University alumnus, is a mover and shaker as a producer and studio executive. As a director, he is the auteur of such comedies as "America's Sweethearts," "Revenge of the Nerds II: Nerds in Paradise" and "Coupe de Ville."

Directed by Martin Scorsese or Spike Lee, directors who have worked with writer Price in the past, "Freedomland" might have amounted to something. Directed by Roth, it's not entirely awful, but only barely serviceable and a wasted opportunity.

Moore plays Brenda Martin, who is apparently both a beloved teacher at a preschool in Armstrong, a predominantly African-American housing project, and a white-trash recovering drug addict. When Brenda turns up at an emergency room claiming a black man has hijacked her car, in which her 4-year-old son was sleeping, it's Chuck Stuart time for Armstrong residents.

The paths of Brenda (Julianne Moore) and police detective Council (Samuel L. Jackson) cross when she reports a crime, in "Freedomland."

Before you can say, "Sweep the 'hood," the sketch artist's rendition of the suspect looks like every black man on earth, and a mostly white, hostile police force has quarantined all of Armstrong, convinced the kidnapper lives among the mostly poor, struggling black residents of the housing project.

Jackson, adding a jaunty, round-brimmed chapeau to his collection of screen headgear, is detective Lorenzo Council. He's a hard-working veteran who tries, along with his partner Boyle (Forsythe), to act as a buffer between the angry residents of Armstrong and his intolerant superiors on the force, who consider Armstrong a magnet for drugs, crime and violence.

The plot, which for reasons not entirely clear, is set in 1999, will further involve Felicia (Aunjanue Ellis) and Billy (Anthony Mackie), an unhappily married Armstrong couple with ties to both Brenda and Lorenzo; Rafik (Fly Williams III), a troubled young man who is under suspicion; Brenda's policeman brother Danny (Eldard); and Karen Collucci (Falco), a crusading woman who, after experiencing tragedy in her own life, has become an expert at tracking down missing children.

If this sounds like the making of a good film, it should have been. Falco's incandescent performance suggests someone should be building a TV series around the character she plays.

But "Freedomland" — the title is the name of a ruined children's asylum in the film — is a lurid, histrionic misfire. A red-nosed Moore, speaking in a grotesque "Joy-zee" accent and wearing much of her hair in her face, gives a lousy performance. Brenda seems merely mentally deficient and weird at first and becomes increasingly unsympathetic.

Much of the action is shot in that handheld, shaky-cam style that is supposed to give the film an urgent, you-are-there quality. It only gave me a headache. What Roth, who was born in Manhattan, knows about housing projects I cannot fathom.

Instead of speaking, characters make speeches — long, boring, usually loud speeches. By the time the predictable race riot broke out, I was ready to break out, too — out of the theater.

Rated R. "Freedomland" contains violence and profanity.

The cast of "Doubt" performs an exorcism on Kathleen Turner in "Forbidden Broadway". (L-r.: Kevin B. McGlynn, Valerie Fagan, and Janet Dickinson.)

Laughs allowed in 'Forbidden Broadway'

Funny's not forbidden in Huntington Theatre Company production

If Broadway is the "Fabulous Invalid," then "Forbidden Broadway" is its impudent little stepsister. The clever satire was first created 24 years ago by Gerard Alessandrini, and is still being written and directed by the Needham native in its current incarnation, "Forbidden Broadway: Special Victims Unit." Now playing at Boston's Virginia Wimberly Theatre, the show continues to jab mercilessly and with great humor at the many overdone excesses of the Great White Way. Featuring the talented quartet of Janet Dickinson, Valerie Fagan, Kevin B. McGlynn, and Nick Verina, each of whom handles parody lyrics with deftness and numerous off-stage costume changes with amazing swiftness, this "Forbidden Broadway" spares no sacred Broadway cows, past or present.

Legendary leading man Robert Goulet has long been a box office draw in road companies of everything from "Camelot" to "South Pacific," but here his return to Broadway last year as a replacement in the revival of "La Cage Aux Folles" is parodied to show that this now shopworn warhorse can no longer carry a tune, never mind a show.

Younger performers are targeted, too, including Christina Applegate whose broken-ankle woes during last season's pre-Broadway tour of "Sweet Charity" are played out as being perhaps the least of the performer's troubles. The backstage feuding rumored to have gone on between Idina Menzel and Kristin Chenoweth - the original stars of Broadway's "Wicked" - leads to some sniping by the pair that makes you wish you'd seen the real duo go after each other.

The puppet-driven "Avenue Q" and "The Lion King" are satirized, too, with particularly pointed barbs directed at the latter which, along with "Beauty and the Beast," is used to illustrate the sometimes dubious role Disney now plays in the commercial theater.

Thanks to long New York runs and equally long national tours, parodies of "The Phantom of the Opera," "Les Miserables," and "Chicago" will be familiar to many. Some less avid, less frequent theatergoers, however, may scratch their heads at the swipes against "The Light in the Piazza" and Yoko Ono's effect on the failed "Lennon."

Musical director Catherine Stornetta, a veteran of many previous "Forbidden Broadway" companies, provides piano work that can sometimes approximate a full-scale pit band. The spot-on costumes by Alvin Colt also deserve special mention.

"Forbidden Broadway: Special Victims Unit" will be presented through March 12 by the Huntington Theatre Company at the Virginia Wimberly Theatre at the Stanford Calderwood Pavilion, Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont Street, Boston. For tickets and information, call 617-933-8600 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

HOLD THE (HEAD)PHONE

In recent years, hearing specialists have been very concerned that people are showing signs of hearing loss at younger ages than ever before. Not only are we living in a noisier world, but many youngsters have adopted lifestyle habits that accelerate hearing loss. Among the most damaging of these involves the use of portable music players that attach directly to the ears. People are no longer just wearing music devices with headphones to occasionally listen to music, they are wearing them on a nearly continual basis to block out ambient street noise. As a result, hearing specialists are seeing too many people in their 30s and 40s with hearing loss that was once associated with people in their 60s.

Whatever their listening habits, recreational pursuits, or occupation, our primary goal here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, is to help as many people as possible protect and improve their hearing abilities. If you are concerned about protecting your hearing, we'll be glad to give you advice as to how. If you have a hearing impairment, you can count on us to help you find the best solution to open your life to better hearing. Why not call us today at 781-337-1144 to start the process with a free hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. Visit us on the web at www.familyhearing.net.

P.S. According to a study by Australia's National Acoustic Laboratories, about one-quarter of people using portable music players experience daily noise exposures high enough to cause hearing damage.

PHOTOS/LYNNE LAYMAN

After 61 years, WWII veterans Ben Peak, left, of Indiana and Tom Hernan of Cohasset meet at Atlantica. On March 2, 1945 while on the island of Iwo Jima, Peak dragged the wounded Hernan to safety, but always wondered if Hernan had survived.

WWII veterans reunite after 61 years

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The last time Ben Peak saw his friend Tom Hernan, it was March 2, 1945. Dirty, and severely wounded by a piece of mortar shell, Hernan was lying in a corpsman station in Iwo Jima,. Peak dragged him to safety, but left quickly to return to his unit. Neither man knew whether the other had come home alive.

But they did make it home, albeit at different times and through different circumstances. Sixty-one years later, almost to the day, a reunion in Hernan's hometown of Cohasset brought both men to tears.

Last August, Peak began doing some research on the Internet with the help of his granddaughter, looking for any information they could find on the 4th Marine Division, 24th Regiment. To Peak's surprise, Hernan's name was on that list and the information stated he was alive and well.

"I had always remembered his name," said Peak of Hernan, adding when he left Hernan, he was unconscious and Peak wasn't sure he was going to make it. There were three Hernans on the list and Tom was the first to answer his phone.

"Just to talk on the phone was great," recalled Hernan, adding the first time he heard from Peak, they were both very emotional.

Ben Peak presented Tom Hernan with this baseball cap at their reunion last week.

"I had a lump in my throat," Hernan said. "I always wondered if Bennie made it home and to talk to him was great." He added the two had been friends throughout their time in Iwo Jima and their tents weren't far away from each other when they were stationed in Maui earlier.

The two planned a face-to-face reunion and Peak, who lives in Madison, Ind. arrived in town Wednesday, March 1. He took a train, a bus, and a cab and finally made it to Cohasset, where he was greeted by a man grateful to have had his life saved all those years ago.

"I would have recognized him anywhere," said Peak of Hernan, joking he looks exactly the same, despite having aged a "year or two."

"We're not 18 and 19 anymore Bennie," Hernan quipped.

Peak recalled the last day he saw Hernan. "It was a very bad day. We had advanced two or three miles and there was a lot of mortar fire," he recalled. He said he remembered watching Hernan, who was a Navy corpsman, taking care of the wounded and bringing them back to safety. Peak is a Marine, but he said there were no medics in the Marines, and the Navy corpsmen were taking care of the medical problems.

"I always wondered if Bennie made it home."
— Tom Hernan, WWII veteran

Hernan said four Navy corpsmen including himself were collecting the wounded. "As we were running, a mortar shell fell by us and I fell. I didn't hear it, I just felt it," he said.

Peak said he remembers the men he was with were all withdrawing, and he saw Hernan and the men he was with helping a man who had already been hit when the mortar struck. He watched Hernan fall. Hernan said after he fell, he turned his head to see what had happened, saw the puff of smoke, and realized he couldn't move. He saw some of the other men helping the wounded Marine they had been trying to rescue in the first place, but they then left the area. "I was left alone," Hernan said.

But then, Peak came to his aide and Hernan said he remembers seeing him come out of nowhere. "He threw me over his shoulder and ran with

Selectmen split on big override

But agree to give voters choices

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In a packed meeting that at times resembled more of a pep rally for the school budget than a governmental proceeding, selectmen voted to go along with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee and place two override questions on the special election ballot this spring.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed, who voiced concern about reaching too far, said asking for just one big override would not be wise.

"If you are starving for water in the desert," he said, "then one-half a glass of water would go a long way rather than none."

He also pointed out the "average" override figure that has won favor with Cohasset voters in the past has hovered in the $350,000 range, far less than both overrides currently on the table.

While Selectmen unanimously agreed to give voters options, board members are deeply divided about whether to throw their support behind the larger of the two numbers: a $1.495 million override of which $1.1 million would provide the schools with much of what they say they need this year to "move the district forward." The lower override figure is $725,000. With either override, the town pays the benefits for any new employees including school workers. The town's share of the larger number would be $395,000 (including $216,321 in benefits) and the lower number $195,000 (including $36,321 in benefits).

"If you are starving for water in the desert, then one half a glass of water would go a long way rather than none."
— Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed

Voters can vote for both override questions, one or neither. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, if both overrides pass, the larger override would take effect even if it won by fewer votes.

Selectmen Michael Sullivan and Rob Spofford, who came down squarely on the side of supporting the larger number, were loudly cheered and applauded by those in attendance.

Koed was given a hand when he cast the "swing" vote after close to two hours of discussion.

Reducing parking along 3A corridor

Town Meeting to have final say

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Tired of acres of asphalt along Route 3A in places like Tedeschi Plaza, Cohasset Plaza and Shaw's Plaza?

If a Town Meeting article passes muster with voters, commercial property owners along the highway business district could have the option of reducing some asphalt and replacing it with more building space.

As it stands now, Cohasset has one of the most stringent off-street parking bylaws around – requiring 10 spaces for every 1,000 square feet of commercial building space. The proposed bylaw change would cut that in half to five spaces per 1,000 square feet.

The article that will be before voters at Town Meeting on April 1 has passed muster with Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and a majority of the Planning Board.

"I generally think that 10 spaces is too many," Sam Wakeman of the Advisory Committee said this week. "It forces people to blacktop areas they shouldn't have to blacktop."

The Economic Development Committee, whose charge is to seek ways to generate new sources of commercial tax revenue, proposed the bylaw change as a way to increase commercial development that could help ease some of the burden off residential taxpayers. Only about 7 percent of Cohasset's tax base is commercial.

The change would not affect the downtown commercial district and restaurants, which would still be required to have more parking.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said reducing parking requirements makes good environmental sense. "We don't want seas of asphalt," he said.

However, a minority of the Planning Board, including chairman Al Moore, is against reducing the parking requirement.

"There's going to be just as much coverage," Moore said about the environmental argument made by proponents. "There's just going to be more buildings and fewer places to park." In either case, lot coverage cannot exceed 60 percent, he said.

Moore explained that while the current bylaw requires 10 spaces for every 1,000 square feet of building – in reality, the planning board "forgives" much of that parking in exchange for more green space that might not otherwise be there. A development is allowed to have the required

Zoning bylaw would maintain affordable housing numbers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

...the article would create a requirement that any new multi-family development with five or more units must provide at least one (if not more) affordable housing units as part of the overall project

Getting out from under the threat of 40B and staying there is a priority in the town of Cohasset. For that to happen, it must consistently have 10 percent of its overall housing stock deemed affordable by state standards.

To help reach that goal, the town passed the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw which encourages building senior housing with an affordable component in exchange for higher density development. The Cedarmere project has already filed under the bylaw and the Cook Estate is expected to file soon. Those proposed units, coupled with the Avalon 40B housing project, would push Cohasset beyond the required 10 percent.

Recognizing the need for affordable housing for all residents, the Planning Board has recommended by a majority vote, an inclusionary zoning bylaw which will come before voters at the April 1 Town Meeting. In essence, the article would create a requirement that any new multi-family development with five or more units must provide at least one (if not more) affordable housing units as part of the overall project. Affordable units would have to qualify for inclusion on Cohasset's "subsidized housing inventory," which governs the town's compliance with Chapter 40B — the state's 30-year-old law that allows developers to skirt local zoning in exchange for providing affordable housing. The bylaw would help Cohasset maintain that 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state by requiring affordable units with new multi-family development.

The Planning Board voted 3-2 in favor of recommending the bylaw with Chairman Al Moore and member Bob Sturdy opposed. However, member Peter Pratt presented the bylaw to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday, Feb. 28 and said in his opinion, "this is a good maintenance article."

The Planning Board is coming forward with another article at the Annual Town Meeting that will sunset the SMROD bylaw, but will allow the Cook Project to go forward as the last project to be filed under the bylaw. Without the inclusionary zoning article, "What do we have to produce more affordable units?" asked Pratt. As new development takes place in Cohasset, the number of overall housing units will increase, and in turn, the town will need to build more affordable units to ensure the 10 percent threshold is met.

Selectman Rob Spofford asked whether requiring affordable housing in new multi-unit development could deter developers from proposing projects in town. He said as a selectman, he has just come through a lengthy process with the Cook Estate, which because of the affordable component seemed to be a tough sell for developers. "Will this take developers out of the mix?" he asked.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said one of the issues Cohasset is likely to see in the future is that the state will applaud the town's efforts to build affordable housing for seniors, but will eventually say affordable housing needs must be met in another way.

Peter Brown of the Economic Development Committee, who is also in commercial real estate, said in his opinion, 10 percent is not a lot to ask from a developer, and the town will be adding to the variety of housing options it can offer.

However, Spofford said the town is in the process of forming a Cohasset Housing Partnership which will be working on affordable housing issues, including finalizing the town's Affordable Housing Plan. He felt without having that committee in place and without having a housing consultant on board (the town is currently accepting bids for the position), he feels the town is rushing the article. He said he did not see any problem with holding off on the article at least until the fall Special Town Meeting.

Zoning Advisory Committee member Tom Callahan said in his opinion, the article is meant to help the town maintain its compliance with 40B status. "That is our main objective," he said, adding meeting the requirements to comply is a huge accomplishment that will happen when Cedarmere, Avalon, and Cook are built, and the town does not want to take a step backwards. "It's foolish to not have some kind of protection," he said.

Cook Estate could be last SMROD development

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Planning Board voted unanimously to recommend the SMROD sunsetting bylaw

At the 2002 fall Special Town Meeting, voters adopted a new bylaw called the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw. Since then the bylaw has been amended more than once, and is now on the verge of sunsetting for good.

The bylaw was originally drafted with the intention of killing two birds with one stone — provide much needed affordable housing for seniors while keeping up with the affordable housing requirements set by the state. The town is trying to keep up with the state's 10 percent affordability threshold.

It appears the bylaw has done its job, as the Cedarmere senior housing project has come through the permitting process and is now under construction. The Cook project, a town-sponsored project, is slated to file under the bylaw soon, and the sunsetting provision would allow it to move ahead as the last project to file under the bylaw. Couple that with the proposed units for the Avalon 40B housing development, and the town has reached its quota.

The Planning Board voted unanimously to recommend the SMROD sunsetting bylaw. Member Peter Pratt said according to the Town Assessor, there are 3,019 total housing units in the town and the town, including the three proposed developments, is well over the 10 percent affordability. He added the bylaw would also protect the town from additional developments, now that the pipeline is full.

The Board of Selectmen unanimously recommended the article.

Some real estate tax exemptions offered

The Assessors Office is accepting applications for fiscal 2006 real estate tax exemptions. The deadline for filing is March 30. The following exemptions are available:

• PERSONS OVER 70 YEARS OF AGE — $1,000 OFF Clause 41C – if annual income is less that $18,000 (single person) or $23,000 (married couple), and the value of your assets, excluding your home, is less than $33,000 (single person) or $35,000 (married couple).

• SURVIVING SPOUSE — $350 OFF Clause 17D – also minors of deceased parents and persons over 70 years of age. There is no limit on income, but the value of your assets, excluding your home, must not exceed $40,000.

• DISABLED VETERANS — $500 OFF Clause 22 – At least 10 percent disabled as determined by the Veterans Administration. Purple Heart Award recipients qualify, as well as Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Air Force Cross, Navy Cross. Other exemptions are available for more seriously disabled veterans and paraplegic veterans.

• BLIND PERSONS — $875 OFF Clause 37 – Must be registered with Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

• TAX DEFERRAL ALL OR PART OF THE TAX — Clause 41A - Applicant must be 65 years of age as of July 1, 2005 with income less than $40,000 and must have resided in Massachusetts for the preceding 10 years. All or part of the tax may be deferred.

Exemption forms are available at the Assessors' Office in the Town Hall. (781) 383-4114.

Playground Program sponsorships sought

The Cohasset Recreation Commission in its continuing effort to remain financially self-supporting, will once again seek Playground Program sponsorships.

Letters, followed with phone calls, will be forth coming shortly to local business and civic organizations of Cohasset.

Playground sponsorships provide enormous, daily exposure for businesses as each sponsor will be listed on more than 250 children's and staff T-shirts. Further, sponsors will be noted in the Summer Playground Program activity booklet and released to all local news media 3 or 4 times each year.

Mailing will be done soon or you may call the Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 for more information regarding this unique advertising and community support opportunity. The following are the 2005 Playground sponsors who are again thanked for their support.

The 2005 Playground Sponsorship List includes: Goodwin Graphics, 164 CJC Highway; Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank, 28 South Main Street; The Good Sport, Inc., 166 Cushing Highway (Route 3A); Anderson Fuel, 331 Gannett Rd., P.O. Advisory committee makes case for two-tiered override

MFORD@CNC.COM

"It was extremely discouraging for the school committee to decide to certify the budget given to us originally and not make any fine tuning changes."
— Tucker Glavin, Advisory Committee

The Advisory Committee — making the decision to issue a "position statement" rather than just vote the budgets up or down — took the unanimous stance to recommend selectmen put two general override questions on the ballot this spring.

The committee, which consists of nine citizens who recommend actions to Town Meeting on everything that comes before them, met Monday night exactly 24 hours before selectmen also voted for a two-tiered override.

Both override figures include money for the school and municipal budgets and neither figure would provide either budget with everything asked for – in order to do that, the override would have to be about $1.9 million of which $1.3 million would be for the schools.

While the Advisory Committee unanimously supported putting an override choice before the voters this year, it sought to ratchet the larger number that had been floated down to what it said is a more palatable figure.

The committee initially proposed a $750,000 override would provide $505,000 for the schools and $245,000 for the municipal budget, but selectmen reduced that total to $725,000 on Tuesday night.

The school department has floated the $500,000 figure as the minimum needed to meet contractual obligations and fixed costs; it would represent no new personnel, the advisory committee said.

The $1.495 million would provide $1.1 million for the schools and $395,000 for the municipal budget. Of the $395,000 for the municipal side – about $150,000 could be used to pay benefits for new school employees who could be hired if the higher override passes.

Voters can vote for both override questions, one or neither. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, if both overrides pass, the larger override would take effect even if it won by fewer votes.

Tucker Glavin and Pat Waters of the Advisory Committee are the group's liaisons to the School Committee. They expressed some disappointment that the School committee certified a $13.9 million budget figure – which was the amount the schools put on the table in early February and said it was the advisory committee's job to "push back." The men's consensus was the school committee had not put down the gauntlet, so to speak, and said what the schools really need.

"It was extremely discouraging for the School Committee to decide to certify the budget given to us originally and not make any fine-tuning changes," Glavin said. He said he was fully in favor of an override for the schools and town, noting the school committee would get 90 percent of its requests with the higher override number suggested by the Advisory Committee, although that is about $200,000 less than the School Committee wants.

Glavin, who said it was the charge of the Advisory Committee to be fiscally responsible, was also critical of the Town Manager, noting that his "critical needs list" number needs to also come down. (On Tuesday, however, Town Manager Bill Griffin and Selectmen slashed their "needs" list).

At Monday's meeting, Waters agreed with Glavin noting the School Committee and selectmen had continued to posture and it important that the Advisory Committee help find a middle ground.

"We asked the School Committee 'to tell us what you really need' and they stuck to their guns and left the number of the table."

Waters urged the board to take a strong position "we can all get our minds around." He said the schools should not take the position of supporting an override that would fully fund their proposed budget and nothing else.

During the "budget season" the Advisory Committee had a broad philosophical discussion, conducted line-item reviews, and raised pointed questions on departmental budgets. This formed the basis for the Advisory Committee's unanimous recommendation of the two-tiered override approach with a push back on the top number, Waters said.

Selectmen divided on support for larger override

He said he would "reluctantly" support the larger override while at the same time he expressed deep concern for those on fixed incomes who might not be able to afford a tax increase.

The standing-room-only audience, made up largely of parents of school-age children and supporters of the entire proposed school budget, was not happy with selectmen Gary Vanderweil and Ralph Dormitzer, who said they could not support the higher override. While not exactly booed, the two selectmen's opinions were greeted negatively with loud grumbling. Some people retorted without being recognized by the chairman as having the floor.

It remains to be seen if the split in the Board of Selectmen is representative of the public at large.

Historically, Cohasset budgets, contingent on an override, sail through Town Meeting which usually draws upwards of 300 voters. But the ballot votes traditionally have a tougher time where a turnout of 50 percent would equate to more than 2,500 voters.

This year, Town Meeting is trying something new and would eliminate the need for a subsequent Town Meeting to balance the budget following the override vote. Voters will be asked to support Town Manager Bill Griffin's balanced budget that would not require an override and to also support two supplemental budgets contingent on the $725,000 and $1.495 million overrides, respectively.

With a $725,000 override, the owner of a property valued at $750,000 would see a tax increase of $241 attributable to the override alone for a total of $323 including the regular increase allowed under Prop. 2-1/2. With a $1.495 million override, the taxes on that same house attributable to the override would be $503 for a total of $585. General overrides are permanent tax increases.

Selectman Spofford said deciding whether to support the entire school budget was an issue of trust. He made it clear he put his trust in the School Committee and Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh and was convinced the schools need everything they are asking for.

"I believe the School Committee worked diligently and this is not wishful thinking," he said.

Both Vanderweil and Dormitzer disagreed. Dormitzer said the school department, which would like to add 16 new or expanded positions, had not prioritized its list. He also criticized the schools financial forecasting for utilities costs. Dormitzer also questioned why the schools aren't charging the "going rate" for its tuition-based, all-day kindergarten program which he said could bring in another $180,000. Vanderweil described all-day kindergarten as "daycare with education" and said the town should not be subsidizing day care. He said the program should cost as much as daycare does.

School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams said what Dormitzer considers luxuries the school department considers necessities, such as someone to answer the security buzzer by the front door.

Dormitzer took umbrage at Williams' characterization of his comments, saying he did not say "luxuries" but viewed potential cost savings as "opportunities."

Williams said the mission of the school department was to move the district forward so students could go to good colleges and be well-rounded.

Ronnie McMorris, a former selectman, who urged the board to put the a single override on the ballot that fully funded the proposed school budget, pointed out state aid has been decreasing, putting greater burden for paying for the schools on property taxes. She also put in a plug for the return of middle school sports, a program that was cut a few years ago.

But Paul Bilodeau, a firefighter, urged caution. "The all-or-nothing approach scares me," he said, adding he sees different factions in town. "My feeling is it would be tough to sell one override number."

The proposed budget certified by the School Committee is $13.9 million (about a 13 percent increase over last year), so if the larger override passes – of which the schools' share is $1.1 million – some trimming would have to be done.

Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee said in a "perfect world everyone would get what they asked for." But she said a $1.1 million infusion into the school budget is considerable.

Eight teachers offer resignations

At the School Committee's Thursday, March 2 meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh announced eight staff members have submitted their notice of resignation or intention to retire at the end of the school year. Staff members include:

- Anthony (Tony) Rolfe: Middle school social studies (retirement effective June 30, 2006).
- Edward Leary: High school English (retirement effective June 30, 2006).
- Joseph Bouchard: High school social studies (retirement effective June 30, 2006).
- Brenda D'Alotto: High school English (effective Feb. 2, 2006).
- Suzanne Coley: Osgood speech therapist (retirement effective June 30, 2006).
- Shannon McIntosh: Deer Hill grade 5 (effective June 30, 2006).
- Todd Ferguson: Middle school long term English substitute (effective Feb. 17, 2006).
- Lillian Curley: Osgood instructional aide (effective Feb. 22, 2006).

School override request still short

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department says typically, it needs a 7 percent increase from year to year just to keep up with fixed costs and contractual obligations.

The school department voted to certify a $13,987,198 budget Thursday (March 2), and in turn, approved going for a $1.3 million override.

While the 13.3 percent increase over fiscal 2006 will be enough to help the department take a "baby step forward," members of the committee pointed out there are at least $500,000 in other requests that were not included in the budget and cannot be put off much longer, a possible indication another override could be necessary for fiscal 2008. The school department says typically, it needs a 7 percent increase from year to year just to keep up with fixed costs and contractual obligations.

There is roughly $345,000 in supplemental needs requests, which were not included in the fiscal 2007 budget and includes the following:

• The Osgood School is in need of new carpet in the library, early reading materials, a cold laminator, science materials, 13 classroom area rugs, two instructional aides, and an increase in work hours for its secretary and clerical aide, the school department said.

• The Deer Hill School needs one automatic floor scrubber, one high-speed floor buffer and one clerical aide for the office.

• At the middle-high school, supplies and materials for one new foreign language teacher and one new humanities teacher are needed, as well as the funds for math league transportation and math league dues, and social studies field trips. The school also needs funding for newspaper and periodical subscriptions.

• The middle school band classes need new concert bass drums and a stand, a xylophone and a stand, chimes, a timpani, snare drums, a drum kit, and music stands.

• The middle-high school also needs one physical education and health teacher, one humanities teacher, one technology education teacher, and three instructional aides as well as one special education department head, one library aide, and MCAS remediation teacher support, which would come in the form of two teachers at six hours per week, and each teacher would work for 10 weeks at a time. The school also needs a .75 part-time technology aide.

• In addition to the supplemental requests, there was $82,600 in technology requests, which were also not included in the fiscal 2007 budget. The recommendations came from the Technology Planning Committee, which is a sub-committee of the Strategic Planning Committee.

• The Osgood and Deer Hill Schools need one data storage and management server, and the district needs 10 ink jet printers. The district also needs one video camera and eight televisions with stands.

• The middle school needs funding for phase II and phase III of its technology education program, which includes 20 modular physics based programs to cover science and engineering related to MCAS testing, and new staff.

• The high school needs five personal computers for the writing lab as well as two "smart boards" for the technology labs. The high school would also like to become an annual member of Virtual High School, which offers online courses for high school students.

• There is also a list of capital needs which did not have any figures associated for costs as members of the school committee suggested the capital projects be included in future town budgets.

• The Osgood School needs a new generator, paint in the classrooms and hallways, refinishing of its wood railing and stairs in the front entrance, replacement of the cement sidewalk at the building's entrance, buzzer intercom system and security cameras, and 10 personal computers or Apple computers for the computer lab.

• Deer Hill needs its tiles repaired in the main corridor, a buzzer intercom system and security cameras, paint in the corridors and cafeteria, and the gym floor refinished.

• The middle-high school needs new bleachers for Alumni Field, as well as paint for the corridors and classrooms. The school also needs a computer and telephone drop for room 266 A to increase police support and presence. The track needs to be resurfaced, the gym floor needs to be refinished, and the school needs 10 new cafeteria tables, 50 student desks and 30 middle school lockers.

Full copies of the fiscal 2007 school budget are available at the office of the superintendent. For more information, please call the office at (781) 383-6111.

Reducing Route 3A parking could help the bottom line parking "in reserve" that could be converted to parking if needed down the road.

Moore also said he does not buy the contention the parking change will raise much revenue. "I think it's a real stretch for us to believe by making this zoning change we will solve the financial problems in town very much," he said.

"...we believe it will not only provide the town with new commercial tax revenues, but additional retail, business amenities and services."

— Peter Brown, Economic Development Committee

Economic Development Committee Chairman Peter Brown said the bylaw change would make a difference.

"To the contrary, we believe it will not only provide the town with new commercial tax revenues, but additional retail, business amenities and services — all well controlled under the review by the relevant town boards," he said.

Brown said the EDC reached a preliminary estimate that additional revenue in excess of $100,000 could be generated each year for the next five to 10 years with the commercial expansion the bylaw change would allow.

"This would be conditioned by market forces, financing rates, municipal and governmental cooperation with new development and a positive attitude from the relevant town boards to make this happen," he said.

Brown also said the parking change would not alter the town's character.

"Due to the limited number and size of 3A properties, the kind of large-scale development that would negatively impact the town character, will not occur for a variety of reasons," he said citing demand, demographics, and lack of immediate access to a major highway.

"It is estimated that the new and expanded development along 3A brought about by the change in the parking bylaw — in addition to being subject to the review by the town boards, primarily the Planning Board, and market forces — will generate an approximate additional 15-25 percent greater density in those properties that take advantage of the bylaw change," he said. "We are also estimating that a few property owners may not take advantage of the new bylaw."

The article would also increase the required green strip along the highway from 20 to 35 feet – a move which Moore, the Planning Board chairman, applauds. Before the green strip was increased, Moore said he was adamantly opposed to the bylaw. "I went from adamantly opposed to mildly concerned," he said.

Moore, who has served on the Planning Board for 20 years, said what has been replaced along 3A has been attractive for the most part due in part to the board having some discretion with the parking bylaw.

He cited two examples: Cohasset Plaza, which was once an old car dealership, and Cushing Plaza (now Shaw's) which was an unattractive strip mall with tons of asphalt. He also noted those two plazas are also designed to have stacking lanes so traffic does not back up out onto 3A.

"I'm concerned about the possible long-term effects of making a wholesale change in the parking," Moore said.

But Brown, the EDC chairman, said the bylaw change could be a good news story for Cohasset.

"The parking bylaw article and the TOD (Transit Oriented District) article accomplish the selectmen's mission of generating new sources of commercial tax revenues that do not add a burden to existing businesses," he said "The Town's current Highway Business District Parking Bylaw is out of sync with current environmental and development standards in greater Boston and completely discourages commercial expansion and development.

"It will take time to generate new development but the sooner we provide the opportunity, the faster new revenues will happen."

me, but then things get kind of foggy," he said. But Hernan said he never forgot the man who brought him back to safety.

Eventually Hernan was transferred to a hospital Coast Guard ship that was used for transporting the wounded off Iwo Jima, then went to the Army hospital in Guam. He then went back to Hawaii and then to California, followed by Rhode Island and eventually Massachusetts. Altogether, Hernan was transferred from hospital to hospital for seven months.

Hernan was injured in his lower back and there is still a piece of metal shrapnel in the lower lobe of his right lung. "No MRIs for me," he joked.

"I think the government wants it back," Peak quipped.

To celebrate their reunion, Atlantica Restaurant treated the men and members of Hernan's family to dinner Thursday, March 2, exactly 61 years since they had parted ways in Iwo Jima. Hernan said looking around at his family he told Peak, "Just think, if it wasn't for you, none of this could've happened."

Peak began his journey back to Indiana last Friday morning, and when the two met to say their good-byes, Hernan was wearing a baseball cap Peak had given him with "Iwo Jima" and the number of their division embroidered on it.

"This is my trophy from Bennie," said Hernan, to which Peak, with his arm around his friend, replied, "Here's my trophy from the war."

Webelos Den 1 captures gold ribbon in Klondike derby

This year's Webelos Klondike Derby was held on Feb. 11 at Camp Squanto in Myles Standish Park and the weather was synonymous with the events name, it was 10 degrees with wind chills hovering around zero.

The Derby was attended by 30 dens (approximately 200, plus Cub Scouts) from the South Shore.

The Klondike Derby is a yearly event held across the country to teach the Scouts about winter survival and camping essentials. The Derby consists of 10 stations, such as knot tying, camp site preparations, outdoor cooking, first aid, map reading, flag ceremony, camp fire building and safety. Each den is required to build their own sled [modeled after a dog sled] and pull it from station to station. The day starts at 9am and ends at 3:30pm.

Override options

It's important that all Cohasset voters understand the two-tiered, "pyramid" override system.

Selectmen have voted to place two override questions on the ballot in a special election that will be held sometime this spring. The overrides would raise the tax levy for fiscal 2007 beyond the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year.

Overriding Prop. 2-1/2 is allowed under the state law and puts the decision to raise the tax levy squarely in the hands of the voters. A general override for the operating budget like the ones proposed this year would be a permanent tax increase and becomes a permanent part of the tax base going forward.

A general override for the operating budget like the ones proposed this year would be a permanent tax increase and becomes a permanent part of the tax base going forward.

Selectmen, who have the sole power to put override questions on the ballot, have agreed to two override questions: one asking for a $1.495 million increase and the other asking for a $725,000 increase. An individual voter can vote "yes" on both questions; "no" on both questions; or vote "yes" on one and "no" on the other.

For example, if a voter favors the $725,000 override, but thinks the $1.495 million override is too much, he or she can vote "yes" for the lower number and "no" for the higher number. If a voter feels the $725,000 isn't enough – he or she could vote "no" on that number and "yes" on the higher number. The voter who doesn't want either tax increase would vote "no" for both; the voter that wants to help ensure a tax increase passes might choose to vote "yes" on both questions.

Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, if both overrides pass, the larger override would take effect even if it won by fewer votes. In other words, if the $1.495 million override wins by a majority of just a single vote, it would still take effect, even if the $725,000 override passes by hundreds of votes. It's important to stress that if both overrides pass – both do not take effect, just the higher override does.

The annual tax impact of the $725,000 override on the owner of a home valued at $750,000 would be $241 attributable to the override. That same property owner would see an increase attributable to the override of $503 if the $1.495 million override passes.

Whew! It is complicated and a lot to try to explain but it is important now that the official "override campaign" season begins in earnest, that everyone understands the rules.

We do hope that going forward in what will likely be an emotional debate that voters will respect the views of those who do not agree with them. We understand there is a lot at stake on all sides of the issue.

As always, here at the Mariner we will provide ample space for letters on the issues including this year's historic override vote.

Selectmen plan to vote on a date for the special election at their meeting March 21.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Summer job fair for students

TO THE EDITOR:

When our children were growing up at our former property at 50 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, everyone had tasks, either in the house (i.e. cleaning, dusting, etc.) or outside (i.e. weeding, mowing, etc.).

Today I was calling the community center and the high school to inquire if anyone had registered for work after school or for this summer as I would like a high school student(s) to help me organize my closets, my office and to help me on the grounds. Then I remembered that Senator Bob Hedlund was looking for Interns at the State House.

I used to recruit young students to be guides for visitors coming to the State House. They would be trained to know the history of the State House, how a bill was passed, the architectural beauty of the Bullfinch design, what it cost to recover the dome in gold and the pine cone on the dome recognized that Maine was once part of the Commonwealth.

I telephoned our Cohasset Republican Chairman to suggest the Republican Town Committee sponsor a student job fair. The fair would assist students to find summer employment so as to save for college, acquire work skills that could be used on college applications and learn skills that would help in future endeavors. My sister worked in a law office one summer and she later went to law school and was editor of the law review, all because she wrote well and had that early experience.

In cooperation with the Cohasset Republican Town Committee Chair Kevin O'Donnell, I am suggesting we hold a job fair and any business that is looking for summer help should call me or mail us the skills they are looking for, hours required, location, etc.

Please call me if you or your company are interested in registering for our summer employment job fair at 781-383-0031.

'Cost for me is too great'

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Tuesday night it was tough to decide whether to watch The Unit or The Selectmen. I decided on The Selectmen because I had a horse in the race. It was entertaining but costly. Especially to retirees. One highlight was Rob Spofford's false choice offered to his fellow selectmen via his question:[my phrasing] "It comes down to whether you believe Superintendent Walsh or not. Do you believe her or not?" The answer, of course, is that it is not a question of whether you believe her or not. I for one believe that she believes what she is proposing. I really do. The problem is I disagree with her conclusion. Further, I don't disagree because I think she is wrong, I disagree because the cost for me is too great. Spofford's question, unintentionally I'm sure, is truly divisive in the debate.

In the past month or so I've heard a lot of numbers and opinions on the issue of the override. Most are somewhat self serving. Let me suggest a number that focuses me on this debate. If I look at my last property tax bill, take the 62.23 percent that the bill states is the "portion attributable to education," multiply that by the next 10 years and I discover I'll be paying $44,040 to educate Cohasset kids. Since I'm living on a fixed income that amount is a lot of money for me. With the larger override suggested I'd expect my share of paying for other folks' education in that 10 years would exceed $50,000. Retirees living on fixed incomes with more valuable real estate than mine [my house is close to the median value] will pay more. Fred Koed was right to identify this as a big issue for the elderly. But it's really an issue for all segments of Cohasset's electorate. This is a tax that will be with us forever.

Clearly what this issue will come down to will be two events: (1) town meeting and (2) the vote to override Prop 2-1/2. For me the larger override is unacceptable while the smaller is merely very costly. For those with kids in the schools they will disagree with me. That's fair. However, every voter in Cohasset ought to make sure they go to town meeting and vote on the override if it survives town meeting. I know those with kids in school will be focused on this and I urge all the other voters who don't have kids in the schools and want to voice their opinion to come out and participate.

Terry McCarthy
Old Pasture Road

Objects to this week's question

TO THE EDITOR:

I find this week's question divisive in and of itself. Perhaps the town "appears to be split into two distinct camps" in your opinion. However, this seems to be a position that only serves to perpetuate divisiveness.

I strongly feel the majority of the community is interested in the best interest of the town as a whole. As on any issues, there are minority "camps", however these sides do not speak to the great number of citizens.

This town has made many efforts to open communication. Examples include the creation of Cohasset's Strategic Plan, a community based Curriculum Committee, and recent forums including the Selectmen, Advisory committee and School committee.

I for one, am for this town, which clearly the schools are part. How can there be a town without the schools, or can the schools exist without the town?

Please present factual based questions to help the community educate themselves about these candidates.

Christine Cunning
48 Jerusalem Road

Confusion over source of signs

TO THE EDITOR:

As elections are approaching, signs are popping around the town of Cohasset. It has come to our attention that there is confusion over the recent posting of several red and white signs supporting the schools of Cohasset.

The Committee to Support Cohasset schools is not responsible for these signs. Although originally formed to support the FY'07 school budget, the group is now focused on supporting a town override — an override that supports both the schools and the municipal services.

The Committee to Support Cohasset schools will be communicating and educating the community on the need for an override. We will be creating materials such as signs, flyers and ads. However, our message will not be singularly focused. We want the best for our town.

We hope this letter clarifies any confusion and we look forward to working together with other groups in town to pass a much-needed override!

History behind old railroad spur

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The Greenbush rail restoration project has many complicated environmental issues. The MBTA chose to obtain their environmental permits at the Commonwealth level. The advantage to them is that they are not beholden to the individual Conservation Commissions of the five towns undergoing rail construction. Now, the MBTA only has to deal with one environmental organization, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. But, the disadvantage of this arrangement is that the Town Conservation Commissions have been removed from the permitting and oversight roles. Thus, when we have questions about the MBTA's environmental methods, we need to go to the Commonwealth DEP. We can't solve the issue locally.

Now, let's switch gears for a moment and then we'll come back to the topic of environmental permitting and oversight. Part of the Greenbush is the construction of a pedestrian / bike path from the station on Route 3A, across Route 3A through Whitney Woods into Wompatuck Park. This path will be about 1.5 miles long. Clearly, this is not a trivial undertaking.

You might ask why the MBTA would build such a path as a part of the commuter rail project. Although it is a great idea and will benefit Cohasset residents, the MBTA is not generally known for their altruistic activities. The answer is very interesting. This path follows the route of an old railroad spur that was used as recently as the Korean War to ship the munitions produced in the factories located in what is know Wompatuck Park.

The MBTA agreed to build the bike path along the path of the railroad spur line to obtain the needed portion of the old spur.

When this spur rail line was no longer used the land came under the ownership of the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. A portion of this spur, where it joined the Greenbush main line, was needed by the MBTA to construct the station and a small portion of the main line. The MBTA agreed to build the bike path along the path of the railroad spur line to obtain the needed portion of the old spur. We guess you'd call this is a quid pro quo.

Now back to environmental stuff.

The MBTA bike path was not permitted under the blanket DEP permit, but by the Cohasset Conservation Commission (Con Com). Thus, the local Con Com has jurisdiction over this project. As with any environmental project, the rules that must be followed by the permittee are listed in a document called "Orders of Conditions. Last month, the bike path site was visited by the Trustees of Reservation, owners of Whitney Woods, and they noticed that the MBTA had not followed the Orders of Conditions. Consequently, the Cohasset Con Com stopped all construction and held a public meeting on March 2. They issued a letter to the MBTA to appear before the Con Com at 8:00 PM on March 23 for a hearing about the MBTA's non-compliance. Until this hearing all work on the bike path has been suspended. We'll keep you posted as this topic unfolds.

Other construction areas

In case you noticed, not much work has been done lately on the Pleasant Street rail crossing. The grading and utilities are all in place. The project is waiting for the asphalt plants to open. A layer of asphalt is put under the track as a normal part of crossing construction. They expect that the asphalt plants will open shortly. However, their opening is weather dependent. With the warm weather predicted for this weekend, hopefully it will be sooner rather than later.

Sohier Street construction continues to be "on schedule," which calls for completion in very early May. Let's all hope that this proves to be accurate so we can rid ourselves of the agony of the Sohier Street closure

We expect that work will begin around the end of March or early April on the blasting at the foot of Pond Street at Spring Street. Also, when Sohier Street is complete the work crews will; probably relocate to the new North Main St. crossing near the Cohasset Golf Club.

Stone piers tell an ancient story

MARINER'S CORNER

STEVE BOBO

This is the second in a series of columns whose purpose is to stimulate a general recognition of the part our maritime heritage has had in shaping the character of Cohasset.

As one looks around Cohasset Harbor, one immediately notices large numbers of stone walls and piers . Many of the piers are now covered with buildings of one sort or another, Atlantica, the Salt House, Mill River Marine, etc. More modern waterfronts have few such structures arrayed around their waterfront; and those that do exist are usually supplemented by concrete abutments and seawalls. In themselves, stone piers tell an ancient story. It was only a 100 years or so in our past that these walls and piers were populated by ships and large fishing vessels.

If one studies the picture, it will be seen that the boats appear to be nearly out of water. The tide was out. They would look much more normal if the water were higher up their sides. These large fishing schooners and world trading vessels were resting on the bottom when the pictures were taken. Their waterlines are some two feet higher than the water. They are all aground and will have to wait for high tide to leave Cohasset.

Nowadays, we think of groundings of larger vessels as being an in-extremis condition. However, for many thousands of years, such was the condition for all floating vessels unless they were moored out in deep water, a condition which made them difficult to load and provision. For nearly 2,000 years one of the requirements to be met by those building boats was to make them so they could be comfortably grounded. As vessels became larger this constraint added bulk and strength to boats considerably in excess of that necessary for travel in any but the worst weather. The stone docks facilitated things greatly.

These large fishing schooners and world trading vessels were resting on the bottom when the picture was taken.

One may judge the significance of a community's early attachment to maritime commerce by the number location, size and importance of it's stone piers. And from this criterion if no other, Cohasset ranks as an important former seagoing community. If we know what to look for, we can see other manifestations of a long and intense connection with the sea. It was only in the late 1870s that maritime commerce became uneconomical for the ships which, because of their small size, could not compete with larger vessels from deeper ports like Gloucester and New Bedford. At that point the harbor was relegated to yachts and other small craft. The families which had made their fortunes in maritime commerce had learned to become traders and were no less successful in their new professions. Accordingly we have many old families, former backers and users of Cohasset vessels, who have dealt in textiles, leather, woolens and other trading commodities of the early 20th century.

HEALTH NOTES

Answering questions about proposed mutual aid pact

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On April 1st, at the Town meeting, the Board of Health is sponsoring Article 23 which will ask the Town to approve a medical mutual aid agreement to join a mutual aid district which covers greater Boston towns including Cambridge, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and others. This agreement will enable better communication between towns, and permit us to call upon most of the medical resources available in the greater Boston for a public health emergency. One might ask why we need this. The answers are below.

• Why mutual aid for public health? Public health involves first-responder responsibilities, much like police and fire departments. The mutual aid agreement makes it possible for public health to enjoy similar support from communities for events that overwhelm local capacity. Communities agree to consider requests under the mutual aid agreement, and provide assistance to their colleagues when able.

• Why must this agreement be approved by town meeting, or city council? The mutual aid agreement is an intermunicipal agreement, authorized by MGL c.40, § 4A. This statute requires that citizens of the Town must approve intermunicipal agreements by town meeting or other means.

• There is legislation pending that would create mutual aid. Why not wait for that legislation? The pending legislation creates a mutual aid agreement for a declared state of emergency, or major disaster. This public health mutual aid agreement is designed to permit communities to request support from each other for events that overwhelm local capacity, but may not rise to the level of a state of emergency.

• Are there any cost employment and liability issues associated with participation in the region? No. Any person responding to a mutual aid request remains an employee of his or her own (sending) community even while working in another community. Each agency, sending or receiving, is responsible for its own employees' wages, benefits, and similar obligations. The agreement also stipulates that each employer is responsible for the acts of their own employees. This is consistent with fire and police mutual aid agreements.

This public health mutual aid agreement is designed to permit communities to request support from each other for events that overwhelm local capacity.

• How will someone from another town know what to do in our community? Staff from other communities will operate under the direction of staff of the receiving community. The agreement asks that requesting communities be specific about the scope of work they will require from sending communities.

• Do we have to send our staff? No, the agreement specifies that the provision of aid is voluntary. Communities are asked to consider the request, and send assistance, as they are able. The agreement requires that requesting agencies be as specific as possible about the type of support they need and the length of time it is needed. This information will aid other communities in determining their response.

• What about reimbursement? There are no provisions for automatic reimbursement for the provision of mutual aid. Communities may negotiate arrangements individually. This agreement conforms to FEMA policy regarding mutual aid. FEMA requires that any mutual aid agreement must be in writing, must be in effect before the event, and it cannot be contingent on a Presidential disaster declaration.

• Why do we have to have an agreement with communities far away from us? The mutual aid agreement is being implemented in existing MDPH Emergency Preparedness Regional coalitions. These communities have been collaborating regarding emergency preparedness issues for a number of years. Additionally, it is potentially beneficial to have an agreement in place with communities beyond immediate neighbors. There are more and better resources in a larger coalition.

• Why aren't all our immediate neighbors part of this region? Can we have an agreement with them? MDPH Emergency Preparedness Regional coalitions do sometimes separate natural partners. If there are additional communities outside of our region that we wish to join in a mutual aid agreement, we can enter into a similar agreement with them.

• There may be a better way of doing mutual aid. Why can't we change the agreement, or create our own?

Mutual aid is not mutual if agreements differ between communities. The intent of asking communities to accept the agreement is to preserve mutual aid, not to dictate policy. Nevertheless, communities are afforded flexibility in how they implement the agreement.

Cohasset's Board of Health will, with the Town Manager, authorize representatives who receive requests for assistance. But, it's never mandatory to provide assistance. Communities are not expected to deplete their own resources to provide aid. Communities agree to consider requests under the mutual aid agreement, and provide assistance to their colleagues when able.

The Board hopes you will vote to approve this warrant article.

Scorecards needed today

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

After all these years, I can still remember the names of the infielders for the Boston Bees in 1938 and, believe me, Elbie Fletcher, Tony Cuccinello, Rabbit Warstler and Debs Garms are eminently forgettable. They finished fifth.

But I can't for the life of me recall anything about the infield for the Boston Red Sox in 2004, the year they won their first World Series in 86 years, except that the first baseman kept the ball after the last out and the Sox sued to get it back.

Only two years after Our Olde Towne Team hoisted the most coveted banner in baseball in Fenway Park you'll need more than just a scorecard to identify the players. You'll need a state-of-the-art edition of the Baseball Encyclopedia.

The Boston Globe the other day found it necessary to pause in its coverage of the Red Sox spring training camp in Fort Myers, Fla., to identify the new players by their numbers — in case they haven't finished printing scorecards by opening day, probably.

J. T. Snow is No. 84. Who?

Somehow I knew it would come to this once free agency really settled in, that the 35,000 or so fans who fill Fenway Park daily would wind up rooting for laundry instead of the people who are wearing it.

Why do I get the feeling that, when a member of the Red Sox hits a home run, George Steinbrenner has his checkbook out by the time he touches second and he's New York Yankee by the time he crosses the plate? Hi, there, Johnny Damon!

And why do I get the feeling that the Red Sox don't really care because they have a checkbook, too, and there's this guy who just homered in Cleveland . . . Hi, there, Coco Crisp! (No. 12, you know)

Will there ever be another Ted Williams, who was here for 20 years, long enough to have tunnel named after him? Or Carl Yastrzemski, who was around long enough for everyone to learn to spell his name, which took another 20 years.

Baseball isn't the only sport where laundry has become more important than the person in it.

Bruins' fans will remember the Kraut Line, Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Porky Dumart, the heart and soul of the hockey club for years, and the Uke Line of Johnny Bucyk, Vic Stasiuk and Bronco Horvath, that succeeded them.

Now it's nothing to see a line start a game only to be broken up in the second period and maybe even traded before the next game.

The great Celtics teams that won 11 out of 13 NBA titles featured the same players, Bill Russell, Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman, Tom Heinsohn, Tom Sanders, Frank Ramsey, John Havlicek, and the Jones boys, Sam and Casey.

Now it seems like it's Paul Pierce and a bunch of guys who played elsewhere two weeks ago and will be playing somewhere else next month.

Don't get me wrong. Free agency, which is behind it all, is a great thing for the players. But sports today is a little like playing cards. You get a new hand dealt to you every year. And you'd better hope you anted up enough to get good cards.

Selectman's debate

Join Our Town co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin as they moderate an exciting, televised selectman's debate on the issues with candidates Roger Hill and Ted Carr.

The hour-long debate is scheduled to air on March 13, 14, 16, 18, 19, 20 and 21.

Comcast added two additional time slots for election season at 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

The debate with all four School Committee candidates will start airing March 23.

Shedding light on the snow-removal budget

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

A recent letter to the editor reacting to recent stories about the deficit in the snow removal budget and other budget issues illustrates some common misunderstandings about the municipal budget process.

The town allocated $50,000 at last April's Town Meeting, which already has been depleted by this season's two moderate snowstorms. But this line item is a fiction and for good reason. All parties involved in the budget process — the DPW head, the town manager, finance director, selectmen, Advisory Committee, and Town Meeting — are fully aware that when they plug a figure into the snow removal line item in the budget article for the April Town Meeting, it is an estimate on the low end. We are able to do this because this is the only line item in a municipal budget which state law permits a city or town to operate at a deficit (if needed) throughout the fiscal year. Then, after we have received our certified free cash figure from the state for that fiscal year, we can draw from the free cash at a Special Town Meeting in order to close out the outstanding snow removal deficit on the town's books.

So, contrary to the writer's tongue-in-cheek contention that our public officials must "have lived in Florida for the past few decades," they have a clear idea of what they are doing when they put a number into the line item for snow removal. Indeed, most municipalities in the state similarly tend to make budget estimates for snow removal on the low side. Why do we do so?

For one thing, it is the single-most unpredictable line item in the budget. A few years ago we expended $35,000. A couple of years later we spent more than $235,000. State law takes into account the reality that no one (including municipal officials) can predict the weather. In addition, one must understand some of the nuances of the municipal budget process. At the forthcoming April Town Meeting, we will expend every nickel of our revenues to balance the town budget for fiscal 2007. But if Town Meeting this April were to place say, $150,000 into the snow removal line item instead of $50,000, we would have $100,000 less to use in the FY '07 budget (this is the salary equivalent of two or three town employees) for other needs and obligations that must be met starting July 1 (as opposed to the snow budget line item that may, or may not, be expended at some point mid-year).

Thus, not only does the current manner of estimating the snow removal budget make sense relative to the overall budget, but it also allows our town some degree of flexibility in an otherwise inflexible budgeting process.

The frustration on the part of the average taxpayer with our ever-increasing budgets and property taxes, of which this letter is an example, is understandable. But it also breeds a desire to advocate rigid solutions. In discussing the town budget in general, the letter writer stated, "...a smart and efficient town would force our school committee to keep to the 3 percent spending increase limit. Only by setting a precedent (as voters did in finally preventing the annual override request last year) and sticking to it will we ever teach our elected officials that it is their job to push back on spending requests, suppliers, special interests, etc. in order to maintain a system of acceptable annual tax increases."

However, such reasoning fails to recognize that our seemingly-intractable budget problems truly appear to have become structural relative to the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2. Given that the state may be decreasing our net local aid in FY '07, it should be apparent to every concerned citizen that there will be no easy solutions to our town's budget problems for the foreseeable future.

Speaking as a taxpayer, trust me, I too, share the pain when our taxes go up. But as with everything else in life, you get what you pay for. If we want our town government to provide us with the same level of public safety protection and other services we have now, as well as a quality school system, we will have to pay the necessary taxes for that to happen.

And that's about as simple as it gets.

Distressed by high-tax insensitivity

COMMENTARY

RICHARD BROOKS

I had the interesting experience of reading a "challenging" letter from another reader in a recent Mariner. Several of the statements in the letter merit commentary. I am not familiar with the credentials that the writer possesses to support his statements, however well meaning, but please allow me to comment based on my spectrum of professional credentials and related experiences.

Let me begin with the writer's statement that he finds disconcerting the "general ignorance" of some members of our Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee relative to the problems facing our school system. I disagree, especially relative to our selectmen. Cohasset is blessed to have a current group of selectmen with such maturity and business/municipal management experience and who truly have the Town's best interests at heart. This board, who know well that their management job is to turn around Cohasset's years of misdirection, divisiveness and financial missteps, is the finest, most qualified board that Cohasset has had in years.

I'm positive that they recognize that the school department, as with other town departments, have a common history of prior managements choosing to solve multi-dimensional problems by throwing money at the problems rather than dealing with the problems face on in a business like, fiscally prudent manner. Organizations are managed by people who are accountable for managing other people assets and financial assets. Adverse down trends are rarely reversed by adding new money only! No private enterprises, excepting perhaps charities, are run in that naive fashion. It just does not work and can only exacerbate the problem.

I might add that the tax override "no" vote last year was the voters' message of support to the selectmen and to the town manager, calling for the management and fiscal turnaround to commence in earnest. I suspect we may see the same message this year as it appears that the tougher challenges will not be addressed. Very disappointing!

The second statement from the writer that catches the eye is the statement that a town-wide balanced budget is not grounded in reality and that it is an erroneous "notion" that a 3 percent increased balanced budget is an artificial, contrived, misleading objective that conforms to the unrealistic requirements of our state law known as Prop. 2-1/2 WOW!

Decades of experience have proven that Prop 2-1/2 was indeed the right medicine. This law thoughtfully provides for an override vote to exceed the 2-1/2 tax increase limitation if a majority of the voters is convinced that additional funds are also needed. Sounds like a solid democratic process to me. When the allowed "new growth" tax proceeds are added, the 2-1/2 percent in reality increases substantially. For Cohasset for FY 2007, it looks to be over 4 percent and inflation has not been a challenge!

Again, my observation is that Town Manager Bill Griffin is doing his job and doing it quite well. Cohasset is so used to depending upon overrides every year that the budget process departed from the correct approach, which Bill Griffin has appropriately re- instituted. He is an experienced professional and a breath of fresh air for Cohasset.

Relative to the writer's statement that he is unaware of a single person/family that has been forced to move out of Cohasset due to the high and escalating taxes, that may be true for him but I think most of us know of such cases. In the past two years, well over 300 existing homes in Cohasset have been sold and the average selling price for those homes is $650+K. It is naive not to realize that a number of those sellers were escaping the excessive tax burden. My next-door neighbor was one of those. Actually, the latest grumble around Town is that Cohasset is getting too expensive for even the wealthy to live here! Imagine Peter Roy waking up to find out he's the last to leave and having to drive all over Town to put out all the lights, including the schools!

I am distressed by the widespread insensitivity many exhibit relative to the impact that this high tax burden has on a large segment of our Townspeople. Perhaps we may need to look to a town regulation that Cohasset residency is a requirement for holders of top positions in our Town-paid institutions? But-would that force rent control?

The writer also states that he does not understand the "negativity" that has greeted the School Committee and the Superintendent by other Town Boards' members. Maybe this arises from past finger pointing by over-zealous supporters? Can I say, "Who is sans sin?"

In the SC elections in a few weeks, I am not going to vote for the money throwers. We need a steady flow of qualified, new SC members who will help identify the problems and exercise GMP (good management practices) to address all the causes, including justifying additional funding if found truly needed. Again dollars alone are rarely the answer—because they rarely are the only problem!

Concerning school district representatives, my observation is that public relations skills need enhancement, that those who would be lightening rods will attract lightning and that incrementalism is a most effective way to reaching a large goal when commonsense indicates that the "all at once" approach is probably not going to fly given the Town's too-high tax rate and the skepticism that exists. Thus, the school budget is usually the center of attention, with more publicity than all other Town Departments put together. Those other dept. budgets/requests should get "equal time". It's all real money! I'm pretty hopeful that the Selectmen and Town Manager know well that financial challenges exist in most every department. Their task ahead is as tough as it gets! Are the overrides a call for help or for guidance from the taxpaying voters?

I'm concerned that some academic performance indicators are starting to move in the wrong direction, that classic-indeed invaluable-enrichment/developmental programs such as Latin, arts, music, and athletics are disappearing. My intuition and experience tell me that we may well need some additional funds for the schools, but the formula for good performance is absolutely not one-dimensional.

The final statements of the writer that "every Town Dept. is being operated on a shoestring" and "I do not see any fat in our Town or School budgets" and "I have found Cohasset to be an exceptionally well-run community in my 12 years as a resident" also caught my attention. I guess I have to say that everything is relative?

I suggest "fat" comes in many forms and shapes, one just has to know where and how to look for it. Hint -pay attention to the Municipal Benchmarking data that is now being published. Exceptionally well run town? I feel we have now started back in that direction. Surely you must grant that we got a bit astray over the past several years? I lived in a lot of Mass. smaller and larger top, "bedroom" towns, such as Concord and Princeton, prior to moving to Cohasset about 7 years ago — and it was only after moving to this beautiful, charming, sea-side village that I realized how much "excitement" I was missing in those prior years! I truly hope, though, that I can afford to stay here for a few more years—a lot of good, friendly people live here! And without the Mariner and the Internet we probably would not even know we all have a lot in common (in addition to high taxes.)

Ask legislators to seek more local aid

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to share with you a letter I wrote to Rep. Garrett Bradley. A similar letter was sent to Sen. Robert Hedlund.

Dear Garrett:

As a citizen of Cohasset, I am asking for your support of legislative proposals to establish a minimum per pupil level of Chapter 70 aid to cities and towns, such as the $2,000 minimum advocated by the Town of Acton and endorsed by more than 25 other towns. Since the local aid reductions in mid-fiscal 2003, Cohasset has seen significant erosion in Chapter 70 aid.

Under the Governor's fiscal 2007 proposal, Cohasset's Chapter 70 funding would still be 19 percent below its fiscal 2002 level.

Cohasset's net state aid has remained essentially unchanged since fiscal 2004, while health insurance, special education, and fuel costs have increased at double-digit annual rates.

To meet these demands, Cohasset has reduced teaching staff, seen increases in class sizes, used operating overrides, and is considering another override for fiscal 2007 to maintain level services.

Cohasset receives only $832 in per pupil Chapter 70 aid, a factor of 12 less than the highest aid recipients. While Cohasset continues to cut services and pass overrides to support our schools, many of these highest aid recipients have millions of dollars in unused levy capacity. The Acton proposal establishing a $2,000 minimum would add only 8 percent to total Chapter 70 funding, yet would bring immediate relief to the 134 school districts impacted by the proposal.

We urge you to work with fellow legislators in order to bring greater equity to the system by establishing this minimum per pupil funding level.

Appalled by Tuesday's Selectmen's meeting

TO THE EDITOR:

I watched the Selectmen's Meeting Tuesday (3/07/2006) and was appalled by the cavalier attitude taken by some regarding the projected override in Cohasset. I would like to thank Selectman Dormitzer for showing the reasons why the school budget must be reviewed, simply the numbers are not trustworthy. The utility cost projections were shown to be numbers that were unsupported and not based on past experience regarding usage.

Mr. Spofford wants a higher number for the override. If I remember correctly, he was the chair of the school construction programs and did he not include cost effective equipment that would save us money on utilities?

It is obvious that there is gross mismanagement going on in the schools. It is also obvious that no one is controlling spending or appears to want to control spending. In all of the discussions I didn't hear one word spoken about who will be held accountable for the various budgets. Will it be the department heads? The Principals? The Fire Chief? The Police Chief? The Superintendent of Schools? Or will the over spending just be brushed off and put on the backs of the taxpayers?

If the Selectmen want to establish responsibility they should mandate that all budgets must be maintained and any overspending can only occur based on a Town emergency. If the department head overspends he/she should be terminated for gross mismanagement.

The school system doesn't appear to know what budget control means. They don't appear to hold anyone responsible for line items and they certainly don't keep us informed. The only way that the taxpayers can stop this runaway train in the schools is to level fund the school budget. I have lived here since 1968 and the schools have operated without financial oversight. The State tells us that the only control that we have over the School budget is the bottom line. Since the schools won't take financial control the taxpayers should. The superintendent has not explained why Cohasset is spending more than the State mandates.

The superintendent stated that she would need an extra $700,000 per year to run the Cohasset School System, it is obvious to me that she is not a manager nor is she able to control spending in our schools. She should be terminated for gross mismanagement and uncontrolled spending. She still hasn't justified to the Town why she increased Administration with an assistant principal position. Our school system only has 1,500 +/- students. Since moving to Town I have seen the school census exceed 2,000 and fall to below 1,300 and yet the budget always went up.

The school committee has not proven a real need for this level of spending nor have they fully explained to the public the need for this level of a budget. The School Committee is supposed to oversee the system to ensure that we are getting the level of education that we are paying for, and they have failed miserably. Our teachers want more money and yet we have many students paying for private tutors. Is this because all of our teachers cannot teach the subjects they are supposed to teach?

The taxpayers now have an election coming up and we can change the make-up of the School Committee and we should to get some fresh new ideas and put people in place who know the past, the present, and have some good ideas on how we should approach the future. We are talking about educating our children and it should not be costing us, as was stated at the Selectmen's meeting, $11,500 per student on average per year. Let's derail this runaway train and VOTE NO on any overrides.

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Teacher Staffing

	'02-'04 Change
COHASSET	-7.1%
Benchmark Peer Group	-9.0%

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts.

This chart looks at the number of full time equivalent teachers in Cohasset's school district in 2002, 2003 and 2004. The table below the chart sets forth the total change in teaching staff over that time period. This chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing staffing to other similar communities, one can get a sense for how Cohasset's teaching staff has changed relative to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

The company's methodology stems from the idea that one can learn a lot about how and how not to deliver services by looking at how other similar communities provide those same services. The cornerstone of this approach is to find an appropriate group of similar communities. Municipal Benchmarking derives a community's Benchmark Peer Group by comparing it to the other 350 communities in Massachusetts across 15 different variables.

The variables measure socio-economic factors, such as income per capita or median family income, demographic information, such as population and portion of the population that speaks English as a second language, and geographic factors, such as how big the community is and how many miles of road it contains.

Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group consists of: Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

What does Nobody Outcleans The Maids really mean?

Peace of mind.

To us, it means giving you the healthiest, most thorough housecleaning every visit. But to our customers, it takes on a bigger meaning, since we often hear comments like this:

"I used to use someone else till I heard how thorough you are – how your vacuums extend to clean the tops of ceiling fans and deep under beds, and how you clean kitchen and bathroom floors on hands and knees. Now, I pay you about the same as I paid them, but I get so much more!"

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the School Committee candidates: When it comes to the budget, town appears to be split into two distinct "camps" – the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communication and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the "two sides?"*

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Rick Flynn

I don't believe we are split into two camps. Over the past few years I have witnessed increased cooperation between the town boards during the budget process. I think each of the main players, the Board of Selectmen, the School Committee and the Advisory Board, have tried to cooperatively undertake their particular role in developing the budget. When that has been done, we have all come together in an effort to find common ground and do what we believe is in the best interest of the town.

There has been an increased willingness by each group to listen to various budget needs and to try and educate themselves on what is necessary to provide appropriate services. This is not always a simple process and there are many issues and opinions to consider.

Because there are particular roles and responsibilities for each board, it is not possible to develop a single town budget. The School Committee must focus on the School Department budget while the Board of Selectmen builds the municipal budget. Each group has its own expertise, while the Advisory Board helps to frame certain discussions and ask tough questions to make sure the budgets have been analyzed from many different angles.

I don't believe there is natural distrust and skepticism. In many cases the sheer need for increased funding threatens certain people who translate increased costs with fiscal mismanagement. I would like to thank all of the many people who have spent numerous hours helping to put our new budget together and for their willingness keep an open mind. As difficult as this exercise sometimes becomes, I believe all participants have the best interests of Cohasset in mind and are doing there best to balance delivery of services with ever increasing fiscal pressures.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Steve Fusco

I would approach the situation as I would any business problem – from a management perspective. Given the current split between town and school "camps," the first step is to separate fact from fiction and innuendo. I would convene a "cross camp" team made up of key individuals from the town and schools. We would brainstorm to uncover main conflicts and areas of common ground. An independent, volunteer facilitator would be very beneficial to this process. Once we are working together as a TEAM, we can use the same approach to creatively solve our mutual problems.

I believe one area in which this Cohasset town/school team could make an enormous impact would be on identifying similar service/function opportunities. The team could review the possibility of combining resources for technology, custodial services, general administration, purchasing, finance, etc. Other towns have been successful with this approach. In 2005, Franklin managed to overcome their internal boundaries, combining the personnel departments, internet services, phone systems, and other resources of its town and school departments for an estimated annual savings of $125,000! Imagine the potential savings if this kind of creative thinking was applied to every area of our town and school budgets.

Everyone tells me they support the proper funding of our schools, but they also rightly expect the town and the school to work together to seek out efficiencies and cost savings. I believe if we take a more managerial approach, we can begin a new chapter and improve the overall budgeting process. If not, we are destined to repeat history and incur unwanted overrides. As Albert Einstein once said, "Insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results." Cohasset has an exciting opportunity to improve town/school communication and the overall budgeting process. We can and must do better.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Lee Jenkins

Cohasset is composed of highly professional intelligent people. Unfortunately when it comes to the issues regarding children and education, it becomes a very emotional debate. But all of us are committed to education.

I believe we must abandon the "old thinking" that has brought us to this difficult place and begin to solve the challenges facing our community as one. There can be no "them" or "us" for only "we" can succeed.

Only through an open dialog, conducted with mutual respect for the views and concerns of our fellow citizens, can we arrive at fair and equitable solutions to the challenges facing our schools and our community.

Quality education, transparency, cooperation, accountability, and responsibility are cornerstones of my action plan — and concepts I have been advocating for 20 years. Recently, I was a proponent for, and successfully passed, a bylaw change requiring the town and the schools to post monthly budget information at the library so citizens can be better informed. In the past, I successfully lobbied to have the school committee meetings televised plus requested that test scores be returned to the Annual Town Report

As a member of the school committee, I will work to open channels of communication between town hall, the schools, and the community; bring the needed oversight to the school committee that the School Budget Investigation Committee found lacking; return accountability and credibility to the school-side budget process; identify opportunities to work with the town-side to effect economies in shared expenses; and, return a "culture of learning" to our schools.

It is up to our elected and appointed officials to lead the way. For my part, I will continue to advocate for transparency and cooperation, and promote a respect for the community, its concerns, and its welfare.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Barbara Buckley

First, we need a commitment to civility and civil discourse. We are all neighbors, after all. Secondly, we need common goals. I have plans for two such goals.

Our most urgent goal is to band together to lobby the state for restoration of local aid. If all Selectmen, School Committee members, Advisory Board members and PSO board members were to speak with one voice, our Representatives, Senators and Governor would have to listen and respond. We can work with officials and citizens from other towns to raise a powerful voice to demand the action that has been promised over and over. Restoring prior levels of state aid would significantly decrease our financial woes. Collaborating toward this goal that serves us all would provide a structure for repairing divisions in town.

We also need to support the Alternative Energy Committee to bring wind energy to Cohasset, just as Hull has done successfully. Hull's wind turbine generates $500,000 of electricity a year, well above the needs of the three Cohasset schools. Additionally, students can participate in research, development, installation, data collection and maintenance of turbines. Student work in the area of alternative energy is supported by 7-1/2 pages of objectives from the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks for math, science, technology and engineering. This common goal will result in a cleaner planet, authentic student learning, a profitable energy source for our town and a way to mend fences between committees.

Unity is accomplished by identifying and pursuing the common good. Increasing state aid and decreasing fixed costs are just two identified needs that can unite our community. To bring about collaboration between the Selectmen and the School Committee, I hereby volunteer to serve as a liaison to the Selectmen. I vow to be a respectful listener and speaker in my work for the town.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMAN

For the Selectman candidates: When it comes to the budget, town appears to be split into two distinct "camps" – the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communication and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the "two sides?"*

SELECTMAN\Roger Hill

We should never see the town's fiscal challenges as being caused by one "side" or another. Residents and taxpayers have the right to expect both top quality education, and the best in our municipal fire, police, and public works services. We also have the right to expect the most efficient use of our tax dollars.

Communication is the key as we work to avoid splitting our community into the "sides" of "schools vs. town." All of our budgetary issues need to be brought forward each year in a timely manner. Waiting until late in the annual budget cycle causes confusion and frustration. As an elected selectman, I will work to improve lines of communication among all elected boards, the town manager, and department heads. Each department head needs to understand that Cohasset residents want the best in all town services, and that other departments have equally legitimate needs for tax dollars.

Under our form of local government, the town manager is the central coordinator of budgets and departments, while respecting the legally quasi-independent status of the School Department under state law. The sooner issues are brought to the town manager, the more options can be explored and better solutions can be reached. I see my job as a selectman to support this process of moving priority items to the town manager, and to joint meetings of multiple boards, as quickly as possible.

All of our departments are today feeling tremendous financial pressure. As we make key decisions, some will walk away from the table unhappy. Our central challenge is to always make sure that everyone involved in the process sees the process itself as fair, open, and accessible to all. That is the key to avoiding the negative perception that different "sides" are contending for increasingly scarce resources.

SELECTMAN/Ted Carr

I do not believe there are two distinct "camps" — the town side versus the school side — and I do not believe that there should be. Anyone who believes differently is part of the problem and not part of the solution. Therefore, achieving budget objectives requires identifying our common goals and working together as a team to achieve our short-term and long-term objectives.

Our schools are an integral part of our town. This should be apparent from the fact that 40 percent of our town's annual budget is devoted to funding our school system, not including appropriations for school employee benefits and building maintenance. Combined, we devote more than a majority of our budget to supporting our school system. Cohasset residents fund our schools through property taxes and pay for services. In return, our school system provides our children with a high quality education and increases our property values. We are interdependent systems that require each other to thrive.

Our interdependency requires short- and long-term strategies to ensure our relationship continues to be mutually beneficial. I have attended a number of school budget discussions and am very impressed with the open and transparent process. I support this process and would ensure that there continues to be an open forum for discussion, debate, and resolution. Although one may not agree with the ultimate outcome, ensuring a fair and transparent process precludes criticism on how that outcome was obtained.

Any time I am involved with a team that may not agree, I do the following: 1) Identify common benefits; 2) Establish short- and long-term strategies to achieve our objectives; and 3) Operate through a fair and transparent process to achieve those objectives. Working together as a team promotes communication, builds trust, and turns skepticism into understanding.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For school committee candidates: The higher override figure includes $1.1 million for the schools but is $200,000 less than what the schools asked for, so something has to go. Would the school's share of the cost of a school resource officer be on your priority list to remain in the budget? Why or why not?

For selectman candidates: Two sitting selectmen are skeptical about the need for a school resource officer and whether that position could make a difference in terms of preventing more threats at the school or reducing police overtime. What's your opinion?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Growing the commercial tax base

TO THE EDITOR:

After attending several meetings regarding the FY 07' budget, I am writing as a concerned taxpayer, parent and commercial property owner.

At the present time, the Selectmen are discussing the possibility of adding a large override question for vote at town meeting. The override is necessary in part because of annual fixed cost increases in excess of the statutory 2-1/2 percent and continual decreases in state aid. The largest impact of the override will be on the residential taxpayers of the community. Although I am not happy about expending more dollars toward my taxes, I feel the override is very important to maintain the quality of schools and services that the people of Cohasset expect and deserve.

However, an override is only a partial short-term solution. The lack of commercial development in Cohasset is another reason why the town is having these financial "growing pains." For years, Cohasset has not welcomed commercial development with open arms. It has been difficult at times for developers to obtain the necessary approvals to move forward with a project. The lack of a commercial tax base puts a larger financial burden on the residential tax base.

At the present time, the Planning Board is committed to creating commercial development. At town meeting a few articles will aim to make commercial development more feasible. There is a proposed by-law to reduce the number of parking spaces required for commercial buildings from 10 spaces to 5 spaces per 1000 square feet of net floor area. There is also a Transit Oriented District (TOD) zoning change being proposed which promotes mixed-use development, both residential and light industry, near the new train station. These changes will open the door for a few projects that would not be possible under the current rules. By adding a larger commercial tax base, we can alleviate some of the tax burden on the residents in the future.

The people of Cohasset have some tough choices to make. As responsible citizens we need to vote for the override to ensure that town buildings and town residents receive reasonable funding. This is going to take some money out of our pockets. But for a long-term solution, we need to encourage the type of commercial development along the Route 3A corridor that will complement (and beautify) the Town and in the future require less tax dollars from the residential base.

Please support the override and the zoning changes at Town Meeting on April 1st and at the ballot box. Thank you.

Public attitudes deter effective energy policy

TO THE EDITOR:

Why does every Administration, every session of Congress, fail to produce an energy policy that courageously and effectively addresses our real energy issues? Basically, there are three issues: satisfying the massive energy demand of our highly developed society, drastically reducing dependence on foreign oil, and protecting the environment by drastically reducing the burning of fossil fuels.

Probably the failure is because Congress and the Administration are either too sensitive to, or share, the attitudes of the public. These attitudes unfortunately stem from ignorance of the quantitative realities and from prejudices instilled by irresponsible journalists who rely on the misinformation disseminated by activist organizations –including many environmentalist organizations. An elected representative or a President who dares try to lead, by telling it like it is, is minced by the media and denounced in legions of letters by the innocents who passionately believe that the promise of renewables and conservation can spare us from facing the need to more fully exploit energy from nuclear fission.

It should be obvious that serious and effective address to the three issues stated in the first paragraph does not permit less-than-determined exploitation of all three answers: conservation, renewables, and electric energy from nuclear fission. Our society increasingly depends on electricity, and will even more, as vehicle propulsion moves inexorably from petroleum to hybrids to full electric. This trend probably will be led by France, Japan, Korea, and Taiwan. Whatever electricity can be produced by solar and wind needs to be backed up to some extent by fossil, nuclear, or hydro – essentially all feasible hydro has long since been developed.

The "attitudes" to which our politicians respond, and the continuing national failure to act realistically, were illustrated recently at a local energy forum. As is typical of all such forums, it degenerated into recital of all the hoary clichés against nuclear energy, extravagant expectations for renewables, and condemnation of Washington for not throwing still more money and legislation to further those expectations and force more conservation.

Even nuclear fusion, a process which mimics the temperature of the sun and whose practical application requires engineering techniques so exotic they may not be developed for a very long time if ever, was touted as a substitute for further exploitation of nuclear fission, which did not require great extrapolations from well-established engineering practice and is already well proven. The attitude seems to be – use any excuse to avoid doing what has to be done.

What is really needed is a broader understanding of the quantitative realities of demand and supply, and abandonment of myths that conservation, or that some favored energy source can serve our needs to the exclusion of some other source. Truth is we need all we can get from renewables and nuclear to make a dent in the three issues stated in the above first paragraph. The conservation most needed is conservation of false hopes.

Bravo! to CHS drama students

TO THE EDITOR:

There is more outstanding news from the CMHS Arts! This year marks the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival's seventy fifth year with well over one hundred high schools around the state participating. We are pleased to congratulate the following Cohasset High School students who, directed by Mrs. Stephanie Noble, delivered a superlative performance and progressed to the Semi Final Round: (Crew) Charles Miller, Myles Collins-Wooley, Robby St. John, Molly Trisler, Erin Liddell, Vanessa Plante, (Cast) Molly Gallagher,Emily Savage, Austin Breslow, Mike Corry, and JoAnna Hamilton.

Cohasset's Semi Final performance will take place on Saturday, March 18th at 5:30pm at BMC Durfee High school in Fall River.

Bravo--for a job well done! You have made Cohasset very proud.

Full-day kindergarten is a success story

TO THE EDITOR:

At the Joint Meeting of our town boards last Monday (Feb. 27), a comment was made regarding the beginning foundations of statistics being taught in kindergarten. A lofty goal, most would assume. But, I was able to experience these beginnings just this year in Ms. Raymond's full-day kindergarten class at the Osgood School.

The lesson was grounded in a more typical kindergarten topic: gingerbread cookies. Our brave teacher distributed the cookies and asked the children to wait for her signal before taking their first bite. And, yes, they waited. On three, each child took his/her first bite and then placed the cookie in front of them and was again asked to wait. And, yes, they waited. They went on to discuss how many children had taken their first bite from the arm, the leg or the middle of the gingerbread man and then, of course, how many had taken the whole head off with their first bite. Ms. Raymond had each child go up to a chart and, using tally marks, indicate their first bite choice. And there it was — a tool to interpret the data collected from the activity. Beginning statistics.

This is the pilot year of our full-day kindergarten program in Cohasset and an overwhelming majority of our students are enrolled. Ninety percent. Within our benchmarking group of 20 communities, nine towns are offering full-day kindergarten at a variety of tuition levels. Forty-five percent of our established peer group. This is the future of early childhood education. In a statewide climate of ever increasing standards, this program is one answer to the call of quality education. Our school system deserves our support in answering this call by remaining true to the outstanding values of small class sizes, quality teaching tools and innovative programs through all levels of the Cohasset Public Schools.

And, yes, after they waited, Ms. Raymond's students were allowed to devour the remaining gingerbread bodies. It is kindergarten, after all.

Lincoln Bloomfield lecture Wednesday

The Cohasset Historical Society continues its monthly Wednesday night lecture series on March 15 at 7:30 p.m. with a presentation by Lincoln Bloomfield, author of "Accidental Encounters with History." The program is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Bloomfield's career in academia and diplomacy, has given him a first hand look at some of the major events that have shaped recent history. Having worked in the State Department as director of global issues for the National Security Council, the author saw how important decisions were made and the ultimate consequences. As a political science professor at MIT, Bloomfield directed the university's Arms Control Project and pioneered the development of political gaming. He is the author and co-author of 11 books on foreign affairs. A limited number of his new book will be available for purchase at the event.

Pancake breakfast is Sunday

A group of teens, under the tutelage of Cohasset Hockey Coach and St. Paul's Youth Minister, Ben Virga, will be holding a Pancake Breakfast Fundraiser this Sun., March 12, from 8:30 - 11:30a.m. at St. Anthony's Parish Center. Tickets are $5 per person and $20 per family.

The group will be traveling to Louisia, Louisiana in June. They will spend a week helping to rebuild a fishing village and running a day camp for the town's children. They need to raise funds to make the trip and to purchase supplies to assist in the rebuilding effort. Your support would be greatly appreciated. For questions or tickets, please call Susan Galligan at 781.383.0765. Should you wish to make a donation, please make your check payable to "St. Paul's Lifeteen" and mail it to 31 Border Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New And Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have State licensed hearing aid specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you are a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear hearing solution. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on this remarkable new hearing aid in 2 weeks. This state of the art instrument solves a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids and is virtually invisible when worn. This device will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings, due to their participation. However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them. The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period. A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates Will Be Selected By March 28th, 2006.

Road Race by the Sea

The Cohasset Rotary Club announces that the 30th Annual 10K Cohasset Road Race by the Sea will be held Sunday, April 2.

The proceeds go to the many local, regional, and international projects that Rotary supports. The start for the Road Race will be at 1 p.m. from the Cohasset Common. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Long sleeve T-shirts are guaranteed for the first 800 registrants to check in.

The Fran Coffey Memorial walk will be held at 10 a.m. on April 2. The 10K (6.2 mile) or a 4.5 mile will start at Sandy Beach in Cohasset. The proceeds from the walk will benefit "People in Need" at St. Patrick's in Roxbury, and Bishop Ruocco House for Girls in Lakeville, in memory of long time Cohasset Rotary race and walk supporter Franny Coffey.

Register to run or walk at http://roadracebythesea.com/ or check for more information at www.coolrunning.com. Applications will also be available in Cohasset at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shop, and the South Shore Community Center. Online registration is $15. Mail-in registration is $18. On site registration at $20 will be held at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, on April 1, 9 a.m. to noon and April 2 at the same time. Pre-registration is strongly recommended.

CHS boys wait 'til next year

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In each of the last two seasons, six of the South Shore League's seven boys basketball teams have qualified for state tournament play.

And each time, the one that didn't make it was Cohasset. So what needs to be done to change this trend?

Head coach Dorian Bryant says putting in some serious court time in the offseason would be a good place to start.

"My real season has begun now," Bryant said Wednesday. "From the spring time to September, that's when you really get better."

The recently completed season was a tough one for the Skippers, winning just two games.

"Of course you hope for eight more wins to get into the tournament," said Bryant. "I think this season was a funny one; there were some circumstances that were not in our favor. But the kids tried hard."

One of the highlights of the season for Cohasset was the play of Patrick McCarthy. The sophomore guard led the team in scoring and averaged more than 20 a game over the last five games of the year.

McCarthy was Cohasset's lone representative on the South Shore League All-Star team.

"Patrick stepped up immensely for us this season," Bryant said. "He had a stellar year, and he's only going to get better."

The Skippers are returning four of the five players that were starting at the end of the year, with guard and second-leading scorer Trevor Brady being the only graduating starter. The other senior was center Will Pinkus, whom Bryant said gave the team a spark toward the end of the year.

Among the leading returnees are junior Justin Alexander, sophomore Dave Snowdale and freshman John Sturino. A two-year varsity starter, Alexander had another solid season down low for Cohasset, leading the team in rebounding and providing its best scoring threat in the post.

Bryant says Snowdale, a swingman, showed a lot of improvement as the season wore on. Sturino, a mid-season JV call-up, held his own despite, as Bryant said, being "thrown to the wolves."

Other players set to come back next season are John McCarthy, Ryan Crough, Jake Cuneo and Kyle Pinkus.

Bryant says he also expects a few players from this year's JV team to contribute at the varsity level in 2006-07. Coach Dave Costa's team went 8-8 this year, and played some strong basketball toward the end of the season.

Lady Skippers' run ends as late rally against Marian falls one point short

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

ABINGTON - If the last three minutes of Monday night's game are any indication, the future of the Cohasset High girls basketball team is looking pretty darn good.

Playing with as many as four freshmen on the floor at once, the Skippers fought back from an eight-point deficit in those final minutes, and had three good shots in the last 20 seconds to win it.

Unfortunately, none of them went in, and Cohasset's dream season came to an end with a 43-42 loss to Marian in the Division 4 South semifinals.

After seeing his team's season end with a 15-8 record - giving them at least twice as many wins as most pundits would have predicted at the beginning of the year - head coach John Levangie said he could not have been more proud of his team's effort, particularly at the defensive end.

"That's the way they've done it all year, with defensive intensity," said the veteran coach. "I've been coaching a lot of years, and I think it's incredible the way they got at it. We have a great group of kids, and we almost pulled it off tonight."

The biggest reason Cohasset was in it at the end was the play of freshman center Sam Lehr. Matched up with a pair of Marian 6-footers in Nancy Littlefield and younger sister Marie, Lehr went toe-to-toe with them and finished the night with a team-high 15 points and 11 tough rebounds.

"She's not a regular freshman," Levangie said of Lehr. "She will be really good down the road."

Cohasset 7's make it 8 straight

Let the March Madness begin!

The Cohasset girls 7th grade travel team concluded its regular season in fine style last weekend, winning their games at Weymouth Saturday evening and at home against Norwell Sunday afternoon.

The victories not only extended their winning streak to eight games (tops in their division of the South Shore League), but gave them a fine 11-5 record, good for a second place finish in their division. The Sevens now will compete in the league playoffs this weekend.

The latest conquests, 34-21 over Weymouth and 31-20 over Norwell, were similar to many of the Blue & White's recent triumphs during their run. The Cohasset Sevens employed good shot selection, sharp passing to find the open girl underneath, a stingy defense, good free throw shooting, and strong rebounding that yielded few second chance shots for their opponents.

In Saturday night's triumph at Large School Division opponent Weymouth, Carly Martin's seven points in the first half propelled the Blue & White into a comfortable 17-8 advantage at the intermission, from where Cohasset cruised to the victory.

The Seven-Ups continually picked apart the Weymouth 2-3 zone defense with crisp passing, which usually resulted in lay-ups, many on back-door passes. The best example of the Cohasset offensive attack was a sequence in which the girls swung the ball from Lindsay Davis at the right point to Caroline Fein at the two spot to Logan Pratt on the left wing and then to Kate French, who was cutting underneath for a lay-up.

Martin led all scorers with nine points, followed by Carli Haggerty with eight, French with seven, Emma Musto with five, and Davis with five.

The following day proved to be more of the same as Cohasset once again worked the ball down low to cutters for many close-in baskets. Coupled with some outside shooting by Davis, Norwell was easy pickins' from the beginning, as the Seven-Ups walked off at the intermission with a commanding 16-7 lead. Haggerty was immense in the opening half, as she poured in 13 of her game-high 19 points in a nearly flawless performance.

When Haggerty and Emma Musto scored the first two buckets of the second half to increase the Blue & White margin to 20-7, the Seven-Ups put their game into cruise control. In addition to Haggerty's 19 points, Davis (who also made some superb, professional-style passes to teammates underneath) added six, Musto four, and Fein had a hoop.

three minute mark that started the Skippers' rally. On Marian's ensuing possession, senior point guard Chelsea Grossman (five points, five rebounds) stole the ball and drew a foul. Grossman made both free throws to make it a 43-38 game.

After a scoreless possession by both teams, some great defense from Grossman and junior forward Lacey Richardson (10 rebounds, four steals on the night) forced a Marian turnover with 1:48 left. Levangie called a timeout and set up a play for freshman guard Gabriella Flibotte.

The play worked to perfection, as Flibotte scored two of her 13 points on a nice baseline runner, and drew a foul in the process. She missed the free throw, but it was still a one-possession game.

With 1:20 to go, Grossman fouled out, joining forward Mia Lieb-Lappen on the bench with five fouls. Those two, along with fellow senior Katie James (who watched from the bench due to injury), had to like what they saw from the team's underclassmen. After Grossman fouled out, Marian's Bridget Robinson missed the front end of a one-and-one, and Cohasset junior Haley Haracz - who had entered the game for Lieb-Lappen - hustled for the rebound to force a jump ball.

The possession arrow favored the girls in white, and Flibotte buried a 16-footer with 54 seconds left to make it 43-42. The Cohasset defense continued its mastery, as Haracz again got on the floor to force a jump ball with 19.2 seconds left in the game, and just three on the shot clock for Marian.

Richardson stole the inbounds pass, and the Skippers stormed down the floor. Haracz found Flibotte for a good look from 17 feet out, which bounced off the rim and into the hands of a hustling Richardson. Her putback was no good, but the rebound went out of bounds off Marian, and Levangie called his last timeout with five seconds left to set up one final play.

Haracz took the ball out from under the basket and looked for Flibotte curling around the elbow, but Marian shut off that passing lane well. Haracz instead passed to Carly Salerno just outside the paint along the sideline, and despite a defender in her face, the freshman got off a good shot off the glass.

It bounced off the rim, and the rebound was swatted back toward halfcourt as the final buzzer sounded. The dream was over.

The Lady Skippers, who were supposed to be in a rebuilding year, had plenty of reason to be proud of what they accomplished.

"I can't say enough about these kids; they're just workers," said Levangie. "I'm sad that it's over, because I enjoyed being with them for three-and-a-half months."

Lady Skippers fans cheer on their team.

Cathedral of greatness

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

COHASSET	CATHEDRAL
38	29

BOSTON - The Cohasset girls basketball team received a 10th seed ranking in the tournament. Last Friday, they squared off in a Division 4 quarterfinal against the Panthers of Cathedral High, who were ranked second.

What made matters worse was that the Lady Skippers had to play on Cathedral's home court. Surprisingly, the home team crumbled in one of the biggest upsets in tournament play.

From the opening tip-off, the postseason buzz could be felt in the air. The normal Skipper defense went to work, keeping the Panthers' strike at a minimum. Even Cohasset's offense seemed to have all gears working.

By mid-game Cohasset had surprisingly run up a 21-13 lead against a team which trounced them in last year's first round encounter.

After half time Cohasset came onto the court and ran up a big lead, only to hit the wall after four minutes. For the middle part of the second half, the momentum clearly shifted in Cathedral's favor. Turnover after turnover sent a chill down the spines of the Cohasset fans.

With four minutes left in the game, however, a few Gabriella Flibotte drives forced Cathedral head coach John Jackson to use a timeout. Cohasset head coach John Levangie sent in junior Haley Haracz, who totally reversed the turnover situation. Between her sly defensive moves and some hot shooting from high scorer Lacey Richardson, the Skippers sealed the game's fate.

"Our passing gave us a lot of open shots," explained captain Chelsea Grossman. "Because the scoring is more spread out this year than last year, we have a lot more options in terms of shooting."

By the look on the faces of the Cathedral players, they knew the game had slipped away. In the last minute of play, Cathedral's Veronica Taveres sustained a nasty leg injury. Several minutes passed before the game resumed. The final seconds ticked away seamlessly as the Skippers celebrated their advancement to the semifinals.

"This is a really big deal," exclaimed Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford after the game. "The girls haven't made it this far since I've been here, and its something they should be very proud of."

Jackson obviously didn't share the excitement.

"Things just weren't working for us," he said. "Clarissa had to sit out today after an injury on Wednesday, and that could have made the difference. She creates a lot on the court."

Jones still admitted that the Skippers played an admirable game.

FROM COHASSET, PAGE 17

Seven-Up notes

During their eight-game winning streak, the Cohasset Sevens have been remarkably consistent. They have averaged just over 30 points per game (their lowest point total was 28) and have yielded an average of 20...

Cohasset finished just one game behind league leader Hull, but in actuality, they were just one bucket away from taking the league title. Cohasset dropped a 20-19 decision to Hull in January when a Hull girl hit two free throws with 15 seconds to go. Had Cohasset pulled out the win, they would have been regular season champs...

A big key in the Blue & White streak has been the girls' free throw shooting, which is approaching that of many high school teams. In the Weymouth win, for example, Cohasset hit 12-of-21 from the charity stripe (57 percent). By contrast, Weymouth only hit one free throw on the night. It is rare for most of the Seven-Ups to miss two free throws in a row...

The win over Weymouth gives the Sevens three triumphs in four attempts in the past two seasons over teams from the Large Town Division, making Cohasset one of the few small town teams to have a winning record against their big town counterparts. The 16-town South Shore League (which is the A league for girls teams; the Old Colony League, to which Cohasset formerly belonged, is the B league) is divided into two divisions, big and small, with Cohasset playing in a division with Hull, Norwell, Duxbury, Abington, Halifax, Raynham, and Hanson. The large division consists of Marshfield, Braintree, Weymouth, Scituate, Hingham, Hanover, Rockland, and Bridgewater...

Cohasset made it through the Weymouth game with only seven players. With one girl away and Emma Quigley still on the DL with a wrist injury, Rachel Fredey turned her foot within a few minutes of the start of the game. However, Rachel fortunately was back in action the next day against Norwell...

Cohasset still was awaiting word of its opponent and the location of its first playoff game as of the Mariner's press time.

The New Amsterdam Boys Choir is coming to Cohasset on March 26. Tickets are $10 per person at the door.

New Amsterdam Boys Choir to perform

New York City's New Amsterdam Boys Choir will pay a visit to the South Shore on Saturday and Sunday, March 25 and 26, performing at the Annual Union Service of five Unitarian Universalist congregations in the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common on Sunday, March 26 at 10 a.m., and that same day, at a 1 p.m. concert. Tickets are $10 per person at the door.

This year marks the choir's 20th year. Currently comprised of 21 young men from the neighborhood of East Harlem, the choir has performed in New York, New Jersey, several New England states, as far west as Nebraska and as far east as Germany. A trip to the Netherlands is also scheduled for this year

Open to boys age 8-18, the choir's standards are high and require discipline, respect, and academic success.

Under the leadership of James Backmon, the choir's repertoire includes folk melodies, spirituals, religious and secular pieces. The aim is two-fold: to inspire and educate. Says choir member Patrick Tisdale, "I sing because I want my voice to be heard."

Open to boys age 8-18, the choir's standards are high and require discipline, respect, and academic success. According to director James Backmon, "The boys have learned that their voices, individually and collectively, really matter; they have acquired self-confidence, poise, personal and group discipline in work and other skills for living in this complex world and at the same time brought pleasure to those who have heard them sing."

Support for the choir comes from corporate and foundation grants, congregations, and individuals. Four congregations on the South Shore: First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset; First Parish Hingham Old Ship Church; First Parish in Norwell; and First Parish in Scituate are making the choir's visit to Cohasset possible.

Boot camp fitness training gets under way

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, April 11, and Thursday, April 13, on Cohasset Common, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

The session concludes Thursday, June 15, and the second sessions begins Tuesday, June 20.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running, knees and sit ups. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vasular endurance and strength.

Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes.

Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best not as competition with others. To register call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Lady hoopsters deserve our applause

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

This latest rendition of Life at CHS contains a plethora of news that will undoubtedly inform and entertain you. First off, if you have not yet bought a Mr. Skipper ticket for this Friday, I suggest you do so soon because they are going fast and you will not be able to purchase them at the door. Anticipation is mounting up here as the competition inches closer.

Congratulations to the Lady Skippers basketball team who fought hard against Marion this past Monday only to come up one point short in the Semi-Finals. Their loss culminates the Winter sports season and with spring just around the corner, students have begun to organize captain's practices for the spring season. But enough about sports, there is an entire section in the paper devoted to that; here is the news for this week.

• The PSO will have had a meeting on Thursday morning in the main office.

• There will have been a Hate Crimes workshop in the Town Library on Thursday.

• There will have been a School Committee meeting on Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

• There will be a Wrestling Banquet at Atlantica from 10 a.m. to 1p.m. on Saturday.

• Ms. Trask's Junior English classes ventured on a field trip to see the play Othello at the Boston Center for the Arts this week.

• The PSO sponsored Read-A-Thon is on in full swing in the Middle School.

• The guidance office will be mailing out senior scholarships all this week.

• There will be a meeting on March 14th at 7 p.m. for eighth grade parents about their children's transition from the Middle School to the High School.

• The guidance staff will be meeting with all High School students next week to discuss class selections for next year.

• There will be a breakfast for freshman, sophomore, and junior parents on March 16th to discuss scheduling for next year.

• The Spring Sports meeting will be held on Monday, March 13th in the gymnasium at 6:45 p.m. You must attend with a user fee if you wish to participate in any spring sport.

• If you have not yet received a sports physical for the upcoming season, you will be able to get one in the nurse's office on Friday, March 10th. Contact Mrs. Collins in advance if you are interested.

• There will have been a National Honor Society meeting on Thursday in Mr. Newkirk's room.

• Mr. Welch's Economics class journeyed to the Federal Bank of Boston on Tuesday, March 7th.

• Congratulations to "Dentity"; the one act play by Christopher Durang, chosen to go on to the Semi-Finals of the Massachusetts Theater Guilds one act play competition at Fall River High School on Saturday, March 18th. A special shout out to Austen Breslow and Emily Savage who received acting awards for their performances.

• The Girls Lacrosse Team will have met with their new coaches, Chuck Jaffe and Beth Pierson, on Wednesday.

That wraps it up for this exciting week, which will end with the annual Mr. Skipper pageant on Friday night. Enjoy the show and I hope to see you all in the audience. Goodbye for now.

Hats off to Colin Quinn, Emily Bertovich and Christine Coner on their honorable mention awards at the Boston Globe Scholastic Awards ceremony of Feb. 5.

Watershed academy off to a good start

Students are still welcome to join this tuition-free program.

On Tuesday night, March 7, 19 students flocked to the Center for Student Coastal Research on Parker Avenue to begin a new training program called the Watershed Academy. The Academy is a 10-week program designed to equip students with the skills and knowledge needed to effectively carry out an assessment of non-point source pollution entering Cohasset Harbor via James Brook. The introductory session was delivered by town consultant and project engineer, Dan Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental. Also present for the introductory class was Sara Grady, staff ecologist for the North South River Watershed Association. The students received a briefing on the tasks to be accomplished in this project, and an introduction to watersheds, urbanization, storm water run-off, estuaries, marshland, and local site geography and topography.

Eager to get their hands dirty, and perhaps their feet wet, the enthusiastic group of Cohasset (and Scituate) High School students look forward to their first field session, analyzing catch basins, manholes, and system connectivity with DPW Supt. Carl Sestito. "We're dubbing our March 17 field training, 'Everything you never knew about catch basins!'" Readers should take comfort in knowing that there are a significant number of young people in Cohasset learning, through experience, what environmental stewardship is all about.

Students present at the first training included Aisling Guinee, August Oddleifson, Robin Earle, Robby St. John, Evan Deutsch, John McCarthy, May McCarthy, Mike Kusek, Ali Boehmke, Shalea Daly, Ryan Daly, Brent Daly, Derek St. Peter, Zach Troupe, Katie Pritchard, Elle Baumgarten, Wes Medwid, Emily Nash, and Nathan Needle. Unable to attend, but intending to participate in future trainings are Caren Garber, Cameron Cope, Josh Dupre, and Ryan McClellan.

Students are still welcome to join this tuition-free program to learn how to make a difference on planet earth by thinking globally, but acting locally.

Box top clipping and cash rewards

— DEER HILL NOTES —

• Deer Hill school librarian Barb Mullin is holding a contest to earn cash for the schools through the "Box Top$ for Education" program. Students and community members are urged to simply clip the small, rectangular-shaped "Box Top$ for Education" logo from participating products found at local super markets. Clip and send the coupons to Deer Hill school, 208 Sohier St., and the school receives cash rewards. Many programs and materials have been funded by clipping the coupon from products you already buy. Mullin urges all community members and students to participate to help the schools.

• Deer Hill nursing coordinator Karen Murphy reminded parents that strep throat cases usually rise during the month of March and students should be extra vigilant about hand washing. Good hygiene, plenty of rest and a healthy diet play important roles in preventing this highly contagious disease, according to Murphy.

Health Education teacher Jane Gregory is flanked by Drama Club participants who meet weekly to learn about theater through games, improvisation and script reading. The next eight-week session begins on Monday, March 13, from 2:15 - 3:15 p.m.

• The Deer Hill School is offering a wide array of after-school programs designed to enrich and enlighten students. Programs include the Game Club, organized by Librarian Barb Mullin, who challenges students to put on their thinking caps over a board of chess, Soduko, Blokus and other thought-provoking games; Drama with Health Education specialist Jane Gregory, who teaches aspiring actors and actresses the fine art of theater, "Renzulli" with Technology Instructor Cassandra O'Brien, who helps students target their interests and aptitudes using the nationally-acclaimed "Renzulli" computer research method, which targets and summarizes your child's talents, interests and preferred learning styles; "Great Books" with trained parent volunteers who help students delve into literature and develop a life-long love of reading; and Invention Convention, with teacher Mr. Kayne Beaudry, who uses the steps of the scientific method to encourage students to create and share ideas and turn them into inventions.

For more information or to sign up, contact the Deer Hill school at 383-6115.

Zachary Herman plugs his ears as Tribal Rhythms proved too cacophonous for his musical taste.

Paige Roche, a first grader at the Osgood School, raises her hands and screams out loud with the rest of her class Wednesday, during the school's Tribal Rhythms program.

Getting loud and learning

Wyoma of Tribal Rhythms leads students at the Osgood School in a collective clapping of hands.

Osgood first graders Anthony Quinn, left, and Alex Fusco, right, scream and hit each other while making "as much noise as possible" during last Wednesday's musical performance at their school.

Rembrandt's Amsterdam

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

AMSTERDAM -- Like Einstein, Rembrandt is a one-name synonym for genius. But unlike our love affair with the affable, unkempt professor, most Americans don't quite understand just why Rembrandt van Rijn is considered the world's greatest artist.

Maybe the anxiety of Vincent van Gogh, the sexual voracity of Pablo Picasso or the antics of Salvador Dali seem more in tune with modern attitudes about artistic genius than Rembrandt's dark portraits of dour folks in vaguely Pilgrim attire.

Or maybe we just don't know the real Rembrandt. I had the chance to "meet" the master on his home turf during an advance peek at this year's mammoth Rembrandt 400th anniversary celebration.

This year, the Netherlands goes all van Rijn, all the time, to celebrate the July 15, 1606, birthday of the Dutch master. Major exhibits, lectures, parties and even "Rembrandt: the Musical" will explore every aspect of his work and life.

Just as restorations of Rembrandt's paintings have turned what appeared to be dark landscapes into interplays of light and shadow, my Amsterdam visit turned a spotlight on this complicated painter, who, I discovered, trumped some modern masters in antics, anxiety and sex as well as artistic technique and style.

To the Dutch, Rembrandt is less of a revered master and more of a beloved citizen with inner imp. This is the Rembrandt for whom you'd buy a Heineken.

Rembrandt was born in 1606 to a prosperous miller family in the Dutch town of Leiden. A short train or bus ride from Amsterdam, Leiden retains its quaintness today. It's worth a side visit for its windmills, 12 museums -- including Museum De Lakenhal, which has a significant Rembrandt collection -- and numerous "Rembrandt was here" sites, such as his former school.

Rembrandt moved from Leiden to Amsterdam in 1635. To track his life here, pick up "Discover: Amsterdam in Rembrandt's Time," a city walk brochure from the Amsterdam Tourism & Convention Board. It's an excellent introduction to the artist as well as Amsterdam itself.

No. 1 on the walking tour (although you can start anywhere) is the Rembrandthuis (Rembrandt House Museum), set where the artist lived and painted from 1639 until 1658.

These were Rembrandt's most productive years, when he turned out hundreds of prints, taught numerous students and completed masterpieces such as "The Nightwatch." But after the death of his beloved wife, Saskia, in 1642, he started a downward spiral.

Rembrandt's mug is everywhere in Amsterdam - this one is at the side of Westerkerk (West Church)

He had an affair with his son's nanny that ended unhappily, and later took another mistress with whom he had a daughter. His output suffered and eventually Rembrandt went bankrupt. He was forced to sell his house and most of his assets and move to a smaller dwelling. He died penniless in 1669, a few months after painting his last self-portrait.

To the Dutch, Rembrandt is less of a revered master and more of a beloved citizen with inner imp. This is the Rembrandt for whom you'd buy a Heineken.

Ironically, "We're very happy that he did go bankrupt," said Femke Haijtema, a Rembrandthuis spokesman. As part of the legal liquidation, an extremely detailed inventory was made of Rembrandt's house and its contents.

This has helped museum staff to reproduce the house almost as it looked in Rembrandt's day, from the pans in the kitchen to the armor and knickknacks in the artist's studio. (Rembrandt was an obsessive collector.) His studio, duplicated from the inventory and his own drawings, has been re-created, down to the messy pots of paint artists of the time used.

From the Rembrandthuis, you can walk along a canal past the Trippenhuis, the 17th century home of a fabulously wealthy family, through the "New Marketplace," to the Old Church (Oude Kerk), where Saskia is buried. From here you walk through the Red Light district (be prepared) to Dam Square, location of the Royal Palace and New Church (Nieuwe Kerk), where the marriage of Rembrandt and Saskia took place.

Take a break at De Drie Fleschjes (Three Little Bottles), a nearby pub where bartenders insist Rembrandt once hung out -- even if it's folklore, you can still admire the rows of casks and hoist a glass of the traditional Dutch oude jenever (juniper-flavored liquor).

Thus braced, continue to the Westerkerk (West Church), where Rembrandt is buried in an unmarked grave.

These sites are but appetizers for the main course: a visit to one of the many museums hosting Rembrandt shows. Neither reproductions in art books nor on cigar boxes prepare you for actually standing before a Rembrandt masterpiece.

"Where other artists sketched the light, Rembrandt caught the light," said Gerben Baaji, business development director for Rembrandt400, the group coordinating the anniversary celebrations.

The famous Rijksmuseum owns many of Rembrandt's best-known works, all of which will be on display at some point through the year. You can be hypnotized by the details of the delicately rendered lace in the 1639 portrait of Maria Trip and the postures of the men in "The Syndics of the Clothmaker's Guild." The roughly rendered tenderness of "The Jewish Bride" recalls the words of Van Gogh, who said he would give 10 years of his life for a chance to sit 10 days before this painting with only a crust of bread.

Seeing "The Nightwatch" in the flesh reveals a richness no reproduction can match. The juxtaposition of brave men-in-arms with a young girl and anxious dog is mesmerizing.

Poignantly, from behind "The Nightwatch" crowd, the tip of a hat and head peeks out: the artist himself. The Hitchcock-like gesture reaches across the centuries, a Rembrandt-was-here moment of witty genius.

Coming next week: Going green in Ireland.

IT'S HAPPENING

Shapleigh exhibit is coming to town

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an exhibit of the paintings of Frank Henry Shapleigh (1842-1906) of Boston. He did many paintings of Cohasset as his wife was the former Mary Pratt Studley of Cohasset.

Shapleigh enjoyed long walks along the town's shores, cane in hand, in company with his Cohasset nephew Kenneth Beal, sometimes going as far as Scituate. From these walks came a series of oils showing Cohasset's coastline and the sea, as well as family homes in and around the village.

The first of Shapleigh's Cohasset oils known to be exhibited, was one titled "At Sandy Cove." Shown at the Boston Art Club in 1874. In 1965 the Society held another exhibition at the Maritime Museum in the village, and several people from Cohasset and Hingham loaned their Shapleighs for that exhibit.

The opening reception for the exhibit will be held on Sunday, March 12, from 2 to 4 p.m. The Society paintings will be on display, and through the graciousness of the Vose Galleries of Boston, who have agreed to loan four of their Shapleigh's, which will be exhibited, and may be purchased. If anyone has a Shapleigh that they would like to loan for this exhibit, call at 781-383-1434 or e-mail at www.cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

The following is a list of the Shapleighs that will be exhibited. They were painted between 1876 through 1889.

- View of Harbor Entrance, Cohasset
- Christopher James Farmhouse
- John Willcutt House, Elm Street
- Laban Worrick House, 93 South Main Street
- Nathaniel Treat's Boatyard, Sandy Cove

Vose Galleries

- Whitehead, Cohasset
- Stormy Day At Cohasset
- Pleasant Beach
- Mt. Washington and Ellis River at Jackson, New Hampshire (Shapleigh died here in 1906).

Remember to circle your calendar, March 12, and join for an enjoyable afternoon of local art. The exhibit will continue through April 12.

Irish Pub at South Shore Art Center

The South Shore Art Center's Celtic Odyssey: Fiona and John Owen exhibit will be the backdrop for a St. Patrick's Day celebration on Saturday evening, March 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the SSAC, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

The event includes an Irish pub where celebrants will be offering "sláinte (say slawncha) or cheers, and enjoying food, music, dancing and a silent auction featuring Irish artwork, jewelry, golf outings, trips, knits and more. Music will be provided by "The Exiles," an Irish trio that performs traditional and lively Celtic music.

Tickets are $50, $40 for SSAC members. Proceeds benefit the art center's exhibition and education programs, with educational outreach to area schools a focus. For reservations visit www.ssac.org or call 781-383-2787.

OBITUARIES

Rita Logan

Worked many years for Quincy Y.M.C.A.

Rita (Donlan) Logan, 84, a Cohasset resident for 53 years, died Feb. 2, 2006, at the Norwell Knoll Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, after a long illness.

Born in Dorchester, she graduated from Girls' High School in Boston. Trained in therapeutic massage, she worked for many years at the Quincy Y.M.C.A. Mrs. Logan spent the final period of her working career with New England Telephone Company, as a coordinator for field engineers.

Upon her retirement in 1984, she traveled and divided her years between residences in Cohasset and Sarasota, Fla. Mrs. Logan enjoyed poetry, Dixieland jazz, and places by the sea.

Wife of the late William T. Logan for 57 years, she leaves three children, Ellen Logan, and her husband Thomas P. Ostrander of Hingham, Gregory F. Logan of Middleboro, and Carolyn M. Logan of Cohasset; a granddaughter, Jennifer Miranda of Middleboro; and three great-grandchildren, Cain, Kai, and Nicholas Miranda.

A memorial service was held Tuesday at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., Hingham.

Interment is in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Donations in her name may be made to the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Box 271, 521 N. Broadway, Nyack, NY 10960. Arrangements by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Homes, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

Philip G. Facey

Manufacturing engineering director at Wang Laboratories; U.S. Army veteran

Philip G. Facey Jr., died Feb. 28, 2006.

He served in the U.S. Army Air Transport Command.

Mr. Facey was the director of manufacturing engineering at Wang Laboratories.

He was a longtime member of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

He leaves his loving wife, Patricia (Grant) Facey; a son, Mark D. Facey, and his wife Leila of No. Kingstown, R.I.; his grandchildren, Jesse Facey, and Philip Facey, both of No. Kingstown, R.I.; his brother-in-law, Douglas E. Grant, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; a nephew, Kenneth B. Pattrell, of Northampton; and many cousins.

A celebration of his life will be held Sunday, March 19, at 2 p.m. in the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset.

Donations in his memory may be made to Beacon Hospice, 529 Main St., Boston, MA 02129, or to First Parish Church, 23 Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Carbon monoxide alarms required

Chief Roger Lincoln says as of March 31, carbon monoxide alarms will be required in all residences with potential sources of carbon monoxide. The vast majority of homes will not be required to install hard-wired systems although, where hard-wired systems are required by regulation, the deadline is Jan. 1, 2007. The Board of Fire Prevention Regulations recently passed emergency regulations to implement the law known as "Nicole's Law."

Chief Lincoln said the fire department is ready to help. Call 781-383-0616 for more information.

Consumer Information — The Dept. of Fire Services is distributing "A Consumer's Guide to Requirements for Residential Carbon Monoxide Alarms." This guide and information about the regulations can be obtained from local fire departments and on the DFS web site: www.mass.gov/dfs/osfm/pubed/firesafety-topics/carbon_monoxide_safety.htm.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission also has information in both English and Spanish on common sources of carbon monoxide in the home and recognizing the www.cpsc.gov/CPSCPUB/PUBS/464.pdf.

General Requirements — For most residential buildings with fossil fuel burning equipment or enclosed parking areas, the new regulations require carbon monoxide alarms on every level of the home or dwelling unit including habitable portions of basements and attics. On levels with sleeping areas, the alarms must be placed within 10 feet of the bedroom doors. The regulations allow the following options for CO alarms:

- Battery operated with battery monitoring
- Plug-ins with battery back-up
- Hard-wired with battery backup
- Low voltage system
- Wireless
- Qualified combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarm.

Acceptable Combination Alarms — Acceptable combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarms must have simulated voice and tone alarms that clearly distinguish between the two types of emergencies. The State Building Code mandates that only photo-electric smoke alarms are permitted within twenty feet of a bathroom or kitchen. Consumers are urged to check with the local fire department on whether a specific alarm meets the code requirements.

Alternative Compliance Option — Owners of larger buildings with centralized or minimal sources of carbon monoxide may wish to consider the alternative compliance option contained in the regulation.

Enforcement — Fire departments are currently required to inspect smoke alarms when homes are being sold and transferred. Starting March 31, 2006 or Jan. 1, 2007 where hard-wired alarms are required, fire departments will now inspect all residences upon sale and transfer for carbon monoxide alarms.

Pomfret, VT; Camilla Roberts of Athens, VT; Patricia M. Lewis of Rye, NH; and Mabel E. Niebling of Boscawen, NH and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Michael M. White of Boston in the County of Suffolk representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows. The land conveyed by the deed of Charles C. Cabot and Charles B. Barnes, Jr., Trustees of the will of Thomas F. Richardson, to Ellen B. Cabot, Richardson White and James C. White, dated May 2, 1965 and recorded in the Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Book 4267, Page 573, described as follows:
Thirty four acres and fifteen rods of pasture land in Cohasset known as Cushing pasture, formerly Spencer Binney's.
The said land lies westerly of Forest Avenue, is adjacent to land of the Cohasset Golf Club and is shown as Cohasset Assessor's Map 7, Plot 2, containing 32.40 acres more or less.
There is appurtenant to the said land an easement for access and egress to and from Forest Avenue burdening the following described land:
The land conveyed by the deed of Jerusalem Road Corporation to Ellen P. Cabot and Richardson White, dated April 7, 1981, recorded in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 5857, Page 740, described as follows:
A certain parcel of land situated in Cohasset, Massachusetts being shown as Parcel "A" on a plan entitled "Plan of Land on Forest Avenue Cohasset, Mass." Dated October 24, 1980 and December 10, 1980 by Neil J. Murphy, Engineer, recorded as No. 252-1981 Pl. Bk. 287 with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, containing 73,121 square feet according to said plan.
There is included in said Parcel "A" as shown on said plan a lot of registered land said lot being shown as Lot 8 on a plan drawn by Neil J. Murphy, Engineer, dated January 8, 1981, as modified and approved by said Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 29067B.
For title to the registered portion of said Parcel "A" see Transfer Certificate of Title No. 112568, Book 563, Page 168 in the Norfolk Registry District of the Land Court.

South Shore is setting for Quincy native's new play

'Seven Rabbits on a Pole' on stage at Stoneham Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The vegetable farms that dotted the South Shore in the 1930s are the setting for "Seven Rabbits on a Pole," the second in Quincy native John C. Picardi's ten-play series about the 20th-century Italian-American experience in Massachusetts now at the Stoneham Theatre.

"I set this play in 1936 on a farm in a non-specific South Shore town. It's part of my chronicle of Italian-American life but people of all ethnic backgrounds will be able to relate to the story. It speaks to the universal themes of the immigrant experience," Picardi explained recently by telephone.

In the drama, Picardi uses love, lust, opera and art to look at what happens when a stranger visits and the long-held secrets of one South Shore farming family — including a father, two sons, and a mentally retarded daughter - are revealed. The involvement of a meddlesome doctor's wife and a stranger selling rabbits sets off a series of emotionally chaotic events that expose secrets and alter lives.

"The father is keeping a secret that leads him to make a lot of mistakes. The story is really about how the past always comes back to haunt you when you keep secrets because the truth always prevails. During the 1930s, there was a lot made of the theory of the survival of the fittest and the whole issue of racial purity as seen through the rise of the Aryan race. Some of the father's past choices were made because of his struggle as an immigrant to fit in with what he considered to be American. He just wanted to be a WASP like his neighbors instead of who he was. This piece is about truth, loyalty, and honor. When you boil it down, however, it is about racism and people doing anything they can to fit in, " Picardi points out. "Now we embrace our culture, but in those days people didn't."

John C. Picardi

Picardi, 42, who grew up in an Italian family in south Quincy, says his plays give him an opportunity to dispel what he believes are too commonly held misconceptions about Italian-Americans.] "I feel very influenced by my own family history. My uncles worked on a farm picking peas when they were boys. My plays, however, are not based on my own experiences. My main goal is to show that not all Italian families are gangsters like you see too often in the movies and on television. My characters are Italians who have come to America, like any other ethnic group, and just tried to make their way here."

Picardi, a 1981 graduate of Quincy High School who earned a BA in English and Creative Writing from UMass Boston and an MFA in Creative Writing from Carnegie Mellon University, has been making his way as a New York-based writer for over a decade. Upon graduation from Carnegie Mellon in 1996, Picardi was awarded the prestigious Mary Martin Fisher Award for outstanding achievement in playwriting. In the summer of 1997, the Red Barn Theater in Pittsburgh produced his first play, "The Sweepers." In 1998, Picardi was a finalist for the Julliard School of Drama Writing Fellowship and a finalist at Coe College's Playwriting Festival and Symposia. In 2002, "The Sweepers" had its off-Broadway premiere. Its New York success earned the playwright the 2002 Urban Stages Emerging Playwright Award. In the spring of 2004, "The Sweepers" broke box office records during its engagement at the Stoneham Theatre.

Picardi is now Playwright in Residence at Urban Stages. He has also been awarded a grant from the National Italian American Foundation in Washington, D.C., for his cycle play series. The as-yet-untitled third play in the series is set to be produced off-Broadway by Urban Stages this fall. Picard has also recently completed his first novel, "The Reluctant Mr. Pepper," which is currently being shopped around to publishers.

"I did a little writing in high school," he recalls. "I was too busy entertaining, however, to really get anything going back then. I've always been a huge reader, though, and I can still remember reading John Steinbeck's 'The Grapes of Wrath' in seventh grade. I've also always loved reading about history.

Picardi's dramatic influences read like a history of American theater "Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller, Eugene O'Neill and William Inge are the playwrights who influenced me most. Like theirs, my plays are character-driven. Each character gets his or her own story arc."

("Seven Rabbits on a Pole," by John C. Picardi, will be presented by Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main Street, Stoneham, through March 19. For tickets and information, call 781-279-2200 or visit www.stonehamtheatre.org.)

'Tsotsi'-turvy world of violence

Tsotsi (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Tsotsi (Presley Chweneyagae, far right) and his thug pals get ready to rob subway riders in South Africa.

At a time when gang violence is escalating again in Boston, "Tsotsi" is insanely relevant. But will anyone know?

Based on a great short novel by South African playwright Athol Fugard, "Tsotsi" is a mean-streets parable of sin, repentance, redemption and transcendence. It's a nondenominational religious experience featuring a powerhouse performance by young Presley Chweneyagae in the title role.

Written in 1960-61 and published for the first time in 1980, the novel "Tsotsi" (pronounced with a hard "s") was originally set in a township known as Sophiatown. The film, which won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film, is in several languages, notably Zulu, Afrikaan, Sesotha, English and Tsotsi-Taal, which is South African street slang, and the action has been updated to present-day Soweto.

As in the novel, Tsotsi (the word is not a name, but a noun meaning gangster or thug) is a menacing, virtually nonverbal leader of a small "Clockwork Orange"-like criminal band.

Aap (Kenneth Nkosi) is a beer-guzzling bruiser whose affability should in no way be mistaken for benevolence. Boston (Mothusi Magano) is the only gang member with any education, something he says has given him a sense of "decency." Butcher (Zenzo Ngqobe) is what his name says, the one wielding the weapon when the predatory gang picks a victim out at the train station, surrounds him, robs him and fatally stabs him.

After Tsotsi beats Boston almost to death over the decency issue, he flees into a rainy night to a nearby suburb where he then hijacks a car owned by a middle-class African couple.

Unbeknownst to him, an infant in a car seat is in the back. This is where "Tsotsi" could have turned into a sappy fable of the civilizing effect of parenthood. Instead, a miracle occurs.

Tsotsi sees himself in the helpless child and begins to recall his repressed past — his mother's death from AIDS, the killing of his dog, his life on the streets and in sleeping quarters improvised in a pile of stacked-up drain pipes.

His dawning self-awareness is also a moral awakening as he takes an interest in the child's welfare. At the same, though, Tsotsi endangers the child (even the kid gives a great performance) and tries to make him his own, forcing a Madonna-like but terrified young mother (Terry Pheto) to breastfeed the baby. All the while, two police officers search for the child and a manhunt slowly zeros in on Tsotsi.

In another compelling story line, Tsotsi stalks a beggar (scene-stealing actor and director Jerry Mofokeng) who has lost the use of his legs, but Tsotsi finds himself paralyzed, too.

Viewers will be reminded of both Vittorio De Sica's neo-realist classics of post-World War II Italy and of Luis Bunuel's landmark 1950 expose of Mexico City slums "Los Olvidados."

From its opening shot of rolling dice, "Tsotsi" is neo-New Testament tale of the role of divine intervention in our lives, and a film suggesting God sees the world in Super-35mm. Its suspenseful, unpredictable climax, which is a departure from the novel, will leave you emotionally drained and uplifted.

South African "Kwaito" music, much of it provided by superstar Zola, who also plays the smilingly lethal character Fela in the film, is a driving force in "Tsotsi." The more transcendent vocals you hear are from South African musician Vusi Mahlasela, also known in his country as "the Voice."

Director Hood is a South African law school graduate who won a writing award in the film program at the University of California. His previous films have garnered attention on the festival circuit. With "Tsotsi," Hood has arrived.

But the real find may be Tsotsi himself. With roots in the protagonists of Emile Zola, Charles Dickens, Albert Camus and Richard Wright, Fugard's "little gangster" can now take his place in the pantheon of unforgettable screen criminals.

Rated R. "Tsotsi" contains partial nudity and violence.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

CUPPING YOUR EAR

The simplest form of hearing instrument is a cupped hand behind the ear, which makes sounds 5 to 10 decibels (dB) louder. This hearing technique led to the first actual hearing device, the ear trumpet, which utilized the same strategy for gathering sound and funneling it to the ear. Depending on their size and shape, ear trumpets could amplify by about 10-20 dB, with most of this in the range of 500-1000 Hertz (Hz), only a fraction of the 300-3000 Hz range of human speech. Large trumpets could amplify sound in this range by up to 40 dB, but they were ungainly. By comparison, with their size and efficiency, today's hearing instruments can be considered to be technical marvels.

If you've tried just about everything to deal with your hearing loss — cupping you ear, lip reading, shouting, turning up the volume, avoiding conversation, and withdrawing from social situations — now try a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we have extensive training and skills that enable us to understand and diagnose your loss, state-of-the-art testing facilities, and the very latest in hearing instruments to correct your impairment. Take the first painless step to better hearing. Call us today at 781-337-1144 to schedule a free hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth.

P.S. If you have not tried being fitted for a hearing device within the past five years, you may be very surprised by the technological advances that have been made since then.

Resource officer gets good grades

By Samantha Brown

Bridging the gap between the police department and the town's youth is a goal shared by both the school and police departments. To that end, the two have proposed sharing the cost of the salary for an additional officer who would serve as a school resource officer.

While the position is not included in the Town Manager's no-override budget, which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, it was one of Griffin's top priorities on his supplemental budget list, not only for safety and building relationships with the town's youth, but due to its potential to save on police overtime.

Since May 2005, there have been five incidents where threatening notes have been found at the middle-high school. One was found during school hours. For that reason alone, school administrators would like to see an officer on duty at the school who can build up a rapport with students and help resolve issues

Special election for override vote

Selectmen to set the date Tuesday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen will set the date for a special election at its Tuesday, March 21 meeting, which will have many residents marking their calendars. The special election is being held for one reason only — to give voters the opportunity to raise their taxes by overriding Prop. 2-1/2.

Last week, selectmen voted unanimously to place two override questions on the special election ballot — a $725,000 question and a $1.495 million question. Selectmen then voted on whether as a board, it would recommend each of the questions to Town Meeting. It voted unanimously to recommend the lower figure, and three out of five members voted in favor of recommencing the higher number, with Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Gary Vanderweil opposed.

After the Board of Selectmen cast its vote, the Advisory Committee voted its Town

Wants to wait until next year

Voters at the April 8 Town Election will see four candidates' names on the ballot for the School Committee but there will be only three people running.

Barbara Buckley called the Mariner on Monday to announce she has withdrawn from the race. However, the ballot has been printed with her name on it because the deadline to withdraw was March 6. At the time the Mariner went to press, Buckley had not formally informed the Town Clerk's office of her withdrawal.

The North Main Street resident said she is pulling out for a "variety of reasons" which all come under the umbrella of personal reasons. "I've decided with my family that right this second is not the right time for me," she said.

The news comes as a surprise. Not only did Buckley return her nomination papers, she submitted a formal announcement of her candidacy that was printed two weeks ago in the Mariner. She has participated in the Question of the Week and just last Thursday inquired about reserving pages to advertise her campaign in the Mariner.

Buckley said she is only postponing her campaign for one year. As is the case this spring, there will be two open School Committee seats in

Gourmet club celebrates 40 years of culinary camaraderie

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Nothing brings friends together like good food and good conversation, and the women who make up the Cohasset Gourmet Food Club can attest to that.

For the past 40 years, members of the gourmet club have met monthly to exchange much more than just recipes. The friendships that have been built have seen the women through everything from raising babies to high school and college graduations, to weddings and funerals. While some of the faces in the club have changed, the premise has always stayed the same — feeding the soul through friendship and food.

On Wednesday Feb. 22, members past and present met for lunch at Raffael's in Hull, located in the Clarion Hotel, to mark — to the day — the 40th anniversary of the club's first meeting. Not only did the ladies enjoy a delicious lunch, they were presented with a silver fork, knife, and spoon charm as well as a red carnation (red is the color for 40th anniversaries) by Pat Mullaney, one of the club's original members and the woman whom the others call the "glue that holds the club together."

"We don't know what everyone's going to bring, but 90 percent of the time, it works out beautifully."
— Pat Mullaney, Cohasset Gourmet Food Club

The women were introduced to each other through the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club in 1966. Today, the club has eight full members including Mullaney, Helen Wilson, Judy Sestito, Eileen Buckley, Grace Wilkin, Angie Kelley, Edwina Migliaccio, Doris Golden, and two alternate members, Marilyn LeBlanc and Carol Townsend. Mullaney, Wilkin, Golden, and Townsend were original members, and Kelley has been a member since 1967.

When the group started, the CHS senior Zach Etkind dons a rain coat after being crowed "Mr. Skipper" at the annual male pageant last week that raises money to help offset the cost of senior activities, such as the prom.

Name: Zach Etkind.

Occupation: Mr. Skipper 2006 and CHS senior.

Best day of your life: The day I won Mr. Skipper.

Best vacation: Belize and Guatemala.

Favorite season: Late spring.

Favorite holiday: Chrismakah and Hannumas.

Favorite junk food or meal: Crab Rangoon and Chalupas.

Best book: "One Flew over the Cuckoos Nest," by Ken Kesey.

Best movie: "The Big Lebowski."

Best TV show: "South Park."

Pet peeve: Extremely narrow-minded people.

Dumbest thing you've ever done: Accidentally spraying a can of spray paint in my eyes when I was six.

Goal: To find an apprentice I can train to be the next Mr. Skipper.

Person you'd most like to meet: Mrs. Skipper.

Biggest worry: That I won't find anyone to do my laundry in college.

Best part of Cohasset: Little Harbor, before I knew it was so polluted.

Most memorable moment: Walking through an extremely primitive Mayan village in Guatemala.

Middle school seeks lunchroom volunteers

Middle school Assistant Principal Beth Sternala is looking for parents or community members to assist in the cafeteria from 11:30 a.m. to noon either on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, or Thursdays. Anyone interested in volunteering may contact middle-high school PSO president Lucia Flibotte at (781) 383-2792.

Volunteers sought for Earth Day cleanup

Cohasset residents are looking to have a successful First Annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, in honor of Earth Day, and are looking for volunteers to help. On Saturday, April 8 (rain date April 29) residents will meet in front of Town Hall at 2:30 p.m., and will then celebrate Earth Day and the beauty of Cohasset by cleaning selected streets and sites — Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ball Field, Government Island, etc. The town will provide garbage bags, but volunteers are asked to bring their own thick work gloves. The effort is supported by the Cohasset Board of Health, the Friends of Black Rock Beach, and the Cohasset Girl Scouts. For more information, please call Alison Callahan at (781) 383-1081 or Bill Burnett at (781) 383-3499.

Requiring door-to-door solicitors to signup

Town Meeting to have final say

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Anything that makes residents feel safer is a good thing."
— Chief James Hussey

When daylight saving time returns in April — the police log could again be filled with complaints from residents about solicitors who come knocking on their doors at dinnertime and later.

However, Town Meeting voters will have the chance to potentially curb some of this activity through a proposed bylaw.

According to Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, the bylaw would allow some restrictions on commercial solicitation and on those who are paid to solicit for non-profits.

Solicitors would not be prohibited from going door-to-door but would be required to register with the Cohasset Police Department where they would apply for a $25 license. They would be required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors would have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw would be town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Dormitzer said the proposed bylaw is modeled after one in Duxbury. He said it is difficult to restrict door-to-door solicitation, which is protected by the First Amendment. "But we would at least know who is in town doing the soliciting," he said.

He described the bylaw as "a baby step" but not a panacea for stopping undesirable solicitation in town. He explained even attempts to restrict solicitors to early evening hours before dusk has been rejected by the courts.

Dormitzer said the proposed bylaw would at least ensure police have conducted background checks on door-to-door solicitors.

"Last year I received complaints about magazine solicitation by individuals who did show up on peoples' doorsteps at dusk," Dormitzer said. "According to the Duxbury Police Chief, whom Chief Hussey contacted, their solicitation by-law was effective in limiting the number of solicitors who came to town with the intention of getting in and quickly getting out. It also provided some comfort to residents that the people who were soliciting had background checks performed by the police department.

"The bylaw is not a panacea for unwanted solicitation. It is narrowly defined to meet court challenges particularly with respect to the First Amendment to the Constitution," he said.

In an interview Wednesday, Hussey said he and Sgt William Quigley were meeting with the Duxbury chief that afternoon to talk further about the bylaw.

Hussey said the police would provide solicitors with an ID card or badge that would be worn and be clearly visible. He also said the police would conduct a quick background check on the individuals.

He did not think the bylaw would increase the workload at the department. He said the department has a device that can laminate ID cards and is looking to purchasing special holders for the cards that could be worn around the neck.

Hussey is in favor of the proposed by law describing it as a "quality of life" issue. "Anything that makes residents feel safer is a good thing," he said.

Dormitzer also pointed out it is unlawful for solicitors to visit a residence that has a "no trespassing" or "no soliciting" sign or poster.

"One can put out a 'no trespassing, no solicitation' sign even today (without the bylaw)," Dormitzer said. "The courts have held that is enforceable. It is not more enforceable because of the bylaw."

A detailed description of the bylaw is in the Town Warrant that will be mailed to all households. Violators of any provision of the bylaw, should it be adopted, could be subject to loss of solicitation license and fines.

School resource officer could help foster communication to ensure a safe learning environment.

Many other surrounding towns have resource officers, and in one case in Marshfield, a plot by two students to commit a Columbine-like massacre at the high school was stopped in its tracks when three students reported the plans to the school's resource officer.

Police Chief James Hussey said adding the position will make a difference both in the schools and at the department. He said while the main objective is to help increase positive interaction between the police department and the town's youth, it would also bring a body back to the department which was taken out of the budget during fiscal 2006.

The Cohasset Police Department has a contract with its officers that requires there be minimum manning of three officers on duty for each shift. He said with the amount of officers the department currently has, when officers are away from the station for training, or are at court or on vacation, another member has to be brought in and is paid overtime.

"We're looking to add a body and put them on the day shift," he said, which will help bring those overtime costs down. This current fiscal year, the police department has spent over $92,600 on day overtime. That is 2,384 hours of overtime, which is 298 days through March 6. Hussey said by adding the position, he anticipates overtime costs can be reduced to $48,600.

Hussey said the intention is to have four officers on duty during the day, with one of them being the resource officer, in the event someone was out of town from that shift, the resource officer would count toward minimum manning and another officer would not need to be called in. While the resource officer would spend a good deal of time at the schools, he or she would also be available to respond to emergencies in extreme cases.

Hussey said in the 1-1/2 years he has worked in Cohasset, the members of the community have put youth issues are at the top of their list of concerns. He believes having a resource officer at the school on a daily basis, who can interact with the students in a neutral location, would build up a relationship and help bridge the gap currently between the two.

"We have made some headway," said Hussey, as teacher Jack Buckley's Introduction to Law class invites uniformed police officers to make regular visits to the classroom.

However, he said he remembers what it was like to be a kid and how seeing a police officer would usually generate the "Uh-oh" gut reaction, even if the teen was not doing anything wrong. Hussey said he wants to establish the kind of relationship in the town where students will see an officer out of school and will walk over to say hello, rather than turn their backs and walk in the other direction. "I think it's good to have the police department actively involved with the town's youth. It's a win-win for everyone," he said.

Not everyone is on board with the position, however. Selectmen Gary Vanderweil and Ralph Dormizter expressed skepticism at last week's selectmen's meeting about whether the position would indeed reduce overtime or help find the culprits responsible for some of the school threats.

Vanderweil described the position as a "fad" and was concerned about the cost.

"All other towns do it, so we do it," he said, describing the resource officer as a "a big, strapping ex-marine to be put in the high school to bond with the kids." Vanderweil noted hiring new personnel translates into retirement, health and disability benefits.

But School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said when Dr. Robert Macy, director of community services for the trauma center in Boston, came to Cohasset to speak about school violence prevention, he recommended there be two resource officers working in the system.

Hingham's experience

Hingham High School has had a resource officer for the past five years. The town also has a D.A.R.E. officer at the middle school and a safety officer at the elementary school. Police Chief Steve Carlson and HHS Principal Paula Girouard McCann both recommend having a high school resource officer.

Carlson said high school Resource Officer Richard St. Laurent's job description requires he be at the high school every day school is in session. He does not respond to calls that come into the station. Carlson said the position restricts the days which can be taken for personal reasons or vacation to those times school is not in session, but any officer that accepts the position fully understands the responsibilities that come with it. The officer is required to attend all major school functions, and if two functions are happening on the same night, the principal must dictate which is a larger priority. "You've got to have a very special person" to take on the role, Carlson said.

St. Laurent does not wear his uniform to school, and resource officers must have a bachelor's degree to be able to teach. If the officer does not have a degree, he or she must earn one within a timeframe agreed upon by the school administration.

St. Laurent teaches for one period out of the six total periods per day, and Girouard McCann said currently, his course is similar to a criminal law class.

In the past, the resource officer has taught a forensic science class, which Girouard McCann quipped was Hingham High School's "answer to CSI." The students participate in real, hands-on activities including working with fingerprints. "It's a fun class. The kids have really enjoyed that," she said.

Girouard McCann said St. Laurent has many other duties aside from those in the classroom. At the start of the day, he patrols the parking areas, including the student parking lot. He regulates any traffic issues that may occur, including backups from students drop-offs.

During lunch, St. Laurent is always visible. Girouard McCann said this provides students with an opportunity to see him out of the classroom or office setting where they might be more reluctant to ask a question or just stop to say hello. "It helps build relationships," she said, adding because the resource officer position is not one that is responsible for carrying out regular disciplinary actions (the assistant principal does), St. Laurent is very approachable.

"He's not like an armed

Absentee election ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on Saturday, April 8 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 7 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open
- Physical disability
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 8 to be counted.

We will be using the Accu-Vote optical scan system. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc., and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disabilities. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

guard with a gun on his hip," she said, adding "he's been very helpful" in not only dealing with issues at school, but students are often comfortable enough to come to him with private matters involving friends or family.

When not teaching his own class, St. Laurent will often spend time in other classrooms as a guest speaker. Sometimes sociology or social studies classes will ask him to come in and make a presentation. Whatever his role, Girouard McCann said the bottom line is, the resource officer is helping build a relationship between the police department and the youth in the community, and any time that kind of opportunity presents itself, it's a good thing.

Hussey said should the town decide to allocate the funding for the position, he will then meet with members of the school department to determine the role the officer would have in the schools. "It's a work in progress," he said, adding there are many different ways a town can use a resource officer. "The schools are going to be paying for half the cost, so they'll have a major say and we'll have to determine how best to use the officer in the schools," Hussey said.

"I think it's good to have the police department actively involved with the town's youth. It's a win-win for everyone.'
— Police Chief James Hussey

Both the town and school budget have money allocated to cover the cost of the resource officer should the $725,000 override pass. While the school department was slated to receive $505,000 as its portion of the override, Selectmen raised the school department's portion to $530,000 to include $25,000 for the schools' share of the officer's salary. It is still unclear what would happen in terms of funding the position on the school side should the $1.495 million override pass, as that figure will be roughly $200,000 less than the school department's certified budget, which would require making cuts.

Hussey added regardless of whether the position is funded or not, he has already paid for one of his officers to attend a 40-hour resource officer training session in April, which provides valuable tools for working with youth. The training would cover topics such as being a positive role model, public speaking, counseling, adolescent emotional issues, child abuse, dysfunctional families, special education, school safety, school law and substance abuse.

Carlson, the Hingham chief, said he would advise any town considering whether to implement a school resource officer to take a look at its total budget and then compare it with the potential value that position could bring. He said in Hingham, students know any time of day they can contact the police department and it will in turn contact Officer St. Laurent, meaning he is never more than a phone call away. If having a resource officer available helps prevent even one student from making a wrong decision, Carlson said in his opinion, the money has been well spent.

Town Meeting at 10 a.m.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil would like Town Meeting to get under way at 9 a.m. rather than 10 a.m.

But Town Manager Bill Griffin said the general bylaws state Town Meeting must start at 10 a.m.

"Maybe that's something we can think about for the future," Griffin said.

BONE MARROW DRIVE

Hello Cohasset. I received this email and phone call from a family here in town who have an 18-year-old cousin and niece who has just relapsed with her leukemia and has not yet found a bone-marrow donor for a transplant.

Please take the time to consider coming to be screened for bone marrow donations. The Bone Marrow Drive will take place at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, on March 25, from 10a.m. to 4p.m.

All people in good health between the ages of 18-59 are eligible; 16 and 17 year olds are eligible with parental consent. This drive is covered by Massachusetts health insurance companies. People should have their insurance information ready. Thank you for all you cooperation. Please call (781-383-1852) or e-mail Paul at (freemind008@gmail.com) if you have any questions

Congratulation's goes out to Carling Sturino, class of '08 and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otello Sturino who was named to the dean's list at Assumption College for the fall 2005 semester. Super news Carling.

RELAY KICK OFF MEETING!

The Team Kick-Meeting for the American Cancer Society's 10th Annual Cohasset Relay For Life is being held on Thursday, March 23 at the Cohasset Lightkeepers House. Here, Team Captains will be able to come and register their teams, meet and talk with committee members and members of the American Cancer Society, hear and learn all about this amazing event and really get ready to have the best relay ever.

Last year's Relay raised over 150,000 dollars for the American Cancer Society with the help of volunteers from the four town area. Teams of volunteers from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate worked from March to June to raise these funds.

This year's Relay is the tenth and we expect to exceed last year's numbers both in dollars and participation.

Music, prizes, delicious food prepared by Laura Atherton and so much more is in store for this fun and informative evening. Talk with your friends and families to get your teams started, come to the Lightkeepers on Thursday and get ready to start this year's Relay efforts.

If you have any questions at all about starting a team or other information, contact Harry St. Onge for Cohasset/Hingham at st.onge@comcast.net or 781-383-9457.

ARROW OF LIGHT

On Sunday, March 12 Cub Scout Pack 38 held its annual Blue and Gold dinner at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. While many Cub Scouts received badges, there were eight fifth-grade Webelos II's who received their Arrow of Light Award, which is Cub Scouting's highest award.

The boys have worked toward this award for two years; this year's recipients are: Michael Fegreus, Hugh Gideon-Murphy, Robbie Hillman, Alex Kent, Andrew Leighton, Kevin Mack, Jack Thomae, and Ian Tracey.

In addition to their Arrow of Light Badge, each boy received a certificate of recognition from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts House of Representatives, signed by Speaker of the House, Salvatore F. DiMasi, and state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley.

NEWEST CENTENARIAN!

A very special 100th birthday wish goes out to Florence Gertrude Stoughton, mother of Beverly Barrett of Hingham and grandmother of Sarah Barrett of Cohasset. Mrs. Stoughton lived in Cohasset for 74 of her 100 years. She is now in neighboring Hingham at Harbor House.

Mrs. Stoughton celebrated her special day with family and friends on Thursday, March 9. A wonderful time was had by all!

HONORABLE MENTION

Congratulations to Madeline Blackburn and Foster Eymer for earning an Honorable Mention in 2006 Massachusetts Letters About Literature program! They will be honored at the State House along with their families, State Senator, and State Representative. Madeline and Foster were two out the almost 3,000 students that participated from over 100 Massachusetts towns. What an honor for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and Cohasset.

BUDGET MEETING

Please join the Cohasset PSO on Tuesday, March 21st at 7 p.m. in the High School Auditorium for an informational meeting regarding the School Department Budget. Superintendent Dr. Denise Walsh will be available to answer your questions about the budget and its presentation at the upcoming Town Meeting.

NOTED AUTHOR

On Wednesday, March 29 at 7 p.m. at the St. Anthony's Parish Center, Author Michael Tougias will be speaking on "Quiet Places: Rambles Through Hidden Massachusetts." Naturalist, photographer, and author Michael Tougias will give a lecture and slide presentation featuring lessor-known natural and historic places of Massachusetts. Michael Tougias in the author of 15 books including "There's A Porcupine In My Outhouse!," "Quabbin: A History and Explorers Guide," "The Blizzard of '78," and "Until I Have No Country (A Novel of King Philip's Indian War)." His latest book "Ten Hours Until Dawn: The True Story of Heroism and Tragedy Aboard The Can Do" was selected by the American Library Association as a "Top Pick for 2005". He is a frequent guest on WCVB TV's "Chronicle" and WBZ radio.

Autographed copies of the author's work will be available for sale. A historic moment in game show history takes place on Friday, April 7 at 7pm.

FAMILY FEUD

The first ever Cohasset Family Feud will be held at Cohasset High School. Rich Ofsthun will emcee the event. The fundraiser is sponsored by the Post Prom Committee to fund post-prom activities. How can you play? Ask friends, neighbors or family to form a five member team. Each team member pays $25 per team member to play- $125 total per team. Minimum age to play is 10 years old. Call 383-9396 for additional information. Mail team registration information and the $125 team registration fee to Kathy Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025. Checks are payable to the Post Prom Committee '06. The deadline to register is March 24 and registration is limited to the first 16 teams.

TRADITION HIATUS

The Beechwood Church will not host the Annual Election Supper this Spring, due to circumstances beyond its control. But the church is looking forward to continuing the tradition next year. Best wishes to all the candidates running for town office!

HOMELESSNESS

Did you know that homelessness is a growing problem on the South Shore? First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church in Cohasset's Outreach and Adult Education Committees are sponsoring a discussion about this timely concern and challenge on Sunday, April 2 at 11:30 a.m. in the Atkinson Room of the Parish House, 23 North Main St. Leading the discussion will be Dorothy Newell, Director of South Shore Friends of the Homeless. She is a leading advocate and expert on the challenges confronting the Homeless. All are welcome and you are encouraged to attend.

TELEPHONE TYPO

Recently, a beige phone-book Tel-A-Cover was mailed into the community of Cohasset. The number for the Cohasset Swim Center was incorrectly published as 781-383-0636. Please fix with a ball point pen. The correct number is 781-383-9463.

That is all the news for this week.

Please send all of your news and information to me no later than 5 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Cohasset doctor has her eye on optic health

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Geri Goodman has always had a steady hand. As a young girl, she had a knack for the fine precision required for needlepoint — a craft that prepared her hands and mind for the work she now does as a nationally recognized corneal specialist.

Goodman was one of the first ophthalmologists to perform refractive eye surgery (more commonly known as LASIK surgery) in the United States. She was involved in the studies, which gained the surgery approval from the Food and Drug Administration, and is now recognized as an authority on the subject. Fortunately for residents on the South Shore, Goodman and her family recently relocated to Cohasset.

Goodman and her family, which includes husband Dan Counihan and their son Brian, moved to Jerusalem Road from Baltimore, Md. in 2005. Counihan was offered a job at Gensyme in Cambridge, which initiated the move.

"We thought we'd live closer to Cambridge," said Goodman, but after driving through Cohasset, they fell in love with the town. "It's very picturesque," she said, adding they have met many very nice people, her son loves attending the Osgood School, and the whole family loves the small-town feel, which they did not have in Baltimore.

Goodman is a doctor for the Nielsen Eye Center, which has offices in Quincy as well as Derby Street in Hingham. "We're trying to expand our services on the South Shore," she said.

Goodman has known she wanted to be a doctor since the third grade. She said she always had an interest in physics and optics, and the first time she witnessed an eye surgery first hand, "I thought it was beautiful." Goodman received her undergraduate degree from the State University of New York at Albany, and her Doctor of Medicine at Yale University School of Medicine. Following residency at the University of North Carolina, she completed a

"If you ask a lot of people, many will say their eyes are the most important part of their bodies."
— Dr. Geri Goodman

Fellowship in Corneal Diseases at Wilmer Institute at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. She later had her own private practice, including her own laser center, and during that time, she taught many courses and lectured on the procedures.

Goodman's work on refractive eye surgery was done during her time at Johns Hopkins. "I had my eyes done in the studies," she said, which was exciting, but also somewhat intimidating.

"If you ask a lot of people, many will say their eyes are the most important part of their bodies," she said, adding people will often say they would rather lose any other sense but sight. Goodman said she did not hesitate to use her own eyes during the studies because she had had so much exposure to the surgery beforehand and confidence in the doctor who performed it. "I felt really good about the results from the trial and I hand-picked the surgeon," she said, adding because she had a working relationship with the surgeon, it helped put her mind at ease. "I trusted the doctor," she said, which is the most important quality of any patient-doctor relationship.

When the surgery was brand new, doctors were still performing the procedure one eye at a time over a two-day period. "That was over 13 years ago and it was the best thing I ever did," she said.

During refractive eye surgery, Goodman said essentially, the cornea, which is the part of the eye a contact would rest on, is reshaped, which allows light to enter and focus better on the retina. "It is a gentle sculpting," she said, adding these days, it is outpatient, same-day surgery with little down time. "It is very precise," she said. Goodman added it could take some patients more than a year before they have done enough research to feel comfortable having the procedure done. "It's a big step," she said, but added for her, it was well worth it, as she no longer has to depend on glasses.

Goodman said there is a more conservative attitude toward refractive eye surgery in New England than other parts of the country. She said one of the main problems patients around Cohasset want to see addressed is "dry eye." She said the combination of the weather, staring at computer screens all day long, and medicines that people are on such as anti-histamines or anti-depressants can all dry the eyes out. The result is a burning, itching, and sometimes tearing which can all cause discomfort. Therefore, she has opened a dry-eye clinic to help provide relief.

Healthy eyes start from the inside out and Goodman said often, the eyes can be a window into the overall health of a person. She said she can sometimes tell a patient has diabetes or high blood pressure before even they know they have the condition, just by looking at their eyes. "It's pretty amazing," she said.

Goodman recommends everyone between the ages of 50 or 60 have a yearly eye exam, and every two years for people in their 40s. Children are usually screened at their pediatrician's office or at school, and all children should have some type of screening yearly, she said.

Goodman said many people have the attitude "if it's not broken, don't fix it," when it comes to having regular eye exams, but conditions such as glaucoma do not have any symptoms and people do not know they have them without an exam. "We can pick it up early to ensure a patient does not go blind," she said.

While regular exams are important, so are proactive measures to protect the eyes from outside damage. Goodman said everyone, including children, should always wear sunglasses when going outside, even on days when the sky is overcast, as ultra-violet light can affect eye health. She said there is also a new movement in progress with kids and safety glasses, especially on playing fields. She said one hit from a baseball or a hockey puck can be "devastating," and safety gear can play a big role in eye protection.

Goodman said she is available to help teach the community about eye health and as a new resident in town, is very enthusiastic about helping in any way she can. She said she would be happy to talk with members of various town departments that might have a need for eye screening, and would be happy to give lectures on any facets of eye health. "We want to find ways to give back and volunteer," she said. "We're very happy to be in such a nice community."

For more information on Geri Goodman or the Nielsen Eye Center please visit the Nielsen Eye Center Web site at www.golasik.net.

Dr. Geri Goodman stands next to an Allegretto Excimer laser, which she uses during LASIK eye surgery. LASIK surgery corrects poor vision by gently reshaping the cornea, which allows light to enter and focus better on the retina. The procedure takes roughly 10 minutes and is same-day outpatient surgery. Goodman's laser is one of the latest forms of technology, and is the only laser of its kind in Boston.

Marines stationed in Iraq will soon receive a sweet treat, thanks to the efforts of seven young Cohasset residents. Caroline Kennedy, Sarah Gruber, Molly Cunning, Nakilah Skeens, Kate Cunning, Anya Gruber, and Lauren Cunning met at the South Shore Art Center after school on March 8 to wrap and label 12 boxes full of Girl Scout cookies to be shipped overseas. The girls made special cards for the Marines as well, to add their own personal touch.

Sending cookies to Marines in Iraq

While selling Girl Scout cookies a few months ago, Caroline Kennedy, who is 9 years old and is in the third grade at Deer Hill School, noticed many people kept telling her they would love to support the Girl Scouts, but didn't need the cookies. At the same time, her uncle Major James Quinn was preparing to deploy to Iraq for seven months, which brought a great idea to mind.

Within 24 hours, 150 boxes were ordered, and many people offered money to assist with postage.

With the help of her mother Diane, Caroline began e-mailing some friends — two days before the Girl Scout cookie orders were due — asking people to buy a box of cookies for Major Quinn and his Marine Corps squadron. Within 24 hours, 150 boxes were ordered, and many people offered money to assist with postage.

Caroline's friends were eager to help, and the cookies were shipped that weekend. Caroline's uncle, and the other members of Marine All-Weather Fighter Attack Squadron 533 are eagerly anticipating their arrival.

ladies would meet regularly to exchange recipes, but decided because they had never tried some of the dishes they were going to prepare, rather than use their families to test them out, once per month they would get together and cook something new and exciting for each other. "Some things you'd never try again," joked Sestito, but overall, the group agreed the majority of dishes they have created have been very good.

"It's fun just to be together," said Mullaney, which is why she relishes all the duties that come along with being the unofficial leader of the group. At each meal, the hostess provides the main course and coffee, and the other seven bring hors d'oeuvres, a salad, bread (that person also brings the wine), two vegetables and dessert.

Every year, Mullaney schedules when everyone will serve as hostess and she coordinates what everyone else is responsible for bringing. Without her coordination, "Everything would be so screwed up, we'd all bring a vegetable," quipped Golden. While Mullaney lets everyone know what they should bring, it is up to each member to decide which dish she will make. "We don't know what everyone's going to bring, but 90 percent of the time, it works out beautifully," said Mullaney.

Mullaney keeps copies of the recipes for all the dishes — which after 40 years has become quite an extensive collection. While some recipes are original, many have been collected from magazines and cookbooks along the way. Mullaney is currently in the process of compiling all the recipes for a cookbook, which the group would like to sell one day. The proceeds from the sales would be forwarded to an agreed upon charity, potentially a local hospice organization.

The gatherings are for the ladies only, which means husbands stay at home. For a while, men were invited to one dinner in June, at which the ladies would choose the best of the recipes they had made during the year. However, that tradition ended in the early 1970s and it's been just the girls ever since.

"We stopped because a lot of them were meat and potato men," said Mullaney, adding their male counterparts weren't as adventurous when it came to trying something new.

"Plus the fact that we didn't want them," quipped Golden, to which all the ladies laughed.

When the gourmet club began, the ladies used it as an opportunity to leave the children at home with their husbands and have a girls night out. The very first meeting was held at Wilkin's house on a very snowy evening. "I remember that night like it was yesterday," said Sestito. At the end of the night, Wilkin said she remembers going upstairs to get ready for bed, and not too long after, she and her husband heard repeated "pings" on the window. They looked out, and there were Golden and former member Doris Dickson, also known as "The two Dorises," throwing stones at the window. Their car was stuck in the snow and they needed assistance. Wilkin said her husband Brian pulled on his coat and "The last thing I saw was the three of them walking down North Main Street into the snow," she said, laughing, which made for a very memorable beginning.

Over the years, the club has tried its best to make as many

Chicken Italiano

4 packages spinach, frozen, thawed
1-1/2 cups bread crumbs, Italian
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon oregano
1/2 cup parmesan cheese, grated
16 ounces cream cheese, softened
8 chicken breasts, boneless and skinless
8 slices mozzarella, cut in half
4 medium tomatoes

Combine drained spinach with cream cheese. Press spinach mixture evenly into bottom of 9x13 pan coated with cooking spray. Place bread crumbs in a shallow dish. Cut each chicken breast in half horizontally to make two cutlets (partially freeze chicken for easier slicing). Dredge chicken in bread crumbs. Heat oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium high heat. Cook chicken in batches two minutes on each side or until browned, adding additional oil as needed. Arrange chicken evenly over spinach mixture. Top with mozzarella and sprinkle with oregano. Top with 1/2 inch slices of tomato and parmesan. Cover and chill up to 24 hours, if desired. To bake, let chicken stand at room temperature 20 minutes. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serves 8. Recipe courtesy of Pat Mullaney, December, 2005.

diverse dishes as possible, and the women say they have seen food trends come and go and resurface again. "Watching the Food Network I see them coming up with a lot of our old recipes," said Wilkin. Mullaney added the gourmet club takes credit for baking the first pumpkin bread in 1966, as well as the first zucchini bread. "No one had ever heard of it before," she said.

Mullaney also said the group has found that often the recipes which are the simplest are the favorites, not only because of the difficulty factor, but because they taste better than some of the more exotic dishes. "We've done duck, and we've done snails, and we said, forget it, the simpler recipes are the best," said Mullaney.

Some of the club's favorite dishes — which then turned into favorites for their families as well — have been "chicken in a bundle" which is made with chopped chicken breasts, cream of mushroom soup and onions, all bundled into a Pillsbury crescent roll. "Chicken bundles have never failed," said LeBlanc.

In addition, a lobster-stuffed tenderloin dish was named a favorite, as were baked beans "with all the beans," rolled lasagna, and grapefruit baked Alaska.

But with all the dishes the ladies have made for each other over the years, and still continue to make, that list of favorites is continually growing and appears to have no end in sight, which is sure to be good news for their families. With all the new recipes they keep coming up with, Mullaney said there still remains a surefire way to tell whether it will be popular at home. "If the plate is clean, you know it's a success," said Mullaney.

Java Jolt Ice Cream Pie

20 Oreo chocolate cookies
4 tablespoons butter, melted
2-1/2 tablespoons Kahlúa
1 quart java chip ice cream
2 tablespoons instant coffee mix
2/3 cup chocolate fudge syrup
1 quart vanilla ice cream

Coat a 9-inch pie plate with nonstick spray. Process cookies and coffee granules in food processor until fine crumbs form. Add butter, process until crumbs are moistened. Press over bottom and up sides of pie plate. Freeze 30 minutes until firm. Mix hot fudge sauce and Kahlúa in a small bowl until blended. Transfer 1/3 cup to a small zip top bag and seal bag. Cover bowl with plastic wrap and set aside. Spread two cups softened vanilla ice cream in crust and freeze 30 minutes. Spread softened java chip ice cream on top of vanilla ice cream, cut tip off one corner of zip top bag and pipe over ice cream. Freeze 30 minutes until firm. Spread rest of vanilla ice cream carefully over chocolate topping. Freeze 30 minutes. Spread rest of java chip ice cream on pie one inch from edge. Freeze until firm. Spread rest of chocolate topping, top with chopped chocolate espresso beans or any other chocolate covered candy. Freeze at least 4 hours. Can be made and frozen up to two weeks ahead. Serves 10. Recipe courtesy of Pat Mullaney, May 2005.

Warrant for your attention

With Town Meeting just a few weeks away, all households should be receiving a copy of the Town Warrant which was mailed yesterday.

We hope that Cohasset residents will take the time to look it over carefully and mark their calendars to attend Town Meeting on April 1 at the high school.

As residents, some of whom may not be familiar with Town Meeting, will see as they go through the warrant: the override is not the only "item" on the agenda. In fact there are 24 articles "or items of business" that appear in the booklet.

In short there are myriad issues that could be debated, many of which could affect the quality of life here in town.

We admit to being "Town Meeting groupies." Even though the bleacher seats where we must sit are hard and uncomfortable, we enjoy watching the venerable form of government unfold before us and find the debate interesting, educational and at times, entertaining.

There are always plenty of good quotes from the "regulars" and we are often impressed when someone who has not spoken up in the past gets fired up about an issue and goes to the microphone.

One of the more interesting articles – although it contains considerable "legalese" in the warrant – is the proposed solicitation bylaw which would require commercial solicitors or those paid by non-profits to register with the police department before they can go door-to-door in town.

Frankly, it's hard to find another bylaw that could have such an immediate and direct effect on Cohasset once daylight savings time returns next month. During the late spring, summer and early fall the police log has always been peppered with calls from angry citizens about people knocking on their doors selling magazines.

Interestingly, this practice is protected by the First Amendment but the town can require commercial solicitors or those who are paid by nonprofit organizations to register with the police. The police would conduct a background check on the individual and issue a badge with the person's name, photograph and employer.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer points out the proposed bylaw is not a "panacea" but it is definitely a good thing because it would at least give residents a level of comfort that the people knocking on their door have been checked out.

There are some exemptions. For example, the bylaw would not apply to youngsters selling Girl Scout cookies, kids raising money for boosters clubs and the like, or political candidates and campaign workers.

If you feel strongly about the solicitation bylaw – or any of the 24 articles on the warrant – then you should plan to attend Town Meeting April 1.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:
Board of Health, 7 p.m., April 10
Capital Budget Committee, 7:30 p.m., March 20

Cancer fight is marathon effort

TO THE EDITOR:

Though we hear of much progress in news reports, the honest story is that there's still a long way to go before we have a cure for each of the many different types of cancer. And no, we're not all doctors, but yes, we all can help with this fight.

So I run for the Barr Foundation, a cancer research foundation at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. In doing so, I ask supporters to donate to the cause. With the generosity of so many folks in past years, this year I've raised the bar for both the fundraising goal, and the distance. So please support me as I prepare for the Boston Marathon.

From this point forward, you will see me running around town in the D-F multicolored singlet. Feel free to wave, honk, cheer, and even more important, contribute. Your generous gifts can be made out to "Dana-Farber Cancer Institute" and sent to me (I'll forward to the right folks and get you on the electronic "Honor Roll").

If you include an email address, I can keep you informed of our progress. Alternatively, you can go through the Dana-Farber.org website and donate via charge card. No matter how you decide to join the fight, your efforts are so very welcomed and needed. Thanks for your support!

Valentines Fund Dance appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

I and the helpers who put on the fourth annual Valentines Fund Dance to benefit the Bread & Jams Self-Advocacy Center and Shelter for The Homeless of the Greater Boston area would like to thank all the donors who gave and attendees who came out to the Atlantica on a snowy night on Saturday, Feb. 25. They danced to the slamming rock and roll of the Pemberton All-Stars, and to listened to the exceptional Joe Micarelli Trio with guest accompaniment by Cohasset's own Jay Place and surprise guest Les Sampou. The Atlantica was kind and generous for the fourth year to donate the space and gourmet hors d'ouvres, and the bands donated their energy and time to help us raise over $10,000.

The homeless never get a "snow day," so this year I'm especially proud of the South Shore's efforts. We don't have much land left here to help with the state's low-income housing stock problem, but we can show that Cohasset cares enough to share the wealth and health we enjoy.

Be ready for next year. Rock and Roll Philanthropy is the best way to rip the February page off the calendar wall.

Sign of spring: lawn fertilizer

FROM THE WRPC

JIM KINCH

As the lengthening days warm our chilled bodies it's obvious that even a relatively warm and somewhat snow-less winter as this one leaves its impact. With the longer days our ears perk up to the birdcalls and the condition of our personal landscape and lawns. There really isn't much you can do about the effects of winter freeze/thaw cycles on lawns and shrubbery (or driveways for that matter).

Another harbinger of Spring are the TV/radio commercials for fertilizers and chemical treatments along with the attendant mailbox flyers and billboards extolling the virtues of early and consistent applications to our personal green patches of vegetation. But is this the best way to approach maintenance of our lawns and gardens? If the commercial guys had their way we'd be spraying and dosing from early March through to July. The purpose to all this advertising hype is to get you to buy the product— to generate a need and propose a solution to fill that need.

Does all this makes sense economically and ecologically?

A review of the rather daunting looking chemical ingredients list of any commercial chemical fertilizer or lawn treatment quickly dazzles the non-technical user with its bold warnings about misuse or over-application, protection admonishments to keep children and pets away from application sites (there's a hint!). Long unfamiliar chemical names and descriptions befuddle all but the initiated with the arcane and secretive pharmacopeia of lawn science.

Billions of dollars have been invested to make you mentally link Spring with the lawn spreader or the Chem-lawn Truck. But is all this necessary and correct? On the environmental front some of the birds, are so to speak, have come to roost. Our vastly inappropriate investment in a fossil fuel economy has proven to be something of a bad bargain— gas approaching $2.50/gal, a war going bad in the oil lands and an economy caught up in the spiraling cost of increasingly scarce foreign oil reserves are some of the ominous symptoms of a system out of balance. Shrinking glaciers and creeping average annual temperatures are further signs of the impact 6 billion or so consumers are having on our global systems. But I digress… think locally.

Spring in New England is a wet season, snow melt, ice melt, rainfall all contribute most of the water budget that our region sees over a year. Our lawns and shrubbery will respond beautifully as they do every year to this surfeit of moisture growing dramatically and satisfactorily without any intervention whatsoever. When it rains lawns get green. Problems arise when, responding to the advertising and flyers and the commercial

Update on village revitalization work

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

This week we had a meeting with the Town's Revitalization contractor preliminary to restarting this construction. The work that remains will begin with completion of the ledge removal at the base of St. Stephen's along Main Street. By way of explanation, the ledge will be moved back about 5 feet. About half of this new space will be used to increase the sidewalk width by 2-1/2 feet and a like amount will be used to widen the street. This additional width will make both the street and sidewalk much safer. Also, when the granite has been removed to its final depth, the face will be resurfaced to make it look more natural. The drill holes that are evident now are necessary for the splitting operation. Soon they will disappear.

Once construction starts it should be complete by Memorial Day.

The drainage under ground was mostly completed last fall. Three areas remain to be completed before the surface work can start. There is a large drainage structure that needs to be placed in front of the park between Tedeschi's and French Memories. This new drain will be cut directly into the James Brook culvert which is underground. Most people don't realize that this culvert, right under the center of Town, is quite large, measuring 5.5' high by 4.5' wide. All of James Brook flows through this culvert as it finds its way from Sanctuary Pond near King Street to Jacobs Meadow between downtown and the harbor.

Additional below ground drainage work will also be done at the Community Center on Main St. and on Depot Court near the kitchen store. When these drainage structures are completed, the project will really zoom.

The street will be scraped down to a much lower level and a binder coat of asphalt will be laid. Then all of the manholes and drain grates will be raised to their finished height, about 1-1/2 inches higher than the binder coat. Until the final paving course is laid, the street will be a bit bumpy. So, drive slowly.

The approaches to the Rocky Lane Bridge have really taken shape. Now it is very apparent how large the bridge will be. The side walls for the approaches on either side of the bridge have been completed. Once the approaches are complete, the bridge deck will be laid. In the photo at left, the Rocky Lane Bridge waits for the deck to be installed. The photo at right shows the North Main Street approach from the track area.

When the binder coat of asphalt has been laid, the old curbs will be removed and new curbing will be set to its finished height. Both foot and vehicular traffic will be affected by this work. At this point it is sort of a toss-up whether the sidewalk will be done next or the street. To do the sidewalk, the old walk will be removed, a new grade established and then new asphalt will be laid. Please note that no more than 300 feet of sidewalk can be under construction at a time, per our contract. And, during sidewalk construction the contractor must maintain temporary access to all shops and businesses. If for any reason, access to any businesses must be blocked, 72 hour advanced notice will be provided to that business. Also, during sidewalk work parking may be limited near the work zone. The street will be asphalted to its final grade on top of the binder coat. Traffic and parking in the village will be limited during final road paving. The last street work will be final striping for lane markings and parking spaces.

There are still some finishing details that must be done. These may be intermixed with the basic work at the option of the contractor. Some of these are:

- Rebuild the POW MIA Island at Depot Court and Main Street.
- Lay the brick in the pocket parks at the corner of Main and Depot Court and the corner of Elm and Main streets.
- Lay the crosswalks which will be concrete pavers laid in a herring bone pattern with granite edging.
- Rebuild areas in sidewalk where trees exist or will be added.
- Add plants and planters at various locations.
- Construct concrete transitional aprons for the handicap access for crosswalks.

That's it in a nut shell. Once construction starts it should be complete by Memorial Day. One other bittersweet thing needs to be mentioned. Because of the huge increase in construction costs, this project is able to only do the construction from the Community Center to Spring Street and from Depot Court to the Art Center. There is no money to do the equivalent work on Brook Street or Elm Street in the village center. Your Town has applied to the Executive Office of Transportation to increase the PWED grant that is paying for this project. This would increase the amount of the grant to cover these originally intended areas. If we are fortunate enough to receive these extra funds, we will use our best efforts to complete the project on time, but it may take a bit more time than currently planned.

These are the details as we know them today. We do understand that this construction will be inconvenient to those who frequent the village area. We ask your patience as we complete the final portion of the long awaited revitalization project in our scenic village. We are available to answer any questions you may have at the referenced email addresses and phone number.

Time washes over old shipwrecks

MARINER'S CORNER

STEVE BOBO

A little way up Bailey's Creek, next to Parker Avenue, lays the wreck of an ancient boat. For some, the sight of an old hull decaying on a mudflat somewhere is a highly evocative event. For example, the old hull was of sufficient interest for Paul Adams, board member of the Center for Student Coastal Research to wonder about the old planks laying beside the new riprap defining the parking lot. The Center for Student Coastal Research is now at Parker Avenue site of the old Hagerty property, which was formerly John Eltman's boatyard.

Paul brought some of these timbers home and cleaned them up. He then brought them to David Wadsworth at the Maritime Museum. David seldom throws anything away, and correctly judged that the timbers belonged inside rather than outside as Paul proposed. And there they lay.

Upon hearing this, I remembered Francis Hagerty's comment to me in 1971 that he may have gotten the rudder of the Gracie, a yacht shown in some of the historic pictures around the Cove. Upon mentioning this to David, he said that Noel Ripley probably had the fragment about which Fran was talking. When I mentioned this to Noel, he said that he did, and that it was in his backyard.

Discussions with Cliff Dickson last fall revealed that when he was a kid (aged 10 in about 1935), he used to swim in the hold of an old wreck at Eltman's, which the kids used to call the Gundalow. He described it as a fat old round sterned barge brought down by Eltman to serve as a breakwater. David recalled a picture of such a wreck in the historic archives (a blowup of a part of the picture is shown). It's a 1938 aerial photo of Cohasset Cove. The part shown here clearly indicated a boat, but it is not a gundalow. The time was at about the time of Eltman's sale to Fran Hagerty, who bought an interest in the yard. There may be another wreck inside the one depicted but the detail is too badly obscured. Nevertheless, the hull, which is blurringly shown, has the crisp lines of a late 19th century mackerel fisherman about 70 feet long with a clipper bow.

We may never know the boat from which we took what we have of that wreck in the Maritime Museum, but several residents have confirmed that it's an important piece of Cohasset's history.

Incidentally, we'll be making some changes in the Museum. We'll be adding some much needed improvement to the electrical service which will permit better exhibit lighting; we'll have two excellent videos, one of "Fame" the pinky schooner on which the new weathervane planned for the Pratt building is based, and the other on the Clearwater, the Hudson River sloop built by a Maine boatyard to support cleanup of that river. Also many other interesting projects, so come and visit us.

TOM HENSHAW

I tell you, before I do something nice for somebody I'm going to run it by my lawyer, my accountant, my pastor, maybe even my paper boy, first. I can't take the chance. Not after what they did to Dan Burke.

Dan, in case you haven't been following it, is the owner of the Portland, Maine, Sea Dogs, a minor league baseball affiliated with our Red Sox that has been drawing capacity 7,000 crowds to city-owned Hadlock Field.

In order to show his appreciation and enhance Portland's reputation as an art center, Dan ordered commissioned a statue in bronze showing a family — mom, dad and two little ones — coming into the park to attend a game.

Now you might think such a gift would be gratefully accepted. But no-o-o-o-o.

The Portland Public Art Commission, which has the final say-so on what art goes up in public, ruled that the family depicted was white and failed to reflect the diversity of Portland, which is only 91 percent Caucasian in a state that is 97 percent.

Huh?

Portland is not the only place where political correctness has taken precedence over what some would call commonsense.

This reminded me of the time that Admiral Hyman Rickover, on a visit to Boston, told Connie Hurley, the AP's political writer, that he had figured out the ideal Massachusetts politician — "a Catholic married to a Protestant with three children, two of whom are Jewish."

But I digress . . .

When I last looked, Dan Burke was thinking of withdrawing the gift statue, the Portland City Council was looking for an opportunity to overrule the Arts Commission, and some folks were wondering how one determined the race of a bronze statue.

Portland is not the only place where political correctness has taken precedence over what some would call commonsense. In Portland's case, it's art. In San Francisco's case, it's the opportunity to rake in some tourist dollars.

The US Navy wants to give the World War II battleship USS Iowa to the West Coast city as a tourist attraction and was so sure that the gift would be accepted that it had the big ship towed all the way from Rhode Island to a spot just outside the bay.

But the San Francisco Board of Supervisors turned down the offer by a vote of 8-3, noting that the ship would be coming from a military that rejected openly gay men and women and, besides, voters went on the record in 2004 as opposing the war in Iraq.

"I don't think the climate has improved for tying a 10-story warship, or gun, to the waterfront," said Supervisor Geraldo Sandoval.

Haven't they ever heard of Battleship Cove in Fall River, where the USS Massachusetts proved such a smash hit with the visitors that she has been joined by a destroyer, the USS Joseph, and a submarine, the USS Lionfish, as well as two torpedo boats?

And what shall we do with the replica of the Mayflower docked at Plymouth. You know, the one that, as far as I know, had all-straight, all-white passengers and crew who are said by some to have committed genocide on the Indians.

I guess it's which end of the lens you look through.

New math test for Cohasset school system

COMMENTARY

LOU HARVEY

As a veteran of the financial world, the mathematics that has accompanied this year's override debate present a number of problems that befuddle my mind. It would be useful to understand just how the math is expected to work.

The problems arise from the need to increase School expenditures by 7 percent every year. As explained, this is not simply increasing by 7 percent forever, but actually repeating perpetual increases every year. This would amount to 7 percent for year one, 14 percent for year two, 23 percent for year three and so on. This would double the budget in 10 years. I offer the math problems and my failed attempts to solve them in the hope that someone in the community can help.

• Math problem #1: Why do the Schools need a 7percent annual increase when the teachers only get a 2-1/2 percent pay raise?

I tried to solve this problem by arguing that the teachers are not as important as other school activities. I was unable to find any school activity that was more important than teaching so this approach did not work.

I then tried the solution in which the number of teachers was increasing at 7 percent, thus requiring the perpetual 7 percent increases. This may be warranted if the number of children in the school was growing at that rate. This line of reasoning was shattered when I realized that we were not proposing to increase the number of teachers by 7 percent per year.

The problem remains unsolved, what happens to the missing 4-1/2 percent?

• Math problem #2: How does a 2-1/2 percent increase in revenue fund a 7percent increase in expenses?

I first tried to solve this problem by examining both numbers. If the 2-1/2 percent revenue increase is taken from the entire Town and directed to the School System it would still fall short of the escalating rate. It would continue to fall even shorter in future years, as the School budget becomes a larger and larger part of Town expenditures. In other words, the problem gets progressively worse in future years.

Failing to find a solution this way, I tried to find the mathematical answer by changing underlying assumptions. If we assume that the revenue increase will be 7 percent and not 2-1/2 percent then real estate taxes would increase at 7 percent. This means that taxes would double in about 10 years. If on the other hand, we assume that the expenses increased at 2-1/2 percent then the School department would have to limit its growth to the rate of inflation. In other words the School would have to suffer the pain of inflation that everyone else feels.

This problem is also unsolved, what is the source of the annual 4-1/2 percent revenue increase?

• Math problem #3: If $3,700 per year from every household cannot support the Schools at a time of low inflation and low interest rates what would the public school fees be if we had inflation was 10 percent and interest rates at 12 percent?

This problem calls for a look into history, to establish if these high rates are possible. Those of us that can remember the late 1970 might ask, "Are you kidding?" At that time we easily exceeded those numbers so lets get back to the math.

If inflation were to increase from about 3 percent to 10 percent, we would have to increase the proposed rate of growth by over three times to support the Schools under the current structure. That means instead of a 7 percent annual increase the increase would rise to 23 percent annually. In other words, instead of an override of $1.5 million Town officials would be asking for a cool $5 million. In other words, the current budget proposal could mean that taxes would more than double in as few as four years, with no more teachers in the schools.

This problem remains unsolved as well, what are Cohasset residents going to pay in taxes in five years?

Proud of Massachusetts public schools

COMMENTARY

PAUL SCHUBERT

When I hear, "I went to school in Massachusetts." I want that person to be proud of that fact.

I have lived all my life in the Commonwealth, born, raised and publicly educated. The Commonwealth has a long and glorious tradition of public education something, which every person that has ever lived in Massachusetts should be proud. Our schools are models of excellence and this is a testament to its citizens, all who support them. We in Massachusetts do not produce automobiles, or have significant heavy industry, but we educate well. Nationally we are enviable. Regionally we are superb, and locally in Cohasset we meld many aspects of our town and school into an education that makes some of the finest citizens in the country.

The tradition of public schools started here and as guardians of them we have a moral and historical obligation to ensure that they remain the finest in the country. When I hear, "I went to school in Massachusetts." I want that person to be proud of that fact. Boston is the Athens of America, for good reason. It is the democratic and educational cradle of our republic.

The economic argument for supporting the 1.4 override is quite simple. The sheer equity in every house in Cohasset has outstripped almost all investments in the past 10 years. This rise in housing prices has been consistent. If you are a homeowner then the best way to protect your investment is to ensure that buyers are willing to pay for houses in town. Buyers look for very few things, good schools for their children, which ensure future resale of their house in addition location. Cohasset does not have miles of beach as Plymouth, Duxbury or Scituate. Nor does it have a business tax base and infrastructure such as Quincy. We as a town have decided that development is limited, so the business tax base is lower. It means we also are willing to shoulder personally more of the tax burden, so while driving through town the look and feel is of a quaint New England village, and not of 3A at the Fore River Bridge. I want new homeowners to see Cohasset as the place to live. Ensuring superior schools is the keystone of the arch.

In the past year and a half I have attended the Cohasset School Committee meetings. I did so at first to obtain an understanding of the concerns regarding the budget. I had heard concern voiced in town regarding an unmanageable and unsupervised costly school system. The inner workings of this Gordian knot I thought would be difficult to master and understand, but it was clearly described and detailed in a clear and precise manner with line items and projections that were thoughtfully and concisely framed. The numbers are open and available and show the price of running a school system in this town.

I am a business owner with similar problems with costs and expenses. My company is in the service industry it has a similar profile as the school system with 320 employees, a 401K retirement program, subsidized health coverage at 49 percent of cost, and dental health coverage. We pay insurance on ourselves and the business. We struggle with the cost of utilities and supplies. We have payroll costs at 68 percent of our revenues. I can honestly say that in the past 10 years the utility costs and the heath and insurance costs have increased in the range of 4-10 percent for supplies and utilities, to 10-18 percent for heath coverage. This has been steady year to year and has not dipped or changed to a significant amount. This is well above the yearly inflation, largely due to heath care costs and retirement plans.

The school system has a restriction on expansion of costs set by the tax base, which in Cohasset is largely residential and homeowner based. This is further set via the proposition 2-1/2 legal mandate. Cost containment can solve some shortfalls in funding, but when inflation and general costs of doing business exceed the 2.5 percent levy legally allowed then the shortfalls fall on the Town. In Cohasset it is the homeowner and business owner. The entire town faces this each and every year. The town does not have products to sell, save water to Hingham. The school does not produce goods to sell; neither can it increase production, nor find new markets the way a standard business can. The town provides services, and the schools produce educated citizens. There is a cost and it should not be shirked.

The end product of our schools is not finished when the students graduate from Cohasset High School. The end product is the educational experience that molds and shapes the future college freshman who then becomes that engineer, or architect, or police officer who knows the right thing to do when needed, or perhaps, when asked.

I am a public school product. My thoughts of school include my first 286 computer, yes, I do remember it. The more lasting and important lessons were these. Mrs. Miriam Bryans, my first grade teacher, who taught me to add and carry the one, showed me to hold the door for the person behind you even if you are running late; Mr. Trimmer my senior high school English teacher that taught me even Hemmingway faced writer's block; Dr. Brown, my chemistry teacher, who taught me the periodic table, entropy and safe handling of nasty acids; Mr. Sawyer, who explained the difference between a state and a commonwealth in 90 words; and Mrs. Fey and her love of Don Quixote de la Mancha in the native tongue. These are my role models, my lessons of life, all through public school.

I strongly support the override of 1.4 million, for Cohasset, for the schools, for the future. It is the right choice and the only choice.

I hope I am not tilting at windmills, Mrs. Fey.

Bottom line: higher tax base needed

TO THE EDITOR:

My wife and I have lived in Cohasset for nearly 25 years. We have raised three children here, all of whom attended the Cohasset public schools. We have critical needs throughout our town (municipal and schools) that will not be met unless the $1.495 million override figure is passed at both Town Meeting and the ballot box. The schools particularly have gone backward over the last few years — higher class sizes, fewer electives (more study halls), ancient textbooks, etc. We have noticed a difference at the high school from our daughter Kate's experience (Cohasset-2002 graduate) to our son Jon's (Cohasset- 2005 graduate) to our son Mike's current experience (class of 2008).

Our schools cost more to run given the upgraded physical plant. We all have experienced the increases in utility, insurance and other fixed costs that the schools and town must also face. Mandates and assessments from the state and federal governments have increased while state aid has decreased. Out-of-district placement costs for special education have skyrocketed. The bulk of the school committee's budget is dedicated to quality teachers — the lifeblood of any successful school system. The proposed increases in the school budget essentially result from fixed costs like utilities and insurance, the need for an equitable teachers' contract and the clear need for more teachers to educate an ever-increasing school age population. Cohasset cannot afford to have a second rate educational program. Unless we remain committed to excellence, there will be a flight from public education in town for those who can afford it and Cohasset will no longer be viewed as one of the most desirable communities in the Commonwealth. Property values and our sense of community will suffer as a result.

When I looked at the town side of the budget, I could not find any real waste or any programs that were not needed by our citizens. Although there may be some structural issues that exist, they cannot be changed in the short term due to contracts and our current mechanisms for service delivery. The bottom line is that the community needs a higher tax base and unfortunately, an increase in residential property taxes is our only current way to achieve it.

I know there is an anti-tax group out there who will vote no whatever the override number and that there are a few who won't be able to afford a large tax increase. However, we need to make this decision based on what is best for the community as a whole. I believe that the voters will support the critical needs the town seeks to fund at the $1.495 million override number if people truly understand the complete picture. Both our Advisory Committee (6-2) and our Board of Selectmen (3-2) supported the larger override because it is necessary to meet real and pressing needs in the Cohasset community.

Let there be no mistake — services throughout the town will be cut and the educational mission of the schools will suffer at a lower override figure. Absent the larger override, there will be no funding available for the new teachers currently needed to keep our class sizes manageable and to increase the courses available to our students. Absent the larger override, the maintenance of our town physical plant will suffer and library services and services to our seniors will be cut. As a community, we cannot afford to let this happen. I urge you to support the $1.495 million override at Town Meeting and at the ballot box. We are all in this together.

Vanderweil gets poor marks on all-day kindergarten view

TO THE EDITOR:

It is discouraging to hear comments, such as the one made by Gary Vanderweil at a recent selectmen's meeting, that all-day kindergarten is "daycare with education". This is especially troubling when you consider that Massachusetts has been a leader in early childhood education since the late 19th century, operating many of the first organized early education programs in the country. In fact, the first English-speaking public kindergarten in the United States opened in Boston in 1860.

Mr. Vanderweil should talk to any kindergarten teacher about the rigorous training and academic requirements that are associated with becoming a Massachusetts kindergarten teacher. They are not day-care providers. They are educators (very talented educators in the case of Cohasset) and their influence on their students has positive long-term academic benefits

In regards to full-day kindergarten, Mr. Vanderweil should look at the research that has come out over the past 20 years. The overwhelming preponderance of evidence shows that full-day kindergarten programs benefit children, schools, and families. Children participating in full-day kindergarten programs gain academically and socially over peers participating in half days programs. In fact a national, longitudinal study tracking children's early school experiences found that children who attend public full-day classes make greater gains in reading during the year than their half-day counterparts. Similar research has shown that children in full-day programs exhibit more independent learning, classroom involvement and productivity in working with their peers.

A 2004 report by national education expert Jonathan Plucker on the effects of full day vs. half day kindergarten concluded that full-day kindergarten is not just half-day kindergarten with an extra half day of play. Research has shown that children in full-day kindergarten programs receive 40-50 percent more instruction than children enrolled in half-day kindergarten programs. More instructional time in full-day kindergarten allows children opportunities for increased learning activities and strategies such as: group read-aloud, peer tutoring, mixed-ability grouping, and child-initiated activities.

More and more, full-day kindergarten is being recognized as a critical component of a child's education. I would encourage anyone interested in this issue to visit www.earlyeducationforall.org to learn about the most recent research and efforts to bring high-quality early education and full-day kindergarten to every city and town in Massachusetts.

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

	State Funded
COHASSET	10.3%
Benchmark Peer Group	16.3%

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. State aid includes funding from Chapter 70, school building construction, and public transportion aid, but not grants. Other Sources includes district and town funding, federal and state grants, and special and revolving funds.

This chart shows the total amount that the state has contributed to Cohasset's school per pupil in 2004 and how much has been funded by other sources. The table shows the percentage that state aid represents of the total per pupil spending. State aid is based on a variety of factors, some of which take into account 'equity factors' with respect to community's resources. As such, higher income communities tend to get less in state aid than do lower income communities. The chart also shows the same information for Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

HANOVER DEALER SHOCKS COMMUNITY:

PRE-OWNED VEHICLES TO BE SOLD FOR JUST $29 DOWN & $99 MONTH

Area Residents Express Disbelief. Dealer Confirms vehicles will sell for $29 Down To Help Liquidate Acres Of Recent Trade-Ins, Off-Lease, Previous Service Loaners & Executive Demos!

HANOVER, MA - Rob McGee, Dealer Principal of The McGee Family of Dealerships announced plans today for a three-day sales event that will feature pre-owned vehicles for as low as $29* down and $99* per month! "All the recent trade-ins, lease returns, service loaner vehicles and dealer demos from our 2 New car stores in Hanover must be liquidated." This unprecedented 3-Day clearance event is scheduled for this Friday, March 17th thru Sunday, March 19th. The massive sell-off must take place regardless of weather conditions.

McGee offers a simple explanation for this unprecedented sale. "We experienced record sales at our Toyota and Dodge dealerships in Hanover in February. As a result we are now severely overstocked with hundreds of late-model, low mileage trade-ins, most with the remainder of the manufacturers warranties still in effect." He adds, "During this massive sale event we will offer unbelievable discounts on all these pre-owned vehicles and sell many for just $29* down and only $99* per month. The McGee Family of Dealerships is willing to do whatever it takes to get people into the car of their dreams, even if some have had serious credit problems in the past. We've arranged for several local bank representatives to be on-site each day to assist those with past credit issues. We can finance anyone", he states.

He also points out that in most instances their prices may be thousands lower than wholesale auction prices. "Current automotive market conditions indicate that the best values exist in the pre-owned market. The recent surge in new vehicle sales has created a surplus of pre-owned vehicles leading to a rapid decline in the prices of current vehicles. All trades are like-new vehicles. It couldn't be any better for pre-owned vehicle shoppers." Expect to purchase a quality used vehicle at the lowest possible price, including several vehicles, priced as low as $2,988. There will be an enormous selection of vehicles to choose from, including Toyotas, Jeeps, Mazdas, Mercedes-Benz, BMW's, Lexus, Infiniti, Fords, Chevrolets, Dodges, Nissans and many more.

Remember, Interest rates are still at an all time low but are poised to rise in the near future. "Most of all, between our Toyota and Dodge stores, we've got over 2 million dollars worth of inventory- that's over 500 pre-owned cars, trucks, minivans and sport utility vehicles to choose from. It can't get any better for the serious auto buyer."

"February Sales Were Record Breaking. All Trade-Ins Acquired From Our Dodge & Toyota Stores In Hanover Must Now Be Liquidated. Having to Ship These Vehicles To Auctions Across The Region Is A Cost We Wish To Avoid."

Rob McGee, Dealer Principal

For auto shoppers looking for a very low cash price there will be many choices, including a 2000 Ford Explorer XLT 4x4 auto, pwr package, for just $29* down and $99* per month. Sample payments will be clearly marked on all vehicles. All you'll need to do is obtain credit approval, pick a vehicle and a payment. It's that simple.

"All excess trade-in vehicles from our Toyota and Dodge stores in Hanover must be liquidated immediately or shipped to auctions located throughout the Northeast," says McGee.

He cites another example, a 2001 Pontiac Sunfire, auto, pwr package, only 53k miles, for only $29* down and $99* per month. For those auto shoppers are poised to rise in the near basis, so it's critical to come early to have the best chance of getting the vehicle you want.

Those wishing to beat the rush should shop early and take advantage of our extended sale hours over these three days at McGee Pre-Owned which is located directly on Route 53 in Hanover (Exit 13 off Route 3 - 1 Mile South of the Hanover Mall).

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For the School Committee candidates: The higher override figure includes $1.1 million for the schools but is $200,000 less than what the schools asked for, so something has to go. Would the school's share of the cost of a school resource officer be on your priority list to remain in the budget? Why or why not?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Steve Fusco

This is a difficult question given the recent threats against the school and our resource constraints. After all, our children's safety has to be the highest priority. If students don't feel safe, focusing on their studies is nearly impossible. According to the Center for Prevention of School Violence, the primary responsibilities of the School Resources Officer in the schools are:

- Law enforcement officer; law-related counselor and law-related education teacher
- Maintain a close relationship with principals, parents, students, and members of the community.

Research suggests having an SRO increases awareness of law enforcement and acts as a deterrent for crime in and around schools. We want our children to be and feel safe, but we must be creative about how we solve these problems. If we cannot get support for funding a full-time SRO, I would propose in depth SRO training for appropriate personnel inside the schools and in the Cohasset police department. Training would be a fraction of the cost of hiring a full-time resource while providing some of the tools and techniques of the position. I would also hope the town and the schools will pursue all available State and Federal SRO program funding and grants.

We need to be creative in solving these problems. In the business world we request an annual budget for each project, rarely get everything we ask for, and have to make contingency plans based on current business priorities and staffing levels. As I have said in the past, we cannot plan on the override(s) passing and must begin to prioritize in advance. Before too long we may be discussing how we can live without other proposed resources and funding. Let's continue to seek the funds we truly need while at the same time making sure we are well prepared for either scenario.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Lee Jenkins

Children need a safe and secure environment in which to learn and it would certainly be wonderful to have a school resource officer. Unfortunately, there isn't enough line-item detail in the school budget that's been made public to determine what we could trade-off to keep this $25,000 position, so it's hard to give a definitive answer.

In general, to answer all budget questions, I would apply my proposed action plan, "Progress Through Priorities:"

- Focus resources in the classroom
- Provide a strong foundation in areas of study essential to our students' success
- Return Cohasset to one of the top school districts in the state
- Tame the growth of non-classroom positions
- Create annual budgets with Proposition 2-1/2 in mind while being aware of the potential for deficits in the current budget and enacting immediate solutions

On its face, the position of school resources officer does not rank high within these priorities.

The Benchmark Study, the Curriculum Renewal Report, and the School Budget Investigation Committee, provide additional guidance.

The Benchmark Study shows we spend more per pupil than our peer schools (9 staff members per 100 students while peer schools average 8.5) with the majority of this extra staff outside the classroom. The cost/role of a school resources officer would put us further out of step with our peer schools.

Neither the Curriculum Renewal Committee Report, which indicates areas of concern from parents, teachers and the community, nor the Report of the School Budget Investigation Committee call for a resource officer.

But remember, I would apply "Progress Through Priorities" to all line items behind the proposed school budget. By discovering areas in which we can reallocate funds and then prioritizing needs, we can make these difficult decisions confident the results will best benefit our students.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Rick Flynn

The school resource officer is a great example of the municipal side and the school side teaming up for a common goal while attaining cost efficiency. The town realizes the ability to save Police Dept. overtime costs while the School Dept. gains a necessary officer to bridge the gap between students, administration and parents in an effort to diffuse difficult situations, be more inclusive of students and give the school community an added dimension of safety.

Unfortunately, we don't know exactly where all the budgets will end up at this point. We are headed into Town Meeting with an uncertain outcome. My hope is that Town Meeting votes to support the higher override figure. After that we need to get through the Override Election on May 6. I will say that I am in strong support of passage of the higher override number.

When the decision was made by the Advisory Board to recommend a lower override figure, from $1.9M to $1.495M, there was no consultation with the School department. My hope is that we can commit as many resources as possible to the classroom. I believe the most important priority at this point in to focus on reducing class sizes, adding additional electives at the High School and replacing dated textbooks. The classroom is where resources are most needed and these resources cost money. Contrary to what is being stated elsewhere, the School Department is not in a position where reallocation of resources will bring more resources into the classroom.

If, when the budget process is complete, I feel that enough progress has been made addressing classroom needs, I will recommend that we reassess the our ability to fund the School Department's share of the resource officer which I feel is a worthwhile investment.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMAN

For the Selectman candidates: Two sitting selectmen are skeptical about the need for a school resource officer and whether that position could make a difference in terms of preventing more threats at the school or reducing police overtime. What's your opinion?

SELECTMAN/ Ted Carr

A school resources officer provides significant benefits with little incremental cost. It is the first step in ensuring a safe learning environment, formalizes an existing agreement between the schools and the town police force, and saves in overtime costs. Thus, it seems academic to question the value of having a police official at the school.

Having a school officer is part of the first step in a comprehensive school safety plan, according to the U.S. Departments of Education and Justice. The Children's Defense Fund also advocates collaborative efforts with law enforcement to lower incidents of violence at schools (see: Keeping Children Safe in School: A Resource for States). Consequently, having a close working relationship with the Cohasset Police Department is critical to our school safety.

Our public schools already have a Memorandum of Understanding with the Chief of Police that agrees to establish an effective line of communication between the school and police department. Having an officer on site supports this agreement and creates a familiar person to whom students and teachers can report safety issues. Establishing an officer as a member of the school community builds trust and promotes communication.

The incremental cost of having a school officer is minimal. Our contract with the Police Department includes a minimum three-man requirement, meaning three officers must be on duty at one time. However, the low number of officers on payroll means that our full-time officers must work overtime to meet the three-man requirement – an estimated $320,000 in police overtime last year. A new officer on the payroll would count towards our minimum-man requirement and offset high over-time costs. The new position also is flexible enough to address non-school related law enforcement needs.

There is minimal incremental cost to have a school officer and substantial benefits. Therefore, I wholeheartedly support a school resources officer.

For further reference, a full list of organizations dealing with School Violence can be found at http://www.lib.msu.edu/harris23/crimjust/school.htm

SELECTMAN/ Roger Hill

Yes, I think an officer at the school would be a great asset to the town for four reasons:

1. It gives the school children an opportunity to identify and voice their fears. The past events have created controversy and the concern with many youngsters has not entirely been identified nor has the community been able to resolve the distress that exists with success. Implementation of security would alleviate anxiety that has developed from the past threats to the school and would offer an environment that is more conducive to learning for all students.

2. The decision to use an officer at the school would foster relations with the youth as well as the community as a whole. The availability of a police officer, who will ideally stand as a role model and therefore will be able to provide the kind of information that, will disperse misperceptions. In light of the past threats, it would be sensible that the police officer will provide education on the varieties of violence and the root causes of the dysfunction that promotes violence.

3. As a cost saving measure the officer can serve as the third person towards "the three man minimum manning" issue that is in the contract. They will count as the third person on duty, and if an emergency arises they can still leave the school to respond.

4. Possibly hearing something from a student long before a situation gets out of hand, will allow the officer ample time to take the appropriate action.

From all of the input gathered from Chief Hussey, and some of the other officers I have talked to, they are all in support of this position. I am in total support of this position and would like to see it implemented as soon as possible.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For school committee candidates: Is block scheduling at the high school all it's cut out to be and what impact, if any, does it have on the availability of electives?

For selectman candidates: Has the SMROD helped ease the affordable housing problem for Cohasset senior citizens, as hoped, or instead provided a glut of housing for wealthy baby-boomers?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on Saturday, April 8 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 7 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. Voting absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open
- Physical disability
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 8 to be counted.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disabilities. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

History lesson on school committees

COMMENTARY

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

In April, I will finish my second year on the School Committee, a job which I campaigned vigorously to have and a job I feel grateful to have been chosen to do.

I have learned a lot over the past two years. I feel it is important for you to know a little of the history of school committees so that you can better understand, as I do, my role as a School Committee member.

In the early days of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and for almost 200 years thereafter — Public Elementary and Secondary Education was the responsibility of each community's Board of Selectmen. However, in 1826, the Massachusetts Legislature — "citing the importance of ensuring public educational opportunities for all its children" — provided for a committee whose sole duty would be to oversee "Those preparing the youth of the community to take their places as educated and responsible citizens."

Our country is the only one where the responsibility for education is entrusted to the citizens of each community — via appointed or elected School Committee. The Constitution gives jurisdiction over public education to the individual States and they in turn, delegate this jurisdiction to the local officials. One of the primary reasons for this system is that it allows educational policies to reflect our local needs and goals.

With this brief history, I hope you can appreciate how seriously I take my position as a member of the School Committee and know that I dedicate myself to the responsibilities that I have been elected to do. I respect the history and very important role the School Committee plays in the development of our children's education.

So it is with this in mind that I take offense to the allegations of mismanagement poor forecasting, and a lack of communication with other elected officials, boards or the public during this budget process. There is absolutely no mismanagement going on in the schools!

Actually, if one takes the time to view the proposed 2007 budget, they would see for the first time, actual costs for 2004 and 2005 plus the present budget for 2006 and what we need for 2007 to move us forward. The budget is detailed like never before. The town requested a transparent budget process and according to Webster, transparency is "the state or quality of being transparent, easy to detect or perceive". The 2007 budget process started back in December in open and public meetings. Now that the School Committee has certified the budget figures, there are some critics that don't like what they see. But what they see is not the result of a faulty process. Perhaps if these same critics saw it fit to attend any of the budget meetings leading up to the certified numbers, they would have a better appreciation of the process, efforts and approach that produced those numbers. Maybe that would be asking too much from some.

Utilities seem to the "hot" topic this year. Some like to use this as an example of faulty planning or fiscal mismanagement. Cohasset schools are part of a collaborative formed to purchase fuel. As a member of the Shore Educational Collaborative, we realize a small savings versus purchasing fuel on our own. The utility cost projections that have been provided to our Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee are based on: past usage, contractual costs, and projected usage provided by an independent, third party energy consultant. If someone can look at this approach we used and cite this as a faulty process, then they should stand-up and explain how they approach it. The fact is our utility number has grown, not unlike our own personal utility costs. I think there are those who don't like or can't accept the resulting utility number so they unfairly and misleadingly attack the schools budget process. We cannot knowingly under-fund a line item to pacify some who do not want to face the reality of rising energy costs. It would be unethical to knowingly underfund a budget line item.

I would recommend that those in doubt of the needs of our schools review the proposed 2007 budget. Make the effort to learn the facts. You will see that it was built with a goal to "maintain the overall strength of our school system while recognizing continued local and general economic challenges." Our Superintendent, Dr. Walsh, was instructed to build a responsible budget and that has been done. We are lucky as a community to have a Superintendent that listens and responds to the needs of the community; while keeping focused on delivering the academic excellence we as a community say we want and our children deserve.

As Mr. Simms use to say: "An educated consumer is our best customer."

Adrienne MacCarthy, a member of the School Committee, lives at 85 Doane St.

mantra repeating "spring is fertilizer time" the homeowner applies additional chemical stimuli to a lawn already growing as fast as it can responding to light, warmth and rainfall. The plain facts are that lawns and landscape plants only absorb so much and have taken most nutrients they can use by the end of fall before the winter. Only a small percentage of spring applications have any enduring effect and the spring rains dilute, dissolve and carry off the excess chemicals applied. And where do you think all this excess 'stuff' goes?.... To the lowest place it can – a harbor or local pond.

Cohasset is unique and frankly blessed and cursed in its situation. Based on some shrewd investments over 30 years ago and due to diligent management of late it has a large and relatively secure water supply. It also has a lot of bedrock (no surprise to anyone who has walked Whitney Woods or Wheelwright Park). This means rainfall and other excess water has few places in the ground to go but moves quickly and efficiently to our ponds or harbor. One of those ponds is our drinking water and our harbor is the crown jewel of Cohasset. Anyone see a problem here?

Runoff, in particular, storm water runoff is particularly pernicious in our geologic system because it is contaminated with everything it contacts, septic wastes, animal materials, road oils and petroleum residues and lawn chemicals. Storm water runoff, highest in the Spring, coincident with the spring lawn chemical application phenomena, is a major source of contamination and degradation to the receiving waters (e.g. Lily Pond; Cohasset Harbor). Steve Bobo, a member of Cohasset Board of Health, has written a number of eloquent articles describing the impacts resulting from this contaminant source.

All I am asking is for my fellow residents to consider alternatives before signing those new contacts for another year of chemicals, is that golf course perfect lawn worth the potential impact to your own drinking water and our harbor? Change is coming and its agent is us. Maybe we ought to take this year off.

Consider ecologically sound and sustainable practices in lawn care. The website www.greenscapes.org provides localized information, sources, links and actions that can help break your lawn's chemical addiction.

Jim Kinch is a member of the Cohasset Water Resource Protection Committee.

CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team's season ended recently with the final meet of the season being the All-League meet, in which the team scored its highest all-around score of the year.

Many of the gymnasts and coach Amy Maree said they believed that the last meet was the highlight of the season, with high scores on all events and captain Erin Kelly obtaining two medals, placing fifth on vault and in the all-around competition.

With a score of 128.6, the team successfully ended a season filled with tough competition and strong opponents. Norwell junior Melissa Murphy said her most memorable moment was the All-League meet.

"The team really came together for the end of the season and the outcome of the meet showed how much we enjoyed the season and competing together," she said.

Throughout the season, Murphy competed on two or three events in every meet, excelling in bars, beam and floor.

Another Norwell junior, Jamie Nichols, felt that the All-League meet was a highlight of the season. Nichols added that the team will have some big shoes to fill next year in many respects.

"It will be hard to lose all of the seniors next year, not only because of their strong talent, but

College laxers making waves

Cohasset High School graduate (Class of '04) Curtis Kahn had four goals and two assists in Trinity College's season-opening 12-9 over Drew University on Saturday, leading a parade of Cohasset-bred lacrosse players having an impact on the college landscape so far this season.

Kahn, the high scorer a year ago for Trinity, a member of NESCAC, faced former teammate Nick Spirito, who is a captain and starting defenseman at Western Connecticut State University, this past Wednesday.

Other Cohasset laxers on the field this season include St. Joseph's University midfielder and face-off specialist Ben Kinch, St. Michael's College senior midfielder and captain Eric Libby and starting freshman attackman Jake Previte, Roanoke College senior attackman Adam Leahy, Connecticut College starting defenseman Tom Anderson, face-off specialist and defensive midfielder Robert Hickey of Widener University, Ursinus College midfielder Matt Davis, Johnson State goalie Evan Pestone and Wentworth Institute sophomore goaltender Nick Murphy.

Also starring in the collegiate ranks is nationally-ranked Lynchburg College goalie Garrett Curran, son of CHS coach Stew Curran and a product of the Cohasset youth lacrosse program.

TOSSING BATTING PRACTICE

NICK FRENCH

Take a good look at your high school tournament brackets and you'll find a common theme - a dominance of parochial schools across the board.

The debate over private schools is always a hot button issue during tournament time, as public schools with higher seeds and better records are often sent home with a loss. The high school hockey tournament usually evokes the most elicit reaction because of the dominance of private schools.

Catholic Memorial is the most notable, having won 16 state titles in 20 years and 12 of the 15 Super-8 tournaments. But since the inception of the Super-8, no public school has ever won the tournament and its been 13 years since one reached the finals.

But I think hockey has it right. Aside from the Super-8 there are

Lady hoopsters look back on great year

Diehard Skipper fans can put away their cowbells and foam fingers. But the memories of the 2005-06 Cohasset girls basketball season will stay in our minds for many years to come.

Yes, the season came to an exciting but disappointing close on Monday, March 6 in a heartbreaking one-point loss to the Mustangs of Marian High School.

After beating Cohasset, the Mustangs subsequently went on to win the Division 4 state championship. They soundly beat Harwich (67-58) in Brockton and captured the title versus Mt. Alvernia (54-44) at the TD Banknorth Garden last Monday.

So what does this chain of events tell us? Of all the teams Marian faced on the way to the state championship, Cohasset gave the Mustangs the biggest scare.

Of all the teams Marian faced on the way to the state championship, Cohasset gave the Mustangs the biggest scare.

Who would have thought the season would play out in such an exciting way?

Recall the first week of hoop action back in December. Some Cohasset fans couldn't believe how head coach John Levangie stacked up the starting lineup with so many freshmen.

On top of this unusual mix of players, fans witnessed a struggling team getting off to a rocky start. Did Levangie make a big error or uncover talent that no one else could see in the early days of the season?

Something magical happened at the Holiday Tournament. The girls played decisively in their match-up against Sacred Heart. A spark went off and the offensive and defensive cylinders kept pumping strong for the rest of the season.

"The Sacred Heart game proved to be the turning point in the season," explained Levangie. "The girls really gained confidence and momentum. From here, their work ethic and attitude took over."

Cohasset's Carly Salerno (30) is one of several underclassmen looking to make the Lady Skippers even better in 2006-07.

Let's take the defense as a case in point. They practiced hours on their defensive patterns and their discipline paid off big time. The team's hallmark press created, in Levangie's words, "the best defense in the division, if not in the entire state." As the saying goes 'defense wins championships.'

Of course, somebody had to put some points up on the board. This year, that somebody was the whole team.

Last year's play consisted of a one woman offensive show in the name of Casey Anderson. She thought nothing of putting up 25 points per game.

This year the Skippers shared the wealth offensively speaking. The result? The team traveled further down the tournament road this season. In postseason play Cohasset won two very decisive victories before losing the nail-biter to Marian. One of those two victories included the dropping of second-seeded Cathedral.

Freshman Gabriella Flibotte frequently led the pack in the points column. But many others followed close behind in their scoring. Everyone got in on the action to finish off the regular season with a 13-7 record. Overall, they turned in a 15-8 performance.

Flibotte's offensive charge, coupled with freshmen Sam Lehr's rebounding, certainly played a major role in the success of this team. When it comes to picking a team, Levangie obviously knows what he is doing.

But let's not forget the captains. Levangie described the leadership of Chelsea Grossman, Katie James, and Mia Lieb-Lappen as "invaluable." He went on to say, "They really made this a very cohesive team."

The rest of the underclassmen bridged the gap between the senior experience and freshmen prodigies. Juniors Lacey Richardson, Haley Haracz, and sophomore Anna Haggerty all saw considerable playing time. They also contributed to the scoring effort in an important way.

"We really made the best out of what we had," explained Lieb-Lappen. "We didn't let injuries or lack of experience hold us back. I think we really proved a point that we can consistently match any teams in our league."

Looking ahead to next year, Levangie plans to coach again. Also, assistants Jack Levangie and Kay Long will most likely return.

In terms of a roster, Levangie claims it's still too early to determine who will fill the big shoes of departing seniors Grossman, James, and Lieb-Lappen.

However, we can definitely expect some great things out of this very young team. Could another playoff berth be in store? How about a league title (knock on wood)? The story will be continued next year.

A separate solution for tournaments

three divisions of high school hockey where teams have an opportunity to be a champion. The issue in my mind comes in the lower divisions in other sports.

Asking smaller public schools to compete against parochial schools is unfair.

Parochial schools hold advantages in certain sports. In hockey this season, all five members of the Catholic Conference made the state tournament. The other three teams, St. John's Prep, Malden Catholic, and Xaverian all made the semifinals, and two of them knocked off the top seed to get there.

Archbishop Williams is a Division 3 basketball school and a Division 1 hockey school, yet the Bishops' basketball team rolled its way to the sectional title. I'm aware of the opting up rule, but the simple fact remains that the Bishops are a strong enough school to compete with bigger schools than the ones they currently are competing with.

Basketball doesn't get the attention of hockey, but it's still dominated by parochial schools. Part of the reason for the lack of attention is the lack of a truly dominant school instead its a group of schools.

Catholic Memorial won Division 2 South last year, and as a 16 seed nearly took out top-seeded Duxbury this season. The Knights should be competing in Division 1, as all the other Catholic Conference schools do. BC High was a semifinal participant this season, before falling to another school that has a distinct advantage as well in Madison Park.

On the girls side, there is no equivalent to BC High or CM as far as the sheer size of the enrollment, but Cardinal Spellman is becoming the dominant athletic school for girls. There are 100 more girls than boys at the school. The Cardinals boast a dominant softball team, and a girls' basketball team that is playing for the Division 3 state title on Saturday.

Although they have yet to win the title, this doesn't detract from the fact they are the team nobody wants to play. The team's roster this year boasts girls from 12 different towns, from Stoughton to Dennis and everywhere in between, except for Brockton, the city the school is located in. How is that not a competitive advantage?

They have rolled through top-seeded Rockland and Westwood, both traditional powerhouse programs who own state titles in this century, as well as Scituate and than Case in the sectional final.

In Massachusetts, there will probably never be a "Catholics-only" tournament, and I think asking for one is unfair. The state of New York has one and that is the biggest argument put forth by the public schools, but New York is also a much larger state with more member institutions than the MIAA. A separate tournament with different divisions would simply be an extension of the regular season, like college basketball conference tournaments.

The Catholic Conference would be Division 1 and the Catholic Central League would be Division 2. So a sectional title winner would be most likely the league champion, and at that only a champion of four or five teams, only needing to win two games to raise a banner.

I think there is only one truly amicable solution to the situation: take the Super-8 format to other sports. Basketball, baseball, softball, and soccer would all be perfect for this. Football is a different animal that has to be dealt with as well, but in the interest of putting on my MIAA thinking cap I am adopting their mantra of dealing with the issue when it arises.

Division 1A would be for all parochial schools regardless of size. If you win 50 percent of your games you are in the post-season.

The public schools, before each season, can declare whether or not they want to be considered for Division 1A tournament play (the Super-8 is really just Division 1A).

There will be no limit to the amount of teams in the bracket, the number will consist of however many teams qualify, plus four to six public schools, the amount of which can be determined at the beginning of the season when teams declare their intentions.

An interesting aspect to this would be seeing public schools deciding what to do, much like when teams play Big Three, Old Colony, or Cape League teams they have to declare in the beginning of the season as to whether or not the games will count towards their record.

It would be interesting to see which schools would prefer to go home with their state champions jackets knowing they chose not to compete against the best possible competition.

I realize there is a competitive disadvantage for Archbishop Williams to be competing with BC High, but now the shoe would be on the other foot, and it would be interesting to see how the smaller private schools react to this situation.

The one thing I would be a proponent of if this idea were to go forward is recruiting. If we're going to lump all the parochial schools in together, they should be allowed to recruit openly. The rumors and the innuendoes from the public schools regarding recruiting would stop, and they could no longer gripe about losing kids to teams they have to play, because they don't have to if they don't want to.

The smaller schools would then have a chance to compete with the big boys. Successful coaches will always find a way to compete regardless of the size of the schools. Plus a student may choose a private school closer to home because they are all playing the same competition anyway.

It would then be up to the individual school to determine how much it values athletic success. The MIAA could also make it more difficult for kids to transfer back to public schools because the hardship waiver would be moot if athletes were getting scholarships.

The MIAA wants a uniform policy for all sports, but I think the best way to go is to get officials to specialize in specific sports, and draw up parameters that they see fit for each individual sport. At the very least, do things differently gender wise, and take into account the different situations.

If nothing else, a Super-8 type tournament in all sports would create plenty of buzz and interest, much like it does for hockey and football. This would of course translate to more gate receipts.

Alas, it probably makes too much sense to ever get done.

also because of how close the whole team was," she said.

There were four seniors on the team: Norwell's CJ Himberg and Erin Kelly, and Cohasset's Kate Carpenter and Lisa Spirito, all of whom were captains of the team and prominent competitors throughout the season. Kelly and Spirito competed all-around in most meets, both obtaining between 28 and 33 for final scores in all of the meets.

As the team entered the season in the Cranberry Conference - which included previous state champions Barnstable - the competition looked tough, and it proved to be so. Although Coh-Noh had to face extremely strong teams such as Barnstable and Bridgewater-Raynham, the gymnasts competed their hardest and most of the competitors obtained noteworthy scores in the high 7's and 8's.

All in all, the season went well for the Coh-Noh gymnasts, with additional pleasure in the outcome of the All-League meet. Although the team will lose strong competitors as the four seniors graduate high school, the remaining athletes are confident and look strong for next season.

Eagles ready for Super-8 semis

By Ryan Holt
CORRESPONDENT

For the second time in three years, the BC High hockey team has advanced out of pool play and into the single-elimination semi-finals of the Super Eight.

Last Friday night in Lowell the Eagles jumped out to an early 3-0 lead and hung on to defeat the Arlington Catholic Cougars 4-3. The win solidified the Eagles as the top seed in Pool B and has set them up for a showdown against the best public school in the state, Medford.

The Eagles wasted no time in the first as they got talented goals from John Heffernan, Mike Falvey, and Jeff Sullivan. Falvey scored first as he took a face-off win from senior Brendan Mulcahy and beat the Cougar goaltender stick side. Heffernan scored minutes later on a sniping wrist shot over the right shoulder of the goalie.

The third goal was set up by senior captain Joe Capuano when he streaked down the left-hand side and mustered a shot on net. The goalie made the initial save but Sullivan was there to collect the rebound and give the Eagles the 3-0 advantage at the break.

After AC cut the lead to 3-1 midway through the second on a

Signs of spring

As the weather warms up (sort of), the beginning of the spring sports season is right around the corner. Spring previews will begin in the March 31 edition of the Mariner.

On this page are a few images from last spring's season.

Lindsay Durkin and her girls lacrosse teammates will be aiming for a return to the state tournament. The program has a new coach this year in Chuck Jaffe, a long-time coach and administrator in the town's youth lacrosse system.

The boys lacrosse team, with the help of talented attacker Mike Grimm (24), made it to the Division 3 championship game last season.

shot that junior goalie and Pembroke native Mark Donovan never got a good look at, senior Jay Driscoll found fellow senior Kyle Dillon who buried a one-timer from the left face-off dot. BC High survived two AC goals in the third period and hung to defeat the Cougars 4-3.

Although Arlington Catholic lost they advanced due to the tiebreaker with Duxbury but will have the formidable task of taking on top-ranked Catholic Memorial in the semis. BC High will play the second game, this Thursday night at 8 p.m. Both games are on the campus of Boston University at Walter Brown Arena, site of BC High's last semi-final win two years ago against Waltham.

Medford comes in having only lost two games all season but those two games were their last two. The first, in overtime, against Austin Prep and then in the final round of pool play against Catholic Memorial. It looks to be the typical public-private school game Thursday night.

The other half of BC High's strong winter season came to end last week as the basketball team fell to Madison Park in the semi-finals of the south sectional. Close throughout, the Eagles fell short in the end 75-72.

Sophomore Tim McKinney's pair of free throws gave the Eagles a four-point lead with four minutes left but Madison Park responded and tied the game with a minute to play. They took the lead with 20 seconds left and the Eagles missed an opportunity to tie the game when Nick McLaughlin's floater hit the rim and the ball deflected out of bounds off the Eagles.

After a free throw made the deficit three with 5 seconds to play, senior captain Jovan Robinson went the length of the court but his NBA-range running three back-rimmed and the Eagles were eliminated.

"We had a strong season and had some big wins but it could have been a lot better," said Robinson, who finished his career at BC High with a 20-point performance. "They just did the little things better tonight, but we still played our hearts out."

Robinson will attend Canisius next year and will to be a force for the Golden Griffins in the future. Also departing from Morrissey Boulevard are Ndubuisi Okreke, Kenney Victor, Brendan Carter, John "JP" Cotton, and Chris Muise.

While it will be difficult to replace this strong senior class, the 18-4 and Catholic Conference champion Eagles return talented point guard Chris Hurley, sharpshooters Tim McKinney and Nick McLaughlin, along with big men Jake O'Brien, Nick Schmeimann, and Andrew Yanulis. With returning players like that, the Eagles should find themselves back in the same position next year.

Our schools should be 'second to none'

COMMENTARY

JOHN SEEL

Good schools are finally not about buildings, but people. Great teachers are what make the difference in the classroom as study after study has shown.

For years my wife and I have longed to live in Boston. Its beauty, history, and collective intelligence were strong incentives to leave Dallas, Texas. After a top to bottom tour of the South Shore, my wife said decisively, "I choose Cohasset." As the new kid on the block, we have read the Mariner with interest and amusement.

The lively civic debate over the state of the Cohasset public schools has filled the pages of the paper for the last nine months. On one side of the debate are those who decry increasing costs and chronic referendums. They want fiscal responsibility and budgetary accountability. No one wants to be constantly writing the equivalent of blank checks to what was recently referred to as a runaway train. This is an important point of view and represents a growing skepticism about governmental agencies and the bureaucracies they spawn.

On the other side of the debate are those school administrators who live with increasing costs and teachers who struggle to be paid a living wage. Good schools are finally not about buildings, but people. Great teachers are what make the difference in the classroom as study after study has shown. Schools are a people-intensive business. There is no way around it. Put simply, you get what you pay for.

I have little to add to this debate, except to remind my friends and fellow residents of Cohasset that we must not think about our schools as consumers, but as citizens. My children are grown. I've never set foot in one of our illustrious schools. But this much I know, "public interest" is not "private interest" writ large. Behind many of the complex political, economic, and educational debates about our school budget is this unquestioned assumption. What obligations do I have as a citizen to the community in which I live? The dominant economic viewpoint animating most Americans today doesn't fit well with either the Democratic or Republican vision of America — it is somewhere in between.

Most Americans are fiscal conservatives and social liberals. They want control over their own money and lives. We have in America a weakening sense of our individual obligation to our neighbor. We do not see our taxes as public money given for a public rationale that may or may not have any direct impact on my own life. No, we tend to see our public taxes in the same light as our private contributions. My money, my choice. But this kind of market rationale is at odds with the republican character of our country. The American republic is not a popular democracy, as advocated by those who would make policy by instant Internet surveys, but a representative democracy, where citizen representatives mediate individual interests with that of the common good. As champions of individual autonomy, we are temperamentally reluctant to concede authority to others — particularly when it comes to my money and my children. Cohasset residents need to remember that Cain's defensive retort "Am I my brother's keeper?" is to be answered in the affirmative. "Yes, you are." To this end, strong public schools are a collective good even if I have no personal benefit.

Public schools in the fragmented South Shore compete directly with other neighboring towns. This will only increase when the commuter rail to Boston is completed. I want our public schools to be second to none not simply because our children deserve nothing less, but because our civic mindedness calls us to such an ideal. The two sides in the debate need to build trust: "Tell me what our school's need, but give the citizens an accurate budget." "We will give what school's need, but administrators and teachers must be held accountability to deliver a measurably outstanding educational product." We want to be great, but we don't want to be irresponsible. On this I think both sides can agree. My dream is that other young families will drive down Route 3A and choose Cohasset because of one reason…its schools are in fact second to none because its citizens are second to none.

Overrides are about the entire town

COMMENTARY

ELAINE BRESLOW

I read last week's Mariner with great interest and admittedly much sadness regarding the deficits plaguing most of our town department budgets.

What do the recent elections in Haiti and the Mariner's ongoing coverage of budget articles have to do with what our community is currently grappling with? Surprisingly more than one would think.

On Feb. 7, tens of thousands of Haitians rose before dawn, walked at times well over four miles and then stood in half-mile lines in order to cast a vote in their long awaited presidential elections. In a country beset by violence and corruption, where kidnappings are rampant even during daylight hours, people voted by candlelight even after dark. The illiteracy of many voters and poll workers further complicated and frustrated the process, however, despite the escalating violence and protests people voted!

I read last week's Mariner with great interest and admittedly much sadness regarding the deficits plaguing most of our town department budgets. I could not help but notice one patent certainty: these overrides are not about school budgets versus town budgets. These overrides are about our town, our citizenry making a moral decision that it is of the opinion that it would be shameful if we all did not support funding to provide:

- Cohasset Elder Affairs with a Volunteer Coordinator to help schedule the volunteers necessary to provide our seniors with much needed assistance (I am certain I need not point out the absurd irony of eliminating a position that actually helps staff CEA at no cost to taxpayers),
- to support funding for our police and fire departments to staff at safe levels so that when a crisis arises we are prepared
- to staff our library so that it can effectively maintain our growing circulation and take care of custodial responsibilities,
- and yes, to support funding so that our schools are proactively maintained, teachers are fairly compensated, our students provided with a much needed competitive curriculum in our increasingly "flat" world and commitment that those who follow us, as those who have come before, will be afforded superlative opportunities that Cohasset has had the privilege to provide.

It is tempting to delude ourselves by thinking, "I don't really use that service so I don't want to pay for it." Imagine if I filed for tax abatement because I don't drive on Sohier Street very often and thought — why should I pay to have that road shoveled or paved? You see my point.

We have a very real responsibility to each other that includes conscientious management as well as advocating on behalf of our town on state and federal levels and pursuing non traditional revenue generating avenues. I am sure we have in our midst the wisdom and expertise of those who are well versed in grant writing for example. We need you!

So whether you do or do not agree with the content of my observations, and here is the tie in with Haiti, Participate! Think about what is important to you; gather as much information as you can regarding our town's collective budget and then ask yourself, do these services matter to you — if so, I would respectfully assert that while no one likes taxes they are necessary for the maintenance and responsible growth of our town as a collective entirety. Act — show up to Town Meeting on April 1st and cast your vote for the sake of all of us when it comes time to Invest in Cohasset.

Teen Garage renovations slated

The Cohasset Teen Garage will be closed for renovations starting Monday, March 13, through late May.

The Teen Garage serves youngsters grades six and over and is located in the Town's old Highway Garage off Main Street, Cohasset.

During the late 1990's the Highway Department moved to its new facility and the Town gave the old Garage to the Youth Resources Committee for a Teen Center.

No funds were appropriated at that time, however, via a hard working committee and generosity of numerous residents and business/civic organizations, coupled with work performed by the Norfolk County Sheriffs Department of Corrections, the old facility was transformed into the Teen Garage.

After eight years of successful operation, the Garage will be undergoing renovations during the next 10 weeks, re-opening either late May or early June.

Summer camp program at Our World

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St., Cohasset, will offer summer camp during June, July and August. The schedule is as follows.

Preschool and toddler programs – four weeks of camp for children ages 3-5 held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Themes are:

Plants I, Bugs and Water and Plants II. Sign up for one week, two weeks or all four weeks.

For ages 4-6 – July 17, 31 and Aug. 14 with the same themes brought down to this age level. Camps take place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For ages 7-10 – July 10, Masks of the World; July 24, Environmental Explorations; and Aug. 7, Native Americans. For this age group, camp takes place 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Space is limited to 12 children per session. Call 781-383-3198 for information and to sign up.

Museum hours are Wednesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. This month's featured culture is Greece, and there will be costumes and artifacts on display.

Town set to schedule special election for override main head

Meeting recommendation, which it is required to do for all Warrant articles. It unanimously voted 8-0 to recommend passing the budget which does not require an override, it voted 8-0 to recommend the $725,000 figure, and voted 6-2 in favor of recommending the $1.495 million. Members Merle Brown and Sam Wakeman cast the two no votes.

Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law passed by Massachusetts voters in 1980 which limits the amount a town can raise its property taxes each year to 2-1/2 percent more than was raised the year before, plus taxes that will be paid from new construction and substantial renovations to property.

The law provides a mechanism for a city or town, with approval from its voters, to override the tax cap and increase property taxes above the 2-1/2 percent to generate more revenue. Since 1988, Cohasset has passed 28 overrides.

Passing an override is a two-step process. It must first be approved at Town Meeting, followed by approval at a Town Election. Town Manager Bill Griffin said at Town Meeting, there will be one budget motion which asks voters to consider three different budget scenarios.

Voters will first be asked to approve a budget which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 and does not require an override. Secondly, voters will be asked if they would like to approve an additional $725,000 for supplemental requests, subject to the passage of an override vote at the ballot box. Thirdly, voters will be asked if they would like to approve allocating $1.495 million for supplemental requests, subject to the passage of an override. Approving both override figures ensures they are both put on the special election ballot, as an override needs both Town Meeting and ballot box approval to take effect.

The budget will be presented with three columns of figures. Column one will have the budget which stays within Prop. 2-1/2, next to it will be column two which details the additional items which will be funded if $725,000 is allocated, and column three will detail the items which could be funded with $1.495 million. Griffin noted the $1.495 million includes all items which would be funded with the $725,000, plus $770,000 in additional requests. Passing both override figures does not mean the town receives $725,000 in requests plus $1.495 million, for a total of $2,220,000, it means voters have a choice to go for either the higher or lower level of funding.

After Town Meeting, the override question will be posed again to voters at the ballot box during a special election likely on May 6. Voters will be asked to support an override figure or figures based on what passes at Town Meeting. It is up to the Board of Selectmen to place an override question on the ballot.

Voters can cast a yes or no vote for both override questions, one question, or neither question. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, if both overrides pass, the larger override would take effect even if won by fewer votes.

Griffin explained any question is approved if a majority votes yes. If both questions are approved by a majority vote, the question with the higher dollar amount wins, regardless of the number of votes taken. For example, if 1,000 people vote for the $1.495 override figure and 501 vote in favor, and 1,600 people vote for the $725,000 figure, and 950 vote in favor, even though more people voted for the smaller number and a greater majority voted in its favor, the larger dollar amount wins because it was passed by a majority — even if it was a majority by only one vote.

What do we get?

If only the budget that stays within Prop. 2-1/2 is passed, the town will have to work with a total budget of $32,867,188, and neither the town nor the school department would be operating at a level which is on par with the services currently provided.

Within that total budget figure, the school department would receive $12,714,714, or an increase of 3 percent over last year. The town's $20,152,474 includes many school-related costs, including school building and field maintenance, health insurance, life insurance, property insurance, workers compensation, Medicare taxes, unemployment, pensions, debt service and retired teachers' health insurance.

The school department proposed a total budget of $13,987,198, which is an increase of 13.3 percent over last year's allocation. Within that increase is $637,109 for contractual obligations and fixed costs, $238,655 for a cost of living salary increase, $581,759 in new personnel, and $185,293 in program improvements. A bottom line budget is approved for the schools to allow for flexible spending, and although there is a list of supplemental budget requests (new personnel and program improvements) the school department has not ranked the requests in terms of priority. Among the schools requests are:

- Half the cost of a school resource officer, $25,000
- One kindergarten teacher, $45,000
- One grade two teacher $45,000
- One half-time Osgood physical education teacher, $22,500
- One half-time elementary health teacher, $22,500
- One Osgood evening custodian, $34,128
- One Deer Hill .3 health teacher, $13,500
- One Deer Hill evening custodian, $34,128
- One middle school English teacher, language teacher, music teacher and adjustment counselor, $45,000 each
- One high school secretary, $28,602
- One high school English teacher, $45,000
- One high school math teacher, $45,000
- One half-time high school foreign language teacher, $22,500
- One 20-hour athletic trainer, $18,900.

The salary estimates are just that — estimates. They do not take into account some teachers could be at higher or lower steps and therefore would be paid higher or lower salaries. The total estimated cost for the positions is $581,759, and there is also $185,293 in program improvements, including new textbooks, reading programs, and teaching supplies.

If the $725,000 override passes, the school department would add $530,000 to its budget, and the town will add $195,000 to its budget. The town has prioritized its list of supplemental items, and an additional $195,000 would add:

- One maintenance worker, $40,612
- One library custodian,$14,114
- Maintenance services, $40,000
- Half the cost of a school resources officer, $23,467
- One volunteer coordinator for the elder affairs office, $20,490
- One engineering consultant, $10,000
- One planning consultant, $10,000.

The town would also need to spend roughly $36,321 of its $195,000 allocation to pay for fringe benefits for both town and school department employees which are retained or added as a result of the additional funds.

If the $1.495 million override passes, the school department will add $1.1 million to its budget and the town will add $395,000 to its budget. Within the town's $395,000 will be the items the town would receive with the lower override, as well as $10,000 to increase library staff hours as well as $10,000 for public works contracted services. The rest of its allocation, or $216,321, will be spent on fringe benefits for employees, and with the increase the school department would get it could be able to afford adding as many as 16 new positions. In essence, increasing the override figure by $770,000 will add $20,000 of services to the town's budget.

Important override points

- Passing an override requires approval twice. Just because an override passes at Town Meeting doesn't mean it will automatically pass at the special election. To take effect, overrides must pass by a simple majority at both Town Meeting and the ballot box.
- There are two figures up for consideration — a $725,000 override or a $1.495 override. Voters can vote for both override questions, one or neither.
- Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, if both overrides pass, only the larger override would take effect even if it won by fewer votes.
- The town is looking to pass an operating budget override, which means taxes will be increased permanently if it passes.

Barbara Buckley bows out of School Committee race

2007, when the terms for chairman Jamie Williams and Adrienne MacCarthy expire. Buckley said she will pull nomination papers the first day they become available. Until then, she said she will be throwing her support behind incumbent candidate Rick Flynn and candidate Steve Fusco.

"I feel very comfortable with the two pro-school candidates left in the race, and both will have my votes on election day," she said. "I know it'll keep our schools moving in a positive direction, and I look forward to joining them on the committee next year."

Her unfettered support for two of the three candidates and enthusiasm for next year's race has left the door open for speculation about whether this was a strategic move to help Fusco and Flynn win April 8. But Buckley said her decision to withdraw has nothing to do with conjecture that votes cast in her favor would have taken away votes from Flynn and Fusco, opening the door for candidate Lee Jenkins. "Would it have had an effect? Maybe, maybe not. I don't have a crystal ball," she said.

Jenkins, who hadn't heard the news until the Mariner called for her reaction, said Buckley's endorsement of the other candidates is something that occurs all the time in politics. "I certainly don't take it personally and it will not change my campaign platform," she said.

"I've decided with my family that right this second is not the right time for me."
— Barbara Buckley

Jenkins said she looks forward to campaigning these next few weeks. "I continue to be overwhelmed by the positive response I've received. Citizens from all over town agree it's time for a change. Parents continue to tell me they are concerned about the classroom resources they see being directed to administrative and overhead costs. They want leadership based in respect, restraint, and responsibility," she said.

In an interview Tuesday, Flynn said he was surprised by the news and that the Mariner's phone call was the first he had heard of Buckley's resignation. "I give Barbara tremendous credit for stepping up to be a candidate," he said, adding he thinks she has done great things for the schools in the past and has a strong passion for education. "It's great to know someone's on deck for next year," he said.

Fusco said Buckley called him after she made her decision to let him know she would no longer be a candidate. He said it must have been a difficult decision for her. "I'm disappointed she won't be in the race," Fusco said. "She is very passionate around the topic of schools and she has some really great ideas. I'd like to find a way for her to continue to stay involved even though she's not running."

"I have a lot of respect for her and the commitment she brings and I look forward to when she runs again. I wish her the best," he said.

Buckley said without the campaign, she will still have plenty to focus on in terms of helping Cohasset's schools. She said her first priority will be working to pass the $1.495 million override. "It's essential," she said. She also said she will be lobbying to restore state aid and continue working on ideas for alternate energy at the schools.

Before Buckley pulled out of the race, there had also been rumblings around town that if she was elected, there could be an ethical violation, as her husband, Jack Buckley, is a teacher at the middle-high school. Buckley said she spoke with Massachusetts Association of School Committees representative Jim Gilbert who assured her there would be no conflict.

There would be a few areas where she would not be able to participate, such as on the contract negotiations subcommittee (she said first-year School Committee members are not allowed to be on the negotiations committee anyway and there are only two members on the committee). She said if certain grievances came before the board, she would need to contact the ethics commission to see if it would be appropriate for her to recuse herself. However, Buckley said she would be able to participate in 98 percent of all School Committee business.

Buckley noted many elected officials are married to people who work for the town they serve, and if that was a restriction, the amount of candidates who could come forward to serve would be very limited. She said there are proper guidelines in place to ensure people in her situation are able to serve.

Buckley's name will be on the April 8 election ballot and she could still get votes. The Town Clerk's office said if she did happen to win, she could formally decline the position and the next runner-up would win.

9-month Indexed CD. $50,000 minimum deposit.

We're offering a 9-month Indexed CD with a great rate of 4.83% APY. And, with an Indexed CD, your interest rate is linked to the three-month Treasury Bill rate. So, if that rate rises, so does yours! In addition, you can make a one-time withdrawal during the 9-month term without paying a penny in penalties.

And, with several rate options available, our Indexed CD offers something for everyone:
- $500-$9,999 minimum deposit 4.73% APY*
- $10,000-$49,999 minimum deposit 4.78% APY*

Simply stop by one of our Massachusetts Community Banking Offices to open a Legacy Checking account and get a great rate. But hurry! These rates are only guaranteed through March 31, 2006.

Mr. Skipper contestants strut their stuff

And the 2006 Mr. Skipper winner is....Zach Etkind! Zach, dressed in the official "Mr. Skipper rain suit" received cash and a pizza Friday, March 10, after winning the annual male pageant at Cohasset High School. The event is held as a way to raise funds to help offset senior class activities.

Tim "The hot dog king," Toomey demonstrates why he is the most popular guy on Sandy Beach in the summer. Tim put together a hot dog with all the fixings and presented it to English teacher and Mr. Skipper judge Christine Berman.

Master of Ceremonies coach Tony Rolfe is escorted by Lisa Spirito as he makes his way to the stage to start the show.

Right, Mr. Skipper contestant Rick Grassie sings the George Michael song "Faith" as well as a song from the band Dispatch during the talent portion of the pageant.

Fifth-graders await the accuracy of their hypothesis, which claimed that liquid nitrogen would evaporate into a gas when released by Discovery of Action instructor Paula Puglia.

Students improve science vocabulary

The Discovery Museum of Action recently staged a science program for Deer Hill fifth-graders titled, "The Physical Changes of Matter." Students investigated the physical properties of solids, liquids and gasses as they expanded their vocabulary with words such as "sublimate," which describes a solid turning to gas. Dry ice and liquid nitrogen made learning fun as children learned the five changes of state. Students saw how fresh flowers shatter, elastic bands turn as crisp as chips and a banana becomes a hammer after being submerged in liquid nitrogen.

Health Notes for Osgood and CMS — Sixth grade students entering seventh grade at Cohasset Middle School need to have their physicals and TD booster prior to June 15. Contact a child's health care provider soon to schedule an appointment. Send the child's completed physical exam and updated immunizations to Judy Collins, CMS school nurse, by the June 15 deadline.

All parents of kindergarten students need to submit their child's current physical exam and a complete immunization report to the Osgood school nurse by Aug. 15. These may be obtained from a child's physician and sent to the Osgood School now through Aug. 15.

Brittany Leger correctly predicts that dry ice would "sublimate" when added to warm water.

Fourth-graders in Kayne Beaudry and Pamela McNamara's social studies class recently presented "Facts about the States" as part of studies on the United States. Students illustrated and discussed the project boards and went on to formulate facts about the country through a peer review process. Here, fourth-grader Kathryn Dunn reviews her facts about Vermont before presenting her findings to classmates.

School's been buzzing this week

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Well Mr. Skipper was "utterly amazing" according to judge and coordinator Christine Berman who claimed that it was the best Mr. Skipper pageant she had ever been a part of.

Huge ups to my fellow cheerleaders, especially school icon Mr. Zachary Etkind who won the annual pageant with his vibrant personality and boyish good looks. Zach stated that he found it "...ironic I won a male beauty pageant by dressing up as a female in two of the four scheduled events." The pageant was a blast and I am sure that anyone who paid the seven dollars to get in was not disappointed.

But now, "as the winter solstice comes to an end", according to one Mathew Terrance O'Connell, "the spring weather begins to set in like a cool breeze sweeping across the open ocean." I thought that this was an appropriate analogy for the sensational weather that we have been experiencing this so called "winter". The school was buzzing this week after the weekend and news is plentiful in this version of Life at CHS, so here it is.

- The spring sports meeting was Monday night and Mr. Ford would like to thank everyone who attended for making it the highest attended pre-season sports meeting in his tenure as Athletic Director. Practices for all spring sports will begin on Monday, March 20th.
- There will have been a meeting on Tuesday in the auditorium for the parents of eighth grade students to discuss the transition from middle school to high school.
- There will have been a course selection meeting for freshman, sophomores, and juniors on Wednesday.
- There will have been a Relay for Life meeting on Wednesday from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the library.
- The State Drama Festival Semi Finals will have been on Thursday in Fall River. The All State Music Festival will also be on Thursday and Friday.
- The middle school reading Olympics are coming to a close this week.
- The middle school is also amidst their version of "spirit week" this week. The days are as follow: Monday: Sports day, Tuesday: Clash day, Wednesday: Pajama day, Thursday: Cohasset day, and Friday: Green, White, and Orange day to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. The week will culminate with the St. Patrick's Day dance this Friday night from 7-9 pm. Tickets are five dollars in advance and eight dollars at the door.
- Tuesday, March 14 was Pie day and the middle schoolers celebrated with a feast on an array of pies at 2 p.m.
- Seniors are reminded to complete the scholarship applications that they received in the mail from the guidance office and return them no later than April 12.
- The Swim/Dive Team will have had their breakup banquet Wednesday night at The Atlantica restaurant. The team has already begun fundraising for next year after a fabulous year in which they sent 18 kids to sectionals and 10 to states.
- The 2006 yearbooks will be on sale all week during lunch, sign up to purchase one for $60.
- Congratulations to Kevin Barber and Mia Lieb-Lappen who were published in this month's edition of Teen Ink.

That's all I have for you this week, but I promise to return in the weeks to follow to keep you updated on what is happening around this pulsating school of ours. Happy St. Patrick's Day to anyone and everyone!

South Shore Art Center offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center will offer an additional scholarship for high seniors interested in including art in their college studies. Thanks to the success of the Art Center's retrospective "Susan DeMichele: A Life in Landscape," and the generosity of the DeMichele family, students can now apply for the Susan DeMichele Scholarship as well as the Bergfors Scholarship, the Lucas Scholarship, the Will Robinson Prize and the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship.

Five scholarships will be presented, ranging in value from $1,000 to $300.

Portfolios and applications may be submitted to the Art Center on April 22, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; April 23, noon to 4 p.m.; April 24, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; April 25, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and April 26, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

A panel of artists/educators will review the portfolios and applicants will be notified. Award money will be paid directly to the winners' schools to be applied toward tuition costs. Awards will be presented during the awards ceremony at the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival June 16.

For more information, call the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

The many faces of Cohasset's Lance Norris: from frightened, happy, angry to sad. Norris, who is an experienced actor, is teaching an acting class for youths 12-17 at the South Shore Community Center.

Acting class puts spotlight on youth

Show-biz veteran offers new program

"My goal with the class is to help each student develop a strong foundation to become a confident and skilled actor."
— Lance Norris, instructor

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Working at a wide variety of levels in the entertainment industry, Lance Norris has always taken a different approach to his own theatre and show-biz acting career, But starting next week, the Cohasset native brings an alternative approach once again (in a way, brings it back home) to his latest theatre arts project, the Youth Acting Class at the South Shore Community Center.

"This is a great opportunity for any local teens who want to learn about theatre and acting," Norris says. "They can be experienced or simply want to find out about how the whole theatre craft works. It's all very no-pressure and stress-free, because we want everyone who takes part in the class to learn."

The Youth Acting Class meets Wednesdays (starting March 22) from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Community Center for seven weeks. Serving as instructor, Norris is offering the classes for middle or high school age kids (12-17).

But unlike other community theatre workshops — particularly those that are youth-oriented — Norris' class does not include the usual central focus of a main theatre production, or the attendant pressures and/or performance jitters that can sometimes bring to class participants.

Instead, the seven-week program places the emphasis on developing listening, interacting and reacting skills as the students work with scene partners and participate in theater games as a group.

Class activities also span into the realm of onstage comedy, as each student will study and perform a monologue, learn the basics of stand-up comedy, improvisational comedy and sketch comedy.

"My goal with the class is to help each student develop a strong foundation to become a confident and skilled actor," Norris says. "We want to give the kids the tools to build their own acting skills."

Even in the multimedia, interactive entertainment business of today, Norris, 43, can qualify as a true industry and media eclectic. His career has covered the range of theatre (as a writer, performer and instructor), TV, movies, radio, publishing, standup comedy and even club management.

Raised in Cohasset, Norris graduated from Whitman College with a BA in Theatre Arts and studied at Emerson College in Boston. As an instructor, his teaching credits since the late 1980s have included UMass Boston and even a stretch at the Chungtu University in the People's Republic of China.

Onscreen, Norris has played bit parts in films such as the Boston-based psychodrama "Mystic River" ("I played the bartender in the scene right before Dave gets taken out," recalled the part-time actor with some amusement), "Glory," with Morgan Freeman and Denzel Washington, and "With Honors," with Joe Pesci and Brandon Fraser. Also, he was the SWAT Team leader on the Fox TV show "Against The Law" and was nominated for an Emmy for his work as a writer on "Politically Incorrect."

In the Boston area, Norris spent some 19-1/2 years as writer/producer/co-host on the morning radio shift in Boston on WBCN and WZLX with Charles Laquidara and Steve Sweeney. Until last year, on Steve Sweeney's Neighborhood at 'ZLX, he was known for his daily movie reviews as — with tongue firmly in cheek — "Boston's only straight film critic."

Also in recent years, Norris managed his own comedy club, the Bitterman, which occupied a room for comedy show nights at Cohasset's Red Lion Inn in 2004 and '05. Currently, Norris works as an acting instructor at the John Robert Powers modeling school in the Boston area. He also lives in Cohasset with his wife, Amy, and four children, two of whom — Savana, 13, and Ray, 7 — are actors.

"It was Savana who actually in a way gave me the idea for this acting class," Norris recalls. "She was looking around for some sort of local theatre acting class and talked about how there was nothing in this area that offered various types of scene work.

"I thought I'd put together a class that would focus on details and features of that sort and then combine that with the series of theatre game-type things that I do working with the students in my classes at the John Robert Powers school, where I work with kids as young as four," he says. "These include things like passing an imaginary ball around, and coming up with a sort of non sequitur line that fits the scene, or playing what could be called trust-building games."

Norris also mentioned that if there's an interest in an adult acting class with a similar format and approach at the Community Center, he might try that as well.

For information about registering for the Youth Acting Class, call 781 383-0088.

First-ever Cohasset Family Feud April 7

The fundraiser is sponsored by the Post Prom Committee to fund post-prom activities.

A historic moment in game show history will take place on Friday, April 7 at 7 p.m., at Cohasset High School. The first ever Cohasset Family Feud will be emceed by Rich Ofsthun. The fundraiser is sponsored by the Post Prom Committee to fund post-prom activities. To play, ask friends, neighbors, or family to form a five-member team. Each team member pays $25 to play for a total of $125 total per team. Minimum age to play is 10 years old. Call 781-383-9396 for more information. Mail team registration information and the $125 team registration fee to Kathy Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025. Make checks payable to the Post Prom Committee '06. Registration deadline is March 24 and is limited to the first 16 teams.

IT'S HAPPENING

Spring Soiree at Black Rock Country Club

The Social Service League of Cohasset will host a Spring Soiree featuring auctioneer Dan Flynn, on Saturday evening, April 1, at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham.

Bidders should prepare to pack their bathing suits, as two fabulous vacation weeks will be offered during the live auction: A one-week stay at a beautiful private residence on Kiawah Island, S.C.; and a week at the spectacular Four Seasons Aviara Resort in Carlsbad, Calif. From May 7-14. Just north of San Diego, this Four Seasons resort features an extensive spa, fine dining, and an 18-hole golf course designed by Arnold Palmer.

There will also be an opportunity for a lucky parent or child to win a Boston Bruins package complete with two tickets to a game in April and a ride on the Zamboni machine. A fishing charter, a tennis party, and a spa package, are also available for the right bid.

The Social Service League of Cohasset is a non-profit organization that has been helping people of all ages in the local community since its inception in 1912. Proceeds from this event will go to support programs such as the Council on Aging, Project Safeguard, and Wellspring in Hull.

Tickets are $100 per person and include wine and dinner. For more information call the Social Service League at 781-383-0771.

Author to speak at Garden Club

Cohasset Garden Club will present author Michael Tougias who will discuss "Quiet Places: Rambles Through Hidden Massachusetts" on Wednesday, March 29, 7 p.m., at St. Anthony's Parish Center.

Naturalist, photographer and author, Tougias will give a lecture and slide presentation featuring lesser-known natural and historic places of Massachusetts. Anecdotes, historical facts and wildlife encounters are woven into the presentation. Suggestions for day trips and weekend outings are given.

Tougias is the author of 15 books including "There's A Porcupine In My Outhouse!" "Quabbin: A History and Explorers Guide," "The Blizzard of '78" and "Until I Have No Country (A Novel of King Philip's Indian War)." His latest book, "Ten Hours Until Dawn: The True Story of Heroism and Tragedy Aboard The Can Do," was selected by the American Library Association as a Top Pick for 2005.

He is a frequent guest on WCVB TV's "Chronicle" and WBZ radio. Autographed copies of the author's work will be available for sale. All are welcome.

St. Anthony's ninth annual 'Beef and Blarney'

Saint Anthony's Parish, will have its ninth annual "Beef & Blarney" Irish Social Night on Saturday, March 18. The featured entertainment will be the Irish Band, "The O'Reillys". Social Hour begins at 6 p.m. followed by a sit down dinner of corned beef and cabbage and all the fixins' at 7 p.m. in the Parish Center. The price is $20 per person and $15 for Seniors 65 and older. A limited number of tickets are still available. To purchase tickets call the Parish Office at 781-383-0219.

POLICE STATUS REPORT

Nine arrests last month

Police Chief James Hussey said Cohasset Police Department made nine arrests in February; three for breaking and entering involving a motor vehicle; two for operating under the influence of liquor; one for assault with a dangerous weapon. One for shoplifting; one for public drinking, and finally one for protective custody.

During the month of February the police department also investigated 12 motor vehicle accidents; two of which resulted in personal injury. There were 74 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $1,985 in fines. Additionally, there were 34 parking tickets issued totaling $725 in fines.

Also in the month of February the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 815 calls for police services of those 122 were Emergency 9-1-1 calls, Hussey said.

In the month of February there were three reports of breaking and entering all involving motor vehicles. Also in February there were four criminal complaints issued for the month, he said.

Carbon monoxide alarms are required

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said as of March 31, carbon monoxide alarms will be required in all residences with potential sources of carbon monoxide. The vast majority of homes will not be required to install hard-wired systems although, where hard-wired systems are required by regulation, the deadline is Jan. 1, 2007. The Board of Fire Prevention Regulations recently passed emergency regulations to implement the law known as "Nicole's Law."

Consumer Information — The Dept. of Fire Services is distributing "A Consumer's Guide to Requirements for Residential Carbon Monoxide Alarms." This guide and information about the regulations can be obtained from local fire departments and on the DFS web site: www.mass.gov/dfs/osfm/pubed/firesafetytopics/carbon_monoxide_safety.htm.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission also has information in both English and Spanish on common sources of carbon monoxide in the home and recognizing the www.cpsc.gov/CPSCPUB/PUBS/464.pdf.

General Requirements — For most residential buildings with fossil fuel burning equipment or enclosed parking areas, the new regulations require carbon monoxide alarms on every level of the home or dwelling unit including habitable portions of basements and attics. On levels with sleeping areas, the alarms must be placed within 10 feet of the bedroom doors. The regulations allow the following options for CO alarms:

- Battery operated with battery monitoring
- Plug-ins with battery back-up
- Hard-wired with battery back-up
- Low voltage system
- Wireless
- Qualified combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarm.

Acceptable Combination Alarms — Acceptable combination smoke and carbon monoxide alarms must have simulated voice and tone alarms that clearly distinguish between the two types of emergencies. The State Building Code mandates that only photoelectric smoke alarms are permitted within twenty feet of a bathroom or kitchen. Consumers are urged to check with the local fire department on whether a specific alarm meets the code requirements.

Alternative Compliance Option — Owners of larger buildings with centralized or minimal sources of carbon monoxide may wish to consider the alternative compliance option contained in the regulation.

Enforcement — Fire departments are currently required to inspect smoke alarms when homes are being sold and transferred. Starting March 31, 2006 or Jan. 1, 2007 where hard-wired alarms are required, fire departments will now inspect all residences upon sale and transfer for carbon monoxide alarms.

The cast of "Aida" fills the stage at the Company Theatre. Angela Williams (Aida) of Cranston, Rhode Island, John King (Radames) and Chiristine Maus Joyce (Amneris) both of Weymouth share the spotlight.

Boston beckons, but King's in good 'Company'

Weymouth Actor to star in Norwell theater production of 'Aida'

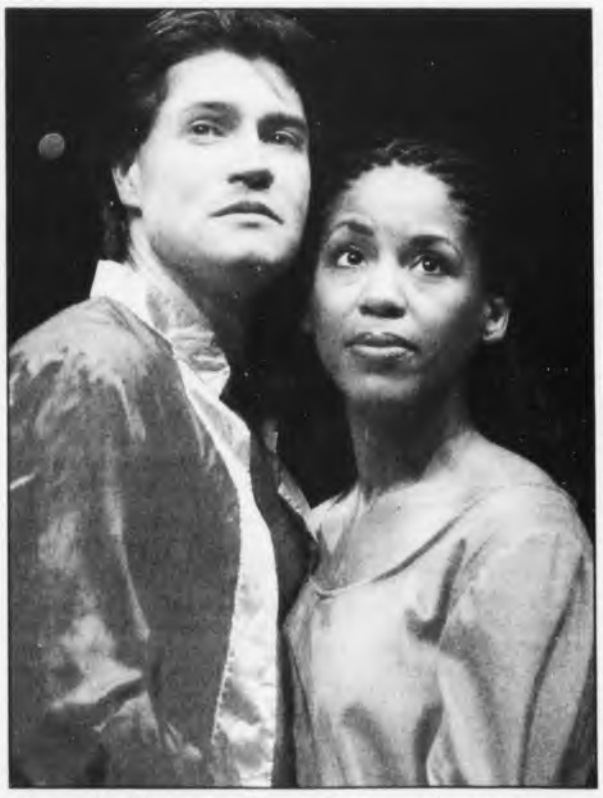
By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The Boston theater scene beckoned to John King last year and the Weymouth actor and singer answered the call. King understudied the lead in the Huntington Theatre Company's "Falsettos," appeared in the ensemble of Overture Productions' "On the 20th Century," and starred in "Kiss of the Spiderwoman" at the SpeakEasy Stage Company for which he earned him an IRNE nomination as Best Actor in a Small Comp-any, Musical, from the Independent Reviewers of New England. This week, however, King returns to his familiar position center stage in Norwell when "Aida" opens at the Company Theatre.

"'Aida' is a great contemporary musical. It's a beautiful love story set to pop music by Elton John and Tim Rice. I play Radames, an Egyptian warrior engaged to the Princess of Egypt. My character returns from battle and becomes captivated by a slave woman who turns out to be a Nubian princess."

Based on the Verdi opera "Aida," the Disney-produced musical premiered on Broadway six years ago this month and ran for four years. In the Disney take on the classic tale, two contemporary youths are swept from an exhibition of Egyptian artifacts back in time to live the real thing. Aida, a royal princess, is captured by Radames. However, complications arise when the two fall in love, particularly because of Radames' engagement to Amneris, another royal princess who is also in love with him.

South Shore audiences developed their fondness for King through his many appearances in Company Theatre productions over the past two decades. It was as "Bobby" - the 35-year-old bachelor who has looks, charm and a great sense of humor, but no soul mate - in the Company staging of Stephen Sondheim's "Company," however, that King attracted the attention of Boston presenters.



Weymouth's John King in the role of Radames shares the stage with Angela Williams as Aida in the Company Theatre production of Elton John and Tim Rice's musical.

"If I have another opportunity to audition in Boston, I will definitely consider it. But the Company Theatre is my real home."
Weymouth actor John King

"When I did 'Company' a lot of Boston people came down to Norwell to see Sarah deLima in the show and seem to have discovered me. I got a call the day after 'Company' closed from someone at the Huntington Theatre telling me I had to get into Boston and audition for 'Falsettos.' I was exhausted and vocally brain-fried but I went in and sang 'Being Alive' and also sight-read two other songs. I went back later to audition for the director and a third time for the understudy callback before I finally got the job."

For King, who is used to the warmth of the spotlight, being an understudy was an adjustment.

"Studying and learning a whole score and then never going on in the show is a lot of pressure on a performer. I saw the good and bad of the process, though, and just getting to work with a company like the Huntington was exciting from start to finish."

When that commitment concluded, King segued into an ensemble role in "On the 20th Century," which starred Tony Award-nominee Alice Ripley and was presented at Boston's Cutler Majestic Theatre. A piece of mail from the SpeakEasy Stage Company led to King's next Boston casting.

"In August, I got a flier from SpeakEasy promoting their 2005-2006 season. I knew immediately that I wanted to do 'Kiss of the Spiderwoman.' Paul Daigneault, the artistic director at Speakeasy, had directed 'The Diary of Anne Frank' at the Company Theatre and I knew him from the time he started SpeakEasy so I thought I'd give it a try. I sang my 16 bars from 'Spiderwoman' at the first audition and then was called back for the dance auditions. It wasn't until my next call back that I realized they were looking at me for the part of Luis Molina, one of the male leads. I was thrilled and immediately bought the script and began to learn the whole show."

It was King's debut in a leading role on a Boston stage and the city's notoriously hard-to-please theater critics liked what they saw. King earned raves for his portrayal of the effeminate homosexual prisoner who escapes his harsh life by inventing romantic movies in his mind.

"The nervousness of opening night is so intensified when you're on a Boston stage in front of those critics. I probably had an advantage with them, however, because they hadn't seen me before. I was like a breath of fresh air. Whatever the reason, I will always be thankful for those reviews."

When the IRNE Awards are presented at the Lenox Hotel on March 27, King plans to be there. He also plans to be on stage in Norwell later that same week in "Aida."

"If I have another opportunity to audition in Boston, I will definitely consider it. But the Company Theatre is my real home."

("Aida" will be presented at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park, Norwell, March 17 through April 9. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com.)

Movie review

Elizabeth (Rosamund Pike) and Rochester (Johnny Depp) seem to be worrying about their future.

Shagging dog story

The Libertine (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

See Johnny Depp literally shag himself to death in "The Libertine," a much-maligned film adaptation of the play by Stephen Jeffreys set in the swinging '70s — the swinging 1670s, that is.

The film is everything the recent, limp, bowdlerized "Casanova" is not: namely smart, sophisticated, sexually daring and, best of all, not manufactured to please the yahoos.

"You will not like me," says Depp's John Wilmot, also known as the 2nd Earl of Rochester, a real-life poet, playwright and self-declared libertine who rejects respectability and official piety and sets his course upon a life of carnal pleasure.

Watch out, de Sade. Rochester, whose love for his wife (Rosamund Pike of "Pride & Prejudice") is fiercely reciprocated, is soon cutting a sexual swath through 17th century Britain to the alternating amusement and disapproval of toffee-nosed King Charles II (John Malkovich, who played Rochester on stage with Chicago's Steppenwolf Theater). The king wants Rochester, author of "Soddom or The Quintessence of Debauchery" and a sexually lampooning poem titled "A Satyr on Charles II," to write a theatrical masterpiece for him.

Rochester agrees to coach stage actress Elizabeth Barry (Samantha Morton), with whom he falls in love. He enters into a passionate affair with her, only to be rejected. He descends into a life of alcoholism and debauchery and dies, ravaged by syphilis, at age 33.

Directed by commercial and music-video veteran Laurence Dunmore, the film is dazzling and densely atmospheric, perhaps to a fault, with visuals that at times recall Stanley Kubrick's "Barry Lyndon." You can almost smell the stench.

As wonderful as Depp has been in such roles as Edward Scissorhands, Ed Wood and Captain Jack Sparrow, he brings even more conviction, humanity and fire to the role of Rochester (and is the second leading man after Ralph Fiennes' Voldemort to appear onscreen recently without a nose). In one sequence, a minitour de force set weeks before his death, Rochester, a stinking, virtual ambulatory cadaver, pulls himself together to make a speech in defense of the king in the House of Lords.

Also notable in the cast are Tom Hollander as Rochester's friend and literary rival Etherege and British stand-up comic Johnny Vegas as the rake Charles Sackville. As William Hazlitt once said of Rochester, "His contempt for everything that others respect almost amounts to sublimity."

At a time when the earth seems overrun with sheep, the scandalous 2nd Earl of Rochester is a wolf worth knowing.

Rated R. "The Libertine" contains nudity, sexual situations and foul language.

Going green in Ireland

By MEGAN GALLAGHER
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

DUNFANAGHY, Ireland -- I galloped Minstral, a small Irish horse, straight toward a big stone wall. Up ahead, my guide and his horse disappeared over the jump. There was nothing to do but hold on, as Minstral flew over the rocks and glided to the soft turf below.

It was the most fearless thing I've done on a horse in years.

If you love horses, ride in Ireland. The horses are so gentle, they will make you brave. And why walk across that gorgeous Irish landscape when your horse will do it for you?

I spent a week sampling three riding holidays.

All the stables offer strong riders multi-day cross-country trails, with about five hours in the saddle per day. Beginners can take lessons and enjoy gentle hacks on nearby hills or beaches.

My assignment was horses, but each stable reminded me of different sorts of Irish music.

Donegal from the Saddle brings to mind the textures of the Chieftains' flutes, fiddles and hornpipes. The stable is based at the family-owned Arnold's Hotel here overlooking a shallow bay on the remote northern coast of County Donegal.

You walk through the Arnold's Hotel bar and up in a terraced garden to reach the whitewashed stables in the back, where Helen McDavid manages about 20 horses. Many are Irish cobs, medium-sized, often black and white, with thick manes and tails.

One morning, a half dozen horses and riders left the village and crossed the bay at low tide. Riding a gray horse named Oscar, I had to jerk my feet up to the saddle to keep from getting wet as we forded a tidal channel.

We followed narrow roads across the Horn Head peninsula, counting three rainbows stretched from high cliffs to the ocean. When Arnold's sent a car to meet us at an overlook, I faced the happy challenge of juggling a cup of tea, a scone and the reins to Oscar, busy grazing beside the road.

An afternoon trek took us to Sheephaven Bay for a trot through the dunefields and a gallop on the strand. Seals played in the surf as I raced a spotted pony named Rio down the beach. Flocks of oystercatchers and curlews scattered in our wake. No wonder the jigs and reels of traditional Irish music echoed in my head.

To musically depict Donegal Equestrian Holidays, think the international buzz of U2's rockers. This stable is located on Donegal Bay, on the county's southwest coast in the busy resort town of Bundoran. Proprietor Pat Geaghan seems much too hip for a horsewoman, with a raspy voice, plentiful jewelry and scarves, straight blonde hair and skinny jeans.

Pat runs a compound in town with a B&B, holiday homes and La Sabbia, a restaurant/coffeehouse with an open fire. It's an easy walk to The Bridge pub for a session of traditional music, then on to a club, where Pat insists you dance until 3 a.m.

She's just as charmingly bossy at the stables three miles from town. Pat and Maurice (pronounced "Morris") McGlinchey preside over a spotless barn and handsome horses, mostly Irish cobs and Connemara ponies. They've got a full array of facilities: a dressage arena, a cross-country jumping course and an indoor arena.

Riding with Maurice is a bit like playing the groupie to his rock star. He looks like actor Bob Hoskins and rides a big thoroughbred horse that seems ready to explode. As we slid down a three-story dune onto the beach, he winked and shouted, "You'll never pass this horse."

We soon hit racing speed, tears streaming and sand flying. I rode every inch of small brown Minstral, urging him to catch Maurice and the thoroughbred. We never did. Turns out, all the other horses are trained to stay behind Maurice so a guest won't lose control and get hurt.

We reached the end of the beach, but I was determined to jump Pat's cross- country course. That meant I was willing to jump an unknown horse over jumps I had not inspected beforehand. Such bravery is unheard of at home.

Maurice set the pace, with Minstral and me tucked three strides back. We jumped a bank, the drop wall, logs, several combinations, even a miniature Irish cottage. When we were done, I felt like the rock star.

Calliaghstown Riding Centre evokes the refined elegance of the three Irish Tenors. Just 15 miles from Dublin, it is based in the "Garden of Ireland," where counties Dublin, Wicklow and Kildare meet and the Anglo-Irish aristocracy once held sway.

Trail riders here explore the nearby Wicklow mountains, ending up at a haunting seventh-century monastic site at Glendalough. Along the way, riders pass castle ruins, great houses of the gentry and colorful villages, stopping for a picnic or a pub lunch.

American riders will feel at home in Grainne Sugars' stables. Her horses were the best groomed and their tack was the highest quality of any in my travels. Her Irish hunters and cobs are much like American sport horses. Grainne (pronounced grawn-yuh) competed many times in the European eventing championships and is a certified British Horse Society instructor (the MIT of horse instruction).

It was chilly, windy and wet on the day I visited, so we didn't ride. But we walked the cross-country jumping course, where I looked with horror over the edge of the advanced level bank and played with some young horses turned out in the same field.

In the indoor arena, I joined parents watching little children in a beginner's class. All the ponies were lined up nose to tail at our end of the ring. With one instructor in the middle shouting encouragement, another jogged a single pony and child at the trot around the circle, a hand out to steady the bobbing child beside her. I became embarrassed when I found myself humming "Danny Boy."

Wicklow Trail riders stop at a pub for lunch.

IF YOU GO...

Donegal from the Saddle: A five-day trail ride, seven nights accommodation and most meals is priced from about $1,400 per person, double occupancy. Managed by Derek and Gerarda Arnold, and their brother, Bill, Arnold's Hotel boasts a turf fire in the lobby and memorable meals in its two restaurants. For information, go to www.arnoldshotel.com/Trail--riding.htm.

Other activities in Dunfanaghy include a nine-hole golf course, miles of walking trails and a surf and kayak outfitter. Glenveagh National Park and the Dunlewey Heritage Centre are an hour drive away. Arnold's also offers weekend workshops in watercolor painting, photography or writing. Many visitors come from the six Northern Ireland counties next door.

The village is a five-hour drive from Dublin, 20 minutes from Donegal Airport or an hour from Derry International Airport in Northern Ireland.

Donegal Equestrian Holidays: Five days trail riding with a one-week stay in the B&B or a holiday house is from about $505 to $725 per person, double occupancy. Contact www.donegalequestrianholidays.com. Many riders from Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Germany and France come as much for the nightlife as the horses. The stables host the North West Equestrian Festival the first weekend in October.

Bundoran is famous for huge beaches, golf courses and summer traffic. Nearby Rossnowlagh is much quieter. Here the Britton family's four-star Sandhouse Hotel and Spa (www.sandhousehotel.ie) sits directly on the three-mile-long beach, while Conor Britton's award-winning seafood restaurant, Smuggler's Notch, is perched on the cliffs above.

Bundoran is about 35 miles from Sligo Airport, or a 3 1/2-hour drive from Dublin.

Calliaghstown Riding Centre: Mutli-day rides at this stable are marketed to Americans through Cross Country International in Millbrook, N.Y. The Wicklow Trail Ride, five days riding, six nights in a local guesthouse and most meals, costs $1,995 per person, double occupancy. Go to www.equestrianvacations.com.

For information on the Calliaghstown facilities, go to www.calliaghstownridingcentre.com.

The Dublin/Wicklow/Kildare area is rich in horsey sight-seeing, with the Irish National Stud and Japanese Gardens at Kildare, Berney Brothers custom saddle makers at Killcullen, racetracks at Naas and Punchestown, and the international three-day event at Punchestown in May.

Other attractions include Anglo-Irish mansions and gardens, Russborough and Powerscourt, countless golf courses and the city delights of Dublin.

The nearest airport is Dublin.

CPC funds

Projects line up for FY07 grants

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Fund could continue to help restore an important part of Cohasset's history as well as contribute to preserving open space, refurbish a worn-out ballpark, build a new veterans honor roll, restore the front doors at Town Hall, and even buy some new washing machines and dryers for the town's only affordable housing complex.

It is all part of a "suitcase" article in the Town Meeting warrant that asks voters to approve allocations from the fund that was established back in 2001 when Cohasset residents adopted the Community Preservation Act by a 998-756 vote margin and agreed to a 1.5 percent surcharge on their real estate taxes to pay for projects and purchases like those listed above.

The Community Preservation Committee, which consists of a cross-section of town boards and citizens-at-large, has met in recent months with project proponents and gone over plans in detail. CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey likens the fund to a "rainy day fund" that, by law,

Cohasset road race turns 30

Special T-shirt marks milestone

By Samantha Brown

The Cohasset Rotary Club is celebrating a very special anniversary this year. Thirty years ago, the organization coordinated the first ever Road Race by the Sea, and today, the popular event is stronger than ever.

On Sunday, April 2, runners and walkers will lace up their sneakers for the Road Race by the Sea as well as the second annual Fran Coffey Memorial Walk. The walk will begin at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach and is either a 10K (6.2 mile) walk, or with an alternate route is 4.5 miles. The Road Race will begin at 1 p.m. and will be a 10K. The Road Race is the biggest fund-raiser of the year for the Rotary Club, and proceeds from both events will be donated to charity.

To commemorate the Road Race's anniversary, Rotarian Ronnie Goodwin, owner of Goodwin Graphics, will print this year's special 30th anniversary design on white, long sleeved Road Race T-shirts, which will be guaranteed for the first 800 registrants to check in. While Goodwin provides T-shirts every year for the race, and has designed many of the shirts himself, this year, because it is such a special occasion, Goodwin has turned the job over to Cohasset resident and graphic artist Keith Conforti.

"We're very excited to do something special for the 30th anniversary," said Rotary President and Road Race Director Brad Goodwin, who is brothers with Ronnie Goodwin, adding he is very happy with the design Conforti has come up with, which is a yellow and blue design featuring Minot Light.

Conforti began his own graphic design business, TWIST creative group, with his wife Joyce Whitman in 1995. The business is based in Cohasset, and Conforti has directed and designed award-winning designs for Fidelity Investments, the Make-A-Wish

George Ayoub, Ronnie Goodwin, and Keith Conforti are pleased with year's Road Race By the Sea T-shirt. Using Conforti's design, Goodwin Graphics has begun printing special 30th anniversary T-shirts for runners participating in this year's race. Ayoub, who works at Goodwin Graphics, began printing the design onto the long-sleeved T-shirts Wednesday.

About 200 signs, like the one shown above, have been installed around town to show support for Cohasset teachers.

Politics get early start

Timing of signs can't be regulated

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

This spring Cohasset residents can expect to see more people and groups take advantage of the First Amendment that protects freedom of speech by letting passersby know what candidates and what causes they support.

The first group "out of the gate" this election season has been the Cohasset Teachers Association, which is responsible for the nearly 200 red and white "Keep Quality Education in Cohasset" signs around town.

And with hot races for the School Committee and Selectmen at the April 8 Town Election and an override slated for a special election May 6 – chances are the existing red and white signs along with spring flowers won't be the only colorful addition to Cohasset front yards in the days ahead.

Ed Leonard, negotiations chair of the CTA, said the union initially ordered 100 signs that were placed in yards about six weeks ago through a distribution list the CTA has compiled from parents and citizens who contacted the CTA to see how they could help support the teachers. Supporters could also offer to put a sign in their yard on line through the CTA web site. Leonard said the initial order of 100 signs went quickly so the CTA, which paid for the signs through its crisis fund, ordered 100 more.

CEA needs volunteers

The Cohasset Elder Affairs office is in need of volunteers of all ages. Any help, whether it be data entry, helping move heavy boxes, answering phones, or other various office help, would be greatly appreciated. While currently there are many adults in the community who volunteer at the center, the CEA reminds the community its younger members are welcome to volunteer as well. Students looking for a way to earn community service credits would be invaluable to the CEA. Anyone interested in volunteering should contact CEA Director Kathy Bryanton at (781) 383-9112.

Earth Day cleanup

Cohasset residents are looking to have a successful First Annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, in honor of Earth Day, and are looking for volunteers to help. On Saturday, April 8 (rain date April 29) residents will meet in front of Town Hall at 2:30 p.m., and will then celebrate Earth Day and the beauty of Cohasset by cleaning selected streets and sites — Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ball Field, Government Island, etc. The town will provide garbage bags, but volunteers are asked to bring their own thick work gloves. The effort is supported by the Cohasset Board of Health, the Friends of Black Rock Beach, and the Cohasset Girl Scouts. For more information, please call Alison Callahan at (781) 383-1081 or Bill Burnett at (781) 383-3499.

Town Report publishes non-specific vital statistics

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said publishing that information can increase the potential risk of fraud, stolen identity, and the safety of the town's citizens.

For those who have perused the pages of the 2005 Annual Town Report, the page which covers vital statistics will surely look different than the year before. This is the first year only the number of "vital events" will be published, rather than the individual names and dates of those who were born, married, or passed away.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said for many years, the Massachusetts Registry of Vital Records and Statistics has urged, but not mandated, the clerks throughout the Commonwealth not to list individual births, deaths, and marriages in the annual Town Reports. She said publishing that information can increase the potential risk of fraud, stolen identity, and the safety of the town's citizens.

"It was quite a decision for me to make," said Douglas, but added she thought for the safety of the citizens and their children, the town should adopt a new policy of publishing only the number of vital events which have taken place over the year.

Douglas has been Town Clerk in Cohasset since 1992 and said she was originally contacted about not publishing the information prior to Sept. 11. "Even before then people were using other people's names for fraud. This way we're eliminating that possibility and keeping people safe," she said.

In 2004, every birth was listed by the day and month, and the names of the babies as well as their parents and the mother's maiden name were included. Every Cohasset resident that was married in 2004 was listed in the report, whether they were married in town or not, and every marriage that took place in Cohasset was listed, whether the bride and groom were Cohasset residents or not. The date and the person who officiated the ceremony were also listed. All deaths listed included the name, date of death, and age of the deceased. The information covers six pages.

In 2005, there is only one page dedicated to vital statistics. There were 35 male babies and 40 females born to families in Cohasset. There were 27 total marriages, 21 of which took place in Cohasset. There were 78 total deaths, including residents of Cohasset who died elsewhere and non-residents who died in Cohasset.

Board to revisit Dean dog hearing next week

The Board of Selectmen is slated to take a final vote on the fate of nine border collies which have threatened and/or bitten residents at its next meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, March 28.

Border Street resident Mary Hartshorne was one of four residents who were attacked by the dogs, owned by John and Mia Dean of Meadow Lane. She said she would like to see the board take action sooner rather than later. In a letter written to the board dated March 1, she said she was sorely disappointed to see the Feb. 28 hearing with the board "degenerate into a lengthy negotiation with the Dean family. The Deans are the offenders."

At the meeting, the board said it agreed with recommendations brought forward by Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's dog hearing officer, and discussed amendments it would make to the recommendations, but did not take a final vote.

Griffin has suggested that until five of the dogs can be placed in good homes, all nine will be restrained at all times while outdoors —with the exception of showing the dogs to an interested buyer — and are not allowed to leave the property of their owners.

All nine dogs will also be subject to a behavior analysis to be evaluated for temperament. But Hartshorne said calling in help from dog experts serves only to delay decision. "Speaking as one of the Dean dogs' victims, I urge you to take action on the Town Manager's recommendations, before someone else is hurt, or worse," she wrote.

Middle school seeks lunchroom volunteers

Middle school Assistant Principal Beth Sternala is looking for parents or community members to assist in the cafeteria from 11:30 a.m. to noon either on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, or Thursdays. Anyone interested in volunteering may contact middle-high school PSO president Lucia Flibotte at (781) 383-2792.

Special election moves next door

For the second year in a row, the Special Election will not be held at Town Hall, but will be held next door at the Second Congregational Church. The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to set Saturday, May 6 as the date for the Special Election, as it was the first date available which met all legal requirements, and worked well for the Town Clerk.

However, the Cohasset Dramatic Club had already planned to hold its spring musical on the Town Hall stage. The CDC had submitted a list of dates to the town for rehearsals and productions, and had received approval. With the conflict, the board agreed to move the election to the church. The same conflict arose for the CDC last year.

Voters will still go to Town Hall for the April 8 Town Election, to cast their votes for candidates running for elected office. Voters who go to the polls at the Second Congregational Church in May will be voting on override questions.

More political signs sure to pop up this election season

November 2004 and teachers have been working without a contract since August 2005. They have held several informational "pickets" before and after school in an effort to create more awareness and generate community support. The signs were an extension of that effort, Leonard said.

However, the CTA and School Committee have reached a tentative contract agreement and the CTA could ratify the contract next week. But Leonard said the signs would not be coming down soon. Leonard said the CTA, which has had two meetings with the Committee to Support Cohasset, a pro-override group in town, plans to share its sign distribution list with that group. Therefore, yards with the "Keep Quality Education in Cohasset" signs could also include a pro-override sign.

"This is a pivotal time for Cohasset."
— Ed Leonard, Cohasset Teachers Assoc.

"It's been part of our plan all along to support the override," Leonard said. "This is a pivotal time for Cohasset."

Leonard explained the larger override would help move Cohasset back to an elite school system.

"That's harder to do when you have a class size of 30," he said about the middle-high school. "And elementary classes are creeping up."

Terry Green of the Committee to Support Cohasset said the teachers are part of the group's base of support that also includes parents of current and former students, and a cross section of citizens from the community at large. "It really is a town wide effort with town wide support," he said.

Green said election signs are just one component of a campaign effort.

"Campaigns buttons, signs and flyers are part of awareness and education," he said. "Although helpful, voters being educated on the facts are the keys to winning any campaign so our focus has been in this area."

Leonard explained the CTA signs were carefully worded as to be non political and were intended to be inclusive indicating support for teachers, schools and education that benefit the town as a whole.

Initially when contract talks weren't moving forward, teachers wore plain red buttons that showed solidarity. "But people asked what we were wearing the red buttons for," Leonard recalled. New buttons were ordered with the initials "SOS" meaning Save Our Schools. He said the signs were an outgrowth of parents asking teachers how they could support the teachers and get involved.

Cohasset used to have a policy regulating the amount of time political signs could be posted to two weeks before an election until one week following the election. There was also $10 fee for a building permit to allow 10 signs to be posted. The benefit of the policy was that the building inspector knew who was responsible for the signs and had a contact name should there be an issue such as a sign being posted on a traffic island or other public place. But back in 1999, a Scituate man, who was campaigning for a gubernatorial candidate, challenged the policy questioning how Cohasset would charge money for someone to exercise his or her freedom of speech.

As it turned out, Cohasset's existing bylaw addressed every type of sign except political signs. Town Meeting retooled the sign bylaw in 2004 to include a definition of political signs, which include signs supporting candidates or signs expressing an opinion. Building Commissioner Bob Egan said the town can regulate the size of political signs but not the amount of time they can be posted.

Sons of American Legion to host gathering

The Eastern Region of the Sons of the American Legion will hold an unofficial gathering at American Legion Post 118, 98 Summer St., Cohasset, on Saturday April 1, to celebrate the homecoming of National Vice Commander Thomas W. Wigmore.

Teachers' contract could be ratified

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

CTA bargaining team chairman Ed Leonard described the recently proposed agreement as fair to both sides.

After nearly 18 months of contract negotiations, the Cohasset Teachers' Association and the School Committee have tentatively reached an agreement.

School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams made the announcement during the Thursday, March 16 School Committee meeting. She said the CTA was scheduled to take a vote on the contract March 29, and if it approves the contract, the School Committee will hold a meeting March 30 to vote to accept it.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said everyone involved in the negotiations had the same goal in mind — to agree on a contract everybody could be proud of. She said while the process was a long one, "I don't think it could have been done any sooner."

Contract negotiations began in November, 2004, nine months before the contract expired on Aug. 31, 2005. Teachers have been working without a contract this entire school year. Without a contract and frustrated with the negotiations process, members of CTA have gradually escalated their work actions during the school year.

Teachers began by wearing red buttons as a sign of solidarity and then announced they would no longer be available to volunteer time for activities such as chaperoning school dances or coaching powder puff games. The window of time to ask for college recommendations was also temporarily narrowed, but teachers ultimately took back the restriction and went back to writing recommendations as they were requested.

Members of the CTA also held informational pickets both on school grounds and at the intersections of Rte. 3A and Pond and Sohier streets. One day per week, teachers also exited the building together at the time their contract specified their paid work day was over.

CTA bargaining team chairman Ed Leonard said generally speaking, members of the CTA are excited about the contract, and it seems fair to both sides. However, he said because the contract has not yet been approved by the CTA, he cannot release any of the details of what it includes. "We're quite excited, although we're not ready to celebrate just yet," he said, as the contract will need to be ratified by both the CTA and the School Committee. "We're ready to move forward and it looks very promising," he said.

Leonard said he met with high school and middle school CTA members Monday after school, and with Deer Hill and Osgood CTA members Tuesday to go over the summary of items the contract would entail. He said a ratification vote will be taken Wednesday, March 29 at 3:30 p.m.

While contract details won't be made public until the contract is ratified, the CTA web site outlines the stipulations of a contract offered by the School Committee in early February, which it rejected. The posting, written by Leonard and CTA member Ed Leary states the previous contract was rejected by a 72-3 margin, and in spite of "numerous concessions by the teachers," the contract represented a significant step backward and a loss of benefits that teachers had worked long and hard in order to acquire, they stated.

The site states the School Committee had insisted upon totally restructuring the salary schedule for the staff, and teachers discovered there were serious flaws in the package as 44 percent of the professional staff would have received less than 2 percent as a raise for the current year. Numerous staff would have received $19 as a cost of living increase for the year.

Concerns surrounding the contract previously offered were about more than just money. At the beginning of negotiations, teachers in the elementary grades asked to increase the amount of planning time available during the school day. The CTA web site says the School Committee instead asked elementary teachers to increase the amount of time, not in planning, but in supervising students up to 20 minutes per day.

But it appears all concerns have been allayed with the new contract. Leonard said the teachers must have the specifics of the agreement in their hands for seven school days before a ratification vote can be held. If all goes well, the settled contract would allow the school department to have a clear picture of the financial obligations it will have before Town Meeting on April 1.

Chamber health care coverage meeting

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold a meeting to discuss health care coverage and services available to chamber members on Thursday, April 13 at 5 p.m., in the Paul Pratt Library. Representatives of Health Services Administrators, the chamber's provider, will be available to present program information and answer questions. The Open Enrollment Period deadline for plans is April 30. The meeting is open to all interested in health care options. For information call 781-383-1010 or email info@cohasset chamber.org.

Residential brush

Residential brush may be brought to the DPW parking area through April 30. No trees over 3 inches in diameter. No contractors.

Teen Garage renovations

After eight years of operation, the Cohasset Teen Garage will be closed for renovations starting through late May.

The Teen Garage serves youngsters grades six and over and is located in the Town's old Highway Garage off Main Street.

During the late 1990's the Highway Department moved to its new facility and the Town gave the old Garage to the Youth Resources Committee for a Teen Center.

A great big 'thank you' from a Marine squadron in Iraq

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

COOKIES HAVE ARRIVED!

Major James Quinn read last week's Mariner story on line about Caroline Kennedy and her friends packaging up Girl Scout Cookies to send to him and his fellow Marines in Iraq.

Maj. Quinn, who is Caroline's uncle, now reports the cookies have arrived and sent along this photo with a big "thank you" to Cohasset!

Caroline, who is 9 and in the third grade at Deer Hill, noticed when selling Girl Scout cookies that many customers said they would like to support the scouts but didn't want the cookies. So with the help of her mother, Diane, Caroline emailed around asking friends to buy a box of cookies for the Marine Corps Squadron. Within 24 hours, 150 boxes were ordered, with many people offering to help with the postage.

Caroline and a group of friends met at the South Shore Art Center after school on March 8 to wrap and label 12 boxes full of Girl Scout cookies to be shipped overseas. The girls also made special cards for the Marines.

Maj. Quinn is part of the Marine All-Weather Fighter Attack Squadron 533.

FAMILY FEUD!

Survey says there's one last chance to feud Cohasset style! The Cohasset Family Feud team registration and fee deadline has been extended to Sunday, March 26. The first ever Cohasset Family Feud will be held at Cohasset High School on Friday, April 7 at 7pm. Rich Ofsthun will emcee the event. The fundraiser is sponsored by the Post Prom Committee to fund post-prom activities. How can you play? Ask friends, neighbors or family to form a five member team. Each team member pays $25 per team member to play- $125 total per team. Minimum age to play is ten years old. Call 383-9396 for additional information. Mail team registration information and the $125 team registration fee to Kathy Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, Cohasset, Ma 02025. Checks are payable to the Post Prom Committee '06. Registration is limited to the first 16 teams.

HAVE SPIRIT?

Have spirit? Let's Hear it! Please join the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters in supporting the Cohasset Public Schools Lacrosse Teams as they kick off the lacrosse season on Sunday, April 2nd at Alumni Field. Spirit Day begins with the Girls' Varsity Team vs. Nantucket at 2 p.m. Boys' Varsity vs. Nantucket follows at 3:30 p.m.

COACHES THANKED

The sixth-grade girls travel basketball team would like to say "thank you" to coaches Paul Farren, Susan Franklin and Dave Seraikas. The girls and their parents appreciate all the time, effort and energy that goes into coaching a team. Great job coaches! I think it is fair to say that even at a time when the town is trying to work through the many issues we are currently facing, we still can come together in so many ways to volunteer, coach and work with each other for the right reasons. Hats off to all who give to our community in the many wonderful ways.

BU DEAN'S LIST

Anne C. Barber of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester. Fantastic!

TM BABYSITTING

As a community service, the Cohasset High School Student Council is hosting a Town Meeting Camp for children 3 (out of diapers) and older at the Cohasset Middle/High School. Preregistration is required by Wednesday, March 29. Please call Student Council Advisor and High School Teacher David Ames at 781-383-6100 ext. 156 and leave a voice mail with the number of children attending.

Maj. James Quinn, standing second from left, and other members of the Marine All-Weather Fighter Attack Squardron 533 in Iraq say thanks to Cohasset for all the Girl Scout cookies.

COLLEGE HONORS

Congratulations to Jenn Buckley, Class of '09 at Northeastern University's School of Nursing, who was named to the Dean's List for the Fall semester. Your family and friends are all very proud of your hard work. Keep it up!

CALLING ALL GARDENERS

Through Cohasset Elder Affairs, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset cordially invites seniors to attend a special presentation by landscape historian Virginia Lopez Begg, entitled "New Women, Old Gardens" on Tuesday, March 28 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. Following the Garden Club business meeting at 9:30 a.m. Ms. Begg will discuss the birth of the garden club movement at the dawn of the 20th century, and the influence of the 1901 book Old Time Gardens on American women and their gardens. She will emphasize design and its history, and the importance of the garden as a place of beauty. Coffee will be served at 9:00 a.m. CEA participants are asked to sign up prior to the meeting date.

BONE MARROW DRIVE

A bone marrow drive will take place at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, on March 25, from 10am to 4pm. IMPORTANT NOTICE TO DES DAUGHTERS

Time May Be Running Out For Your Compensation Claim

DES (Diethylstibestrol) was prescribed for pregnant women during the 1950s and 1960s after Harvard researchers incorrectly concluded, without proper testing, that it helped prevent miscarriage. Even though, the manufacturers of DES knew that the drug crossed the placenta and effected the growth of the offsprings' reproductive organs. They conducted no studies or warned of this effect. In 1954, the first controlled study of DES effectiveness revealed that the drug did not work and in 1971, DES was banned for pregnant women. Recent studies report serious side effects associated with prenatal DES exposure including:

- Infertility
- Pre-Term Delivery
- Ectopic Pregnancy
- Adenocarcinoma Of The Cervix Or Vagina

If your mother took DES when pregnant with you and you suffer from any of the above injuries, you may be entitled to compensation.

Sandcastles Child Care rides the wave of change

New owner is at the helm

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After 10-plus years at the helm of Sandcastles Child Care Center, co-owners Lynn Durkin and Anne Sexton have passed the torch to Cohasset resident Sara Sullivan.

With enthusiasm for the job and boundless creativity, Sullivan is working with Durkin and Sexton to make sure the transition is a smooth one. Sullivan became the sole owner of the business Feb. 15, and is now enjoying making the business her own, while continuing the mission and educational goals set by her predecessors.

Sullivan has lived on the South Shore for seven years, and in Cohasset for three. The Forest Avenue resident and mother of two had been working in the corporate world since last May, but after some soul-searching decided the time was right for her to pursue a new, more "mommy-friendly" career.

"I wanted to do something I cared about, and Sandcastles kept coming into my mind," she said, adding it is a business she has come to know very well over the past seven years. Her oldest son Sam, who is now in first grade, was in Sandcastles from infancy through kindergarten. Her youngest son Jake is currently in the Sandcastles pre-kindergarten program. "We've been raising my children together all these years, it just seemed like a natural fit," said Sullivan.

Sullivan decided to approach Durkin and Sexton and let them know that whether it was now, or 10 years from now, if they were ever interested in selling their share or a portion of their share of the business, she would be very interested. Coincidentally, Sexton, who has been the director at Sandcastles for the past 10 years, had recently begun thinking about retiring within the next year or two.

"We had been approached by a couple of people a few years ago, but it wasn't the right time," said Durkin. However, once Sexton began talking about her retirement, Durkin began contemplating buying out Sexton's share and running the business on her own. But with her own CPA practice and five children at home, Durkin ultimately decided running the business herself might be too much to take on at this time, and seriously began considering Sullivan's offer.

Former owners of Sandcastles Child Care Center Lynn Durkin, left, and Anne Sexton, center, and new owner Sara Sullivan, stand with some of Sandcastle's pre-kindergarten students.

The papers were signed Feb. 15 and all three women say everything has worked out for the best. Sexton said there comes a time when a business needs to have an injection of new energy, and Sullivan is providing that new spark. "She's like Tigger, all bouncing with enthusiasm and I'm kind of like Pooh Bear," she quipped. Durkin and Sexton will help with the transition, and Sexton will stay on as director for the next nine months.

Sullivan said she has many ideas for ways to increase the offerings at Sandcastles to meet the needs of families in the area. Sandcastles services families from many South Shore towns, and Sullivan's ultimate goal is to send every child off to elementary school with the tools they need to succeed. She said she will be working with the local schools to ensure the lessons taught at Sandcastles mesh with the curriculum provided at local schools, and children enter into kindergarten or the first grade at the level where they are expected to be.

Continuing the success of the Sandcastles full-day kindergarten program is also a goal of Sullivan's. Currently, the ratio of teachers to students is 11 to 2, which Sullivan said is a very educationally nurturing environment for children. She hopes to be able to expand the full-day program to offer Spanish classes, more art, music, and dance.

Sullivan also has plans to expand the summer program at Sandcastles. Children attend Sandcastles year-round, but the curriculum changes during the summer months to allow children to have some "down time" and enjoy their summer, while continuing their educational experience. Children already participate in swimming lessons, take trips to the beach and the South Shore Music Circus, and explore at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. Sullivan would also like to expand the Sandcastles winter programming and begin offering indoor gym classes to help keep children active when it's too cold to play outside.

Above all, Sullivan said she will work hard to retain the excellent staff at Sandcastles and help attract more staff like them with the same level of enthusiasm and dedication. She said Durkin and Sexton "have done an outstanding job attracting and retaining an incredible staff. They understood the importance of continuity in childcare and have gone to great lengths to keep the staff happy. The result has been a very stable and nurturing environment, run by a staff that seems more like a family," she said, which is exactly what drew her to bring her eldest son there seven years ago.

Durkin and Sexton said everyone at Sandcastles is behind the change 100 percent. She said while many parents were skeptical when they heard the business would be changing ownership, once they heard Sullivan was taking over, all fears were allayed. "I feel proud to hand over the legacy we've created. I know it's going to be in capable hands," said Durkin.

Sara Sullivan, right, stands with her son Jake, 4, who is in the kindergarten program at Sandcastles Child Care Center. Both of Sullivan's children have attended Sandcastles over the past seven years, which led her to inquire about purchasing the business from co-owners Anne Sexton, left, and Lynn Durkin. The women signed the business over to Sullivan Feb. 15.

Anne Sexton, former owner of Sandcastles Child Care Center, makes sure kindergarten student Max Lobe has his hat on straight while getting ready for a field trip. Sexton will stay on as Director at Sandcastles until the end of the year to help new owner Sara Sullivan transition smoothly into her new role.

Young performers gear up for coffeehouse fund-raiser

Event to benefit Boys and Girls Clubs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This will be a youth-oriented upscale coffeehouse with some excellent, hand-picked performers."
— Jim Armstrong, coordinator

There is no shortage of young, musical talent on the South Shore, and no one knows that better than guitar teacher Jim Armstrong. While all 50 of his students participate in recitals held for their families and friends, some already have the "itch" to perform in front of a larger audience.

"After they perform, so many ask, 'When is the next gig?' After a while, I knew I had to come up with another one," said Armstrong.

To keep that performance bug alive, Armstrong, along with the Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church, have teamed up to put on the BlueJay Café Coffeehouse. The event will take place Friday, April 7 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Bates Hall at the church at 43 Highland Ave., next to Town Hall. Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children. Tickets will be sold at the door.

"This will be a youth-oriented upscale coffeehouse with some excellent, hand-picked performers," said Armstrong, adding the proceeds from the event will go toward two very good causes. He said after discussing it with some of the children, the general consensus was, they would like to donate part of the funds to a charity which helps other children. Together, they settled on the Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston, and they hope to have a representative from that organization attend the coffeehouse to allow for a formal check presentation that night. The other half of the proceeds will be donated to the Second Congregational Church to help fund the Appalachia Service Project. "We have the capacity for 250 and hopefully, we'll pack the house," Armstrong said.

Armstrong said he named the coffeehouse the BlueJay Café after the Bluebird Café, a small café in Nashville where new songwriters are showcased on stage every Sunday night. Armstrong said industry professionals and tourists alike swarm the café to hear the hit-makers of tomorrow. "Garth Brooks was discovered at the Bluebird Café," he said, and quipped while word may not reach Nashville in time for any producers to be on hand during the BlueJay Café, those South Shore residents who do attend are sure to be impressed with the talent.

There will be roughly 10 performances during the coffeehouse, and what is sure to be the most exciting element of the evening is that each student will have the opportunity to "front a band." Armstrong and his two brothers Gerard and Joe make up the Armstrong Brothers Band, which will be providing the backup music and a professional sound system.

Cohasset residents Mimi Mahoney, 14, and her brother Rob, 12, and Maddie Curley, 9, will be among those performing. All three said they cannot wait until the performance. "It's fun playing in front of people," said Mimi to which her brother added, "Especially in front of people we don't know."

Armstrong said because the coffeehouse will feature performers from towns all over the South Shore, he hopes to be able to get the kids networking with each other. "We need to get talented people to meet each other, and maybe someday they can form bands," he said. He said he remembers when he was growing up in Marshfield, everyone who was involved with music knew the kids from other towns who shared that interest, and there was a great musical community. "I think they could really excel if they're all brought together," he said.

The number of students Armstrong teaches continues to grow, which he said is the main reason he is able to coordinate events such as the coffeehouse. He said he hopes to continue offering BlueJay Café events in different locations throughout the course of the year. Armstrong said he is sure this first coffeehouse will be a success and said he can't wait to "Unleash the talent I've assembled to the town."

Maddie Curley, Rob Mahoney, and his sister Mimi Mahoney practice their guitars in Bates Hall in preparation for the upcoming BlueJay Café Coffeehouse, which will take place at the Second Congregational Church Friday, April 7. All three are students of guitar teacher Jim Armstrong, who coordinated the event with the Rev. Gary Ritts to serve both as a fund-raiser for charity and a fun way for the students to showcase their talent.

Local guitar teacher Jim Armstrong shares the story of how he teamed up with the Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church to coordinate the BlueJay Café Coffeehouse. The event will serve as a fund-raiser, as well as a way for Armstrong's students from all over the South Shore to perform together. Proceeds from the event will be split between the Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston and the Second Congregational Church.

Road Race by the Sea celebrates milestone

Foundation, the Boston Red Sox, Shaw's and Star Supermarkets and Harvard Pilgrim Healthcare. After making a few last-minute color changes just prior to printing, Conforti said he is happy with the way the shirts have come out.

The new shirts are sure to be an added bonus for many runners whose main objective is to get out and run the first race of the season in preparation for the Boston Marathon, along what is arguably the most beautiful road race course on the South Shore. Brad Goodwin said due to all the construction going on in town, traffic will be a challenge as detours have already blocked off many points of access in town. He said the roads will not be closed on the day of the races as they usually are, but it would help if residents could avoid traveling on the routes during the events. He added he has been working with Police Chief James Hussey as well as Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan to help mitigate traffic concerns.

In years past, Brad Goodwin said there are usually around 850 runners who participate in the Road Race and as of this Monday, already 340 had pre-registered. "We're about 20 percent above where we have been in past years," he said. While Cohasset may seem like a small, out-of-the-way town, the Road Race has already drawn one runner from England and two from Puerto Rico. There are also representatives from all the New England states and New York pre-registered to run.

While the race is a large part of the day, the Fran Coffey Memorial Race is also a big draw. Coffey was instrumental in organizing the Road Race as well as the fun walk year after year, and last year, the walk was renamed to serve as a memorial in his honor. The proceeds from the walk will be donated to "People In Need" at St. Patrick's in Roxbury and Bishop Ruocco House for Girls in Lakeville.

Due to the success of the race and the walk, Goodwin said volunteers are always welcome, especially this year when directing traffic will be essential. "We have a core group of great volunteers, but we could always use a few more," he said. Goodwin added the business community has been very generous both this year and in year's past, even when their services are needed in a pinch.

Rotary Communications Chairman Jean Roche said any donations that can be used to give as prizes to the runners, including gift certificates to local restaurants , and sneakers would be appreciated. She said there are 12 different categories of runners and prizes are given to those with the best time in each category. However, she said this year, the Rotary is considering giving prizes to the man and woman who are the last, and most determined, to finish the race.

The Rotary Club will be supporting some new charities this year with the proceeds from the Road Race. It is working with the Rotary Club of Bourne and Sandwich as well as Rotary International to support digging 11 deep water wells in Calauag Quezon in the Philippines. It is also working with the Scituate Rotary Club and Rotary International to help support a dentist who is working at a hospital for children in Cambodia. It is working with the Hingham and Hull Rotary and Rotary International to start up a scholarship program in Foneducar, Colombia. "It's kind of exciting for us as a small club," to be involved with so many wonderful projects around the world, Goodwin said.

Pre-registration for the walk and run is strongly recommended. Register to run or walk at www.roadracebythesea.com or check for more information at www.coolrunning.com. Applications will also be available in Cohasset at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shop, and the South Shore Community Center. Online registration is $15, mail-in registration is $18. On site registration is $20 and will be held at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St., on Saturday, April 1, and Sunday April 2 from 9 a.m. until noon. Projects line up for preservation funding cannot be used for the general operating budget. The money can only be spent by Town Meeting under the recommendation of the Community Preservation Committee. Therefore, it's not an emergency slush fund.

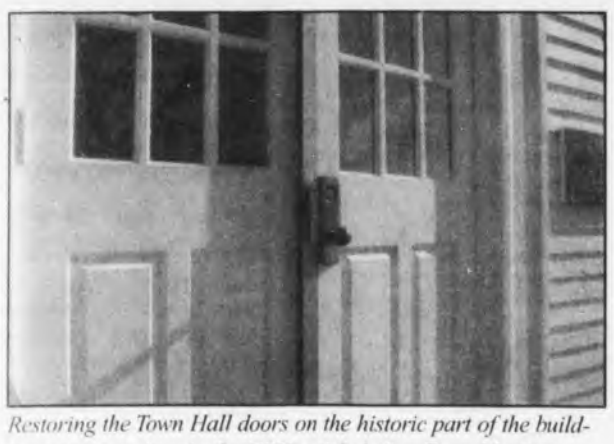
Ivimey explained the CPC monitors projects that receive grants including approving each invoice before its paid and ensuring that any work falls within the parameters of the Community Preservation Act that allows grants for historic preservation, open space protection and low and moderate income housing.

The CPC draws its funds from two sources: the real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset it is 1.5 percent) and some level of matching funds from the state (currently 100 percent), derived from a roughly $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office, mostly mortgages and refinancing. Cohasset was one of 32 towns in Commonwealth that adopted the legislation at the first opportunity, but more than 100 towns are now participating.

In Cohasset, the 1.5 percent surcharge adds $97.56 to the annual property tax bill of a home valued at $700,000.

If all allocations are approved at the April 8 Town Meeting, the preservation fund will still have $222,000 in its various accounts left over with an influx of money coming in fiscal 2007 from the surcharge and state match.

In fiscal year 2006, the town collected $274,000 through the real estate tax surcharge. The state is expected to match that amount this October. In fiscal year 2007, the surcharge is expected to generate $306,000 which coupled with the state match of $274,000 (100 percent of the fiscal 2006 surcharge), would provide the town with $580,000 in new funds for the preservation fund.



Restoring the Town Hall doors on the historic part of the building is just one item in the CPC article before Town Meeting.

• Town Meeting voters will be asked to approve allocating $80,000 from the fund for the restoration of the Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum on Elm Street in the village and the Pratt Building on South Main Street. The historical society will provide at match of $12,500.

The money would help restore two chimneys at the Wilson House, one chimney at the Maritime Museum and the wood balustrade at the Pratt Building, which is the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Plans also include restoring the exterior of the Maritime Museum, including the wood gutters, wood windows and sills and the structure's interior including updating the lighting and wiring.

Both the Wilson House and Maritime Museum are listed on the National Register of Historic Places and are a focal point of downtown Cohasset.

If voters approve the allocation, it would bring the total community preservation funds provided to the historical society for projects over the past five years to $630,000 of which $300,000 helped build two apartments in the Pratt building.

Community Preservation Committee Chairman Stuart Ivimey said communication between the CPC and historical society has been "great."

"The society has been very cooperative in letting me know the status of their projects," he said.

• Another project that involves historical preservation is restoring the front doors in the old part of Town Hall. The CPC is recommending $8,000 from the preservation fund be allocated for this project.

• To support affordable housing, voters will be also asked to appropriate $10,000 to purchase commercial washers and dryers at Harborview Apartments, the Cohasset Housing Authority property at 60 Elm St. The appliances, which are in common use, would be coin-operated with those monies helping to pay for their maintenance.

In past years, voters have approved community preservation fund grants to replace stoves at 60 Elm St., add security locks, and replace the siding on the buildings for a total of about $560,000 including this year's proposed allocation.

• $300,000 to restore and improve the Beechwood Ballpark and playground area – which would fall under "open space preservation" is also proposed. Ivimey said the project would be "a great opportunity to make a substantial improvement to that part of town." At a recent meeting, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer expressed regret that no matching funds were raised for the project. Ivimey said project proponents weren't able to raise any money privately but stressed the importance of the project. He described the field, which is used nearly every day, as a "quagmire" on a rainy day.

• Also falling under the CPC "open space" umbrella, is a proposed $120,000 grant for the Water Commission to buy a parcel of land near Brass Kettle Brook as part of the commission's continuing effort to protect the town's water supply.

• Voters will also be asked to approve $60,000, which is half the cost, of a new veterans honor roll at Veterans Memorial Park at the harbor.

After five years, communities are allowed to "opt out" of the Community Preservation Act. There's no sunsetting provision, Ivimey explained, therefore, a community would have to take affirmative action to opt out or change its surcharge percentage. He says most people in Cohasset seem to be happy with the fund.

"To be honest if we didn't have the Community Preservation Fund, we wouldn't have money available to help the historical society, help purchase open space or upgrade the Beechwood Ballpark," he said. "There would be no sympathy with taking money out of the town or school budgets to improve the quality of life for people in town through these projects."

"It's a terrific fund that is brilliantly conceived because it is outside the ordinary political process," he said.

The CPA at a glance

• Cohasset is one of 32 towns that adopted the Community Preservation Act for this fiscal year. Eighteen more towns have adopted the legislation and will participate in the program next year.

• Funds from the CPA can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation.

• Aside from minor administrative costs, the CPC does not spend money. The CPC only makes recommendations to the legislative authority in a town or municipality, (in Cohasset's case, Town Meeting).

• Each year, the CPC must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of the three specific areas.

• CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and a some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. So far Cohasset and other participating towns have received a 100 percent state match each year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

Override 'True or False'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Judging by calls to the Mariner, interviews and statements made around town and at meetings, there are many misconceptions floating around town concerning this year's override vote. Below are some "true or false" questions to help alleviate some of the confusion.

1. The lower override figure must pass in order for the higher override figure to pass.

Answer: FALSE — Both override figures are scheduled to be voted on at Town Meeting and at the Special Election. Each figure will be taken up separately. At the April 1 Town Meeting, residents will first vote the $725,000 figure up or down and will then vote the $1.495 million figure up or down. If both pass by a majority at Town Meeting, both overrides will then be voted on again at a special Town Election on Saturday, May 6. Voters will have the choice to vote yes or no on each question. Voters can also opt not to vote a question by leaving it blank.

2. Voting yes for the lower override during the Special Election will take votes away from the higher override.

Answer: FALSE — An override passes at an election if it receives a majority vote, regardless of how many people voted or how large the majority. Both override questions will be voted on separately. However, if the larger override passes by a majority vote, it automatically wins. Therefore, if the larger override ends up with 51 percent majority, it will win no matter what. If both overrides pass, only the larger override takes effect.

3. Voters will have three budget options to choose from at Town Meeting.

Answer: TRUE — Voters will have to take three budget votes: one to approve a budget of $32,891,761 which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 and does not require an override; one to approve allocating an additional $725,000; and one to approve allocating an additional $1.495 million. Voting yes on both override figures only ensures both figures will be put on the May 6 Special Election ballot.

4. Cohasset will be voting on a pyramid override.

Answer: TRUE — A pyramid override asks voters to determine which, if any, of two or more funding levels they are willing to approve. Voters may vote for or against each question independently. Any question is approved if a majority of the persons voting on that question voted "yes." If more than one question is approved, the question with the highest dollar amount wins.

5. Cohasset has never had a pyramid override before.

Answer: FALSE — In 1999 there was a $766,000 override that failed at the regular Town Election by a margin of 60-40 percent. Due to problems balancing the budget, selectmen later called a Special Election for late May with three override questions on the ballot: one for $612,895, one for $509,554, and one for $380,000. The only figure to receive a majority vote (1413-1364) was the $380,000 figure.

6. Taxes will be increased permanently if the override passes.

Answer: TRUE — The town is looking to pass an operating budget override. Unlike debt exclusion overrides, which are typically passed to cover special projects, such as sewer construction and school renovations, and for which taxes go away after the debt is paid off, operating budget override increases are permanent.

7. Residents should cast their votes for the override at the Town Election on Saturday, April 1.

Answer: FALSE — The voting for the override will be done at the Special Town Election to be held Saturday, May 6. The April 1 election will only determine who will be the next residents to hold elected office.

8. Residents can propose changes to the budget on the floor of Town Meeting.

Answer: TRUE — Any resident can make a motion to amend the budget on the floor of Town Meeting as long as the change abides by the rules. The budget's bottom line cannot be increased, which means because the Board of Selectmen has approved a figure of $32,891,761, any changes must be made within that budget. Money can be moved from one line item to another in the municipal budget, and it would take a majority vote to pass the transfer.

By state law, the school budget is approved as a bottom line figure; Town Meeting does not "lock in" line items in the school budget.

Town Meeting voters cannot change the amount of the override figures, under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, only the Board of Selectmen can do that.

Town Manager Bill Griffin wants to ensure all residents are well informed before casting their votes at either Town Meeting April 1, or the Special Election May 6. He said therefore, he will be fully explaining the process for voting at Town Meeting and there will be a special set of instructions printed on the Special Election ballots to ensure votes are cast in their intended manner. Residents that have questions may contact Griffin at the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

How would taxes be affected?

The total tax bill for fiscal 2006 (includes debt exclusion charges and Community Preservation Act surcharge) for the owner of a home valued at $750,000 is $8,235. Without an override, that same person would pay $8,316 in taxes for fiscal 2007, which would be an increase of $81. With the $725,000 override, that overall increase would expand to $330 of which $249 would be attributed to the override. With the $1.495 million override, the overall increase would be $594, of which $513 would be attributed to the override.

How would override funding be split?

If the $725,000 override passes, the school department would add $530,000 to its budget, and the municipal budget would add $195,000. The town would need to spend roughly $36,321 of its allocation to pay for fringe benefits for both town and school department employees which are retained or added as a result of the additional funds.

If the $1.495 million override passes, the school department would add $1.1 million to its budget and the town would add $395,000. Within the town's $395,000 would be the items the town would receive with the lower override as well as $10,000 to increase library staff hours and $10,000 for public works contracted services. The rest of its allocation, or $216,321, would be spent on fringe benefits for school and town employees.

OPINION

Traffic headaches

We were driving along Grove Street in Norwell recently and there was a female driver behind us in an SUV that wasn't happy that we were traveling the speed limit.

She served around trying to pass and then tailgated us, at times waving her available hand while she held her cell phone up to her ear with the other hand.

It is impossible to pass a car along Grove Street and nearly impossible to pull over safely – so we were both stuck in this uncomfortable situation for several minutes.

When we reached the red light at Grove Street and Route 53 — we were planning to head straight across to Eastern Bank and the female, who was behind us, was making a right onto Route 53 — so we were suddenly side-by-side.

Those in both cars could now put a face on the individuals that were causing each so much irritation.

Our passenger made the mistake of asking the woman, who was nicely dressed and is probably a nice person under other circumstances, what her problem was. We were then greeted by a hand gesture that cannot be repeated in polite company.

What happens to many of us when we are behind the wheel has been documented for years in the police log that reports countless "traffic stops" every week.

Our lives are so packed with activities and time constraints that we are always in a hurry and think having a "lead foot" on the accelerator will get us there faster.

But the irony is, those of us who "impede" traffic by following the speed limit often catch up to the "speeders" at the next light.

The fact is Grove Street in Norwell is still a neighborhood where people live and children grow up. However, like many area streets, it has turned into a "cut-through." People from Norwell, Scituate and parts of Cohasset take Grove Street to busy Route 53 and beyond.

To help combat the problem in their town, Hingham police are using a solar-powered, radar trailer — that clocks the speed and displays it on a large digital display — to alert motorists about the speed they are travelling. Most of us don't realize how "slow" 30 m.p.h. is because, short of hitting the brakes when we react to a police cruiser waiting on the side of the road, we rarely travel at that speed.

Nothing affects quality of life more profoundly than traffic-clogged streets and speeding cars through otherwise peaceful neighborhoods.

With traffic tie-ups due to work resuming at Queen Ann's Corner, train construction here and in neighboring towns, and more road repair in the months ahead – all of us need to allow more time to get where we are going. And if someone in front of you is going the speed limit, do not "road rage" them. Turn on some easy listening music and relax. All of us will be happier for it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Point on all-day kindergarten clarified

TO THE EDITOR:

Coleman Nee's letter in last week's Mariner lifted a statement I made out of one context and applied it to another context. The context he applied it to concerned the value of an all-day kindergarten program, and I fully agree with him on its value. My three children attended an all-day kindergarten program before starting in the Cohasset school system.

The point I tried to make in my original statement was that the charges for attending Cohasset's voluntary full-day kindergarten should be at least equal to the charges that a family would pay for day care. Presently Cohasset charges far below the cost of day care, so it's a no-brainer for a parent to enroll a child in our all day kindergarten – it's cheaper than day care and education is thrown in to boot! Hence my original statement, "Daycare with education."

The town has extreme budget constraints, and it is incumbent on us to pursue all reasonable means to ease them. One way of doing so is to charge for voluntary full-day kindergarten at or above the market rate for day care, and I would like to see our schools do so.

Missing from Town Report

TO THE EDITOR:

The vital statistics of the town are not in the town report. I cannot remember ever that births, marriages and death records were not there. It is useful for genealogists, legal matters and just family needs to have them there.

I cannot imagine why they are missing I also notice that for several years the graduating class is missing from the school report. It is useful for class reunions and other data. We are a small town so this is not too much work to place it in the town report.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Roger Hill spells out his priorities

" I would greatly appreciate your support and vote for the one open seat on the Board of Selectman at this year's town election on April 8.

"The Cohasset we all love is increasingly polarized around issues of taxes, growth, the environment, and preservation of the character of our Town. As a long term resident, I remember other times when it seemed that intense questions would overwhelm us. We survived to enjoy the community we have today. Cohasset is a great place to live for all, no matter how long each of us may have made it our home.

" We survived those past battles over issues like school construction, sewer policy, and zoning because our open form of government and mutual respect for all citizens are our greatest traditions. As a selectman, my most important job will be to make sure that every citizen, every department, and every neighborhood has a place at the table; in terms of the decision making that will guide Cohasset.

" With my three-year service on the Advisory Committee, the Town's central fiscal oversight and planning body, I have the unique perspective of having worked with every department in building our school and town budgets from the bottom up. I have been a part of the evaluation of each proposed policy and zoning change brought to town meeting during this time well. With the immense challenges facing the Town fiscally, I have gained the detailed understanding of our schools and town services needed by each selectman.

" My priorities in working with my colleagues on the Board of Selectmen are:

• Reduce new capital spending — with the exception of replacement needs for items like our police cruisers and school buses that have programmed life cycles — to as close to zero as possible for the next 3 to 7 years. We need to ratchet down the heavy debt load we as taxpayers now bear.

• Work with the School Committee to determine how we implement the new Strategic Plan for the Schools as far as possible over its 5 year planning cycle. The responsibility of selectmen and the town manager is to determine what can be funded, and to plan where some level of overrides will be absolutely necessary to sustain improvement in our schools. The role of selectmen is not to second-guess the work that has already gone into the Plan.

• Support the efforts of the Planning Board and Economic Development Committee to prudently expand taxable commercial development opportunities so we can find some level of tax relief for those of us who are homeowners, while maintaining quality school and town services.

• Work to implement the vision of Cohasset, as a seen in the Master Plan, of a community that preserves our local character while providing for affordable housing, security for our seniors, and the best services possible. www.RogerQHill.com"

Nothing homey about MBTA bungalows

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

For those of you who pay careful attention while you are navigating Cohasset's detours, you may have noticed a new addition to the landscape at the Beechwood rail crossing. This week the MBTA installed the first signal bungalow.

The term "bungalow," in the context of a home, conjures up an image of a warm inviting style. But, in the railroad context that is not quite true. So, what is a signal bungalow and why is it used? The answer is simple. The signal bungalows hold all of the necessary electronics for the train system for its communications and control of the crossing gates. In the case of the Greenbush, the bungalows are all metal buildings and are painted hunter green. In addition there will be two other metal boxes of smaller size associated with each bungalow installation. One of these boxes is a meter panel that holds the electric meter for the incoming utility power. This box then distributes power to the bungalow and the other box through conduits. The second box holds the relays and associated direct controls for the road and pedestrian gates.

Each railroad crossing will be the home of a signal bungalow installation, with the exception of Castle Road and Sestito Lane. These are two private ways that will each have a one lane "private crossing." In this case, since these two roads are very close together, their controls will share a common signal bungalow system.

Since we have been involved with the Greenbush, on the Town's behalf, we have been asking for detailed information about the dimensional and construction details of each signal bungalow. These have never been provided by the MBTA to the Town. The reason we have been concerned about this is that where these bungalows are in or adjacent to areas deemed by the Massachusetts Historic Commission to be historic. In historic areas there are additional considerations that must be met by the MBTA. Their infrastructure must be constructed and sited in a way that is compatible with the historic surroundings. And, since signal bungalows are an essential part of the train system and cannot be done away with, visual screening needs to be employed to make them a bit less intrusive. Without detailed information, in our opinion, we don't see how the adequacy of siting or screening can be determined.

For example, a signal bungalow and its associated other boxes will be a part of the crossing at Pleasant Street. The bungalow is scheduled to be located at the base of the large sycamore tree closest to Pleasant Street, where it will be very visible and in the middle of everything. We have been especially concerned about the visual effects of the design and placement of this particular bungalow. Yet, without the detailed dimensions and construction of this bungalow it seems that the MBTA and most oversight and approval agencies think that the siting and visual screening are very adequate. Keep in mind that the approved screening is being done with four species of plants, three of which will lose their leaves each fall. We feel that falls short of the definition of screening. When asked if perhaps, the two auxiliary structures could be mounted on the sides of the bungalow, reducing the overall foot print, the MBTA said that could be done due to internal MBTA work rules. Our feeling is that this is not a compelling reason. We are still trying to get answers on this topic and will keep you posted!

Crossing construction continues in Cohasset. Sohier Street is still a beehive of activity. The most complicated construction here is the addition of a new pipe to carry James Brook under the crossing. This is a major construction project, with a lot of concrete work necessary at each end of the new pipe. The fact that James Brook still flows through while the work is underway is quite a complicating factor. There is a large gasoline powered pump that has the job of moving all of the water in James Brook from one side of the construction to the other. This is so the construction areas can be kept reasonably dry for the concrete work.

Pleasant Street crossing construction still waits for the asphalt plants to reopen. A new storm drain connection in the road in front of Pat's Barber Shop was completed this week, but this was a relatively minor construction task.

Pond Street rock removal is scheduled to begin on Monday, March 27 at the foot of Pond Street. All of the work that you have seen in the last 4 or 5 months at this location has been courtesy of the Water Department. Now, it's the MBTA's turn. Speaking of the Water Dept., between Water and the MBTA, Cohasset has become the detour sign capital of the World. Most people seem to be coping with this current state of affairs, but we do admit it is frustrating. Many times we have started out to go somewhere, taking our old habitual route, only to realize "I can't get there from here." Then we feel foolish and backtrack.

The newly installed Beechwood Street signal bungalow.

The signal bungalows hold all of the necessary electronics for the train system for its communications and control of the crossing gates.

Speaking of detours, we have been working with CBB, the contractor about their detour signs. It seems that with the windy weather, they haven't been able to find a good way to keep the signs in place. But, we both keep trying.

The 30th annual Cohasset Rotary Road Race by-the-Sea happens on Sunday, April 2nd. The reason we mention that here, is that with all of the detours, Cohasset residents need to be aware of the traffic conditions during the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk (10 a.m., Sandy Beach start) and the Road Race (1 p.m., Town Common start). In addition to additional traffic generated by participants and spectators coming from out of Town, the detours will increase the automotive traffic during the race. Unless we are all very careful while the runners and walkers are on the roads, a serious accident might result. Please be courteous to the runners and walkers. Safety is very important.

More to harbor than Cohasset Cove

MARINER'S CORNER

STEVE BOBO

A large part of the tidal system that represents Cohasset Harbor finds its way from Scituate. It begins at the straight channel clearing Whitehead in the upper left corner of the illustration. The white roughly horizontal line about a third of the way down the picture is Bassing Beach. At the eastern end of which is Briggs Harbor, once, a center of shipbuilding for Scituate. There, one finds a small meandering stream going to Minot Beach. Below the crescent of Bassing, is Wood Island, and the adjacent Horse Island to its right. Below the left or western end of Bassing is Bailey's Creek shaped like a rectangle because of dredging. The creek passes Rice Island and goes up toward Otis Avenue, which connects, to Indian Trail in Scituate.

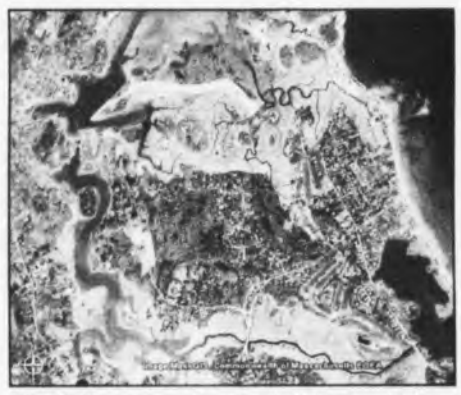
A major part of Cohasset's estuary system is the Gulf. Here begins the sandy marsh system of small streams, which characterizes the southeast part of the state. The early Gulf seems to have contained a part of Cohasset's industrial activity. There were as many as five mills on Bound Brook leading to the Mordecai Lincoln Mill at Factory Pond in Scituate, the dark spot in the lower left, a tributary to the Gulf. And, of course, there was a mill at the race where the Gulf begins. At one time, it was a gristmill, but it was converted several times because the Gulf served as the engine to power many endeavors.

The early Gulf seems to have contained a part of Cohasset's industrial activity

In winter, boats were brought up into the Gulf, which would stay ice-free at least to Supper Island, the oval shape on the left as the gulf meanders south toward Scituate. Sam Crocker, progenitor of as many fine yachts as almost any designer in New England had his yard on the Gulf River, just opposite Supper Island. There was a bit of a flap when one of the Town's biggest donkey engines and boat hauling slipways were sold and covered over by the foundation of a dwelling some called a mansion.

Turning east, the Gulf leaves the environs of South Main Street and goes toward Gannett Road, crossing under and eventually finding its way through an artificial cut south of Hatherly Country Club into Musquashicut Pond.

And so we see that we share with Scituate an important and beautiful resource. This sharing together has always been important: Salt hay and shellfish resources in the past and now, beautiful vistas for our pleasure and recreation. This is a vital bond with our adjacent town, which we must together maintain. The Gulf Association, with both towns participating, is both a symbol of that bond and a means for its maintenance.



The Gulf creates a bond with Scituate which both Towns need to care for.

HEALTH NOTES

Getting particular about particulates

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Have you noticed recently, that our cars, left outside, become dirty quicker? This column has commented in the past about the amount of siltation which goes on in our waterbodies, but it goes on everywhere. That's what dust is. When you wipe off your piano, you're wiping off silt. Think about how much is in the air and falls on everything outside. Well, there's an increasing awareness of the fact that particles now in the air are different from those in it, say, way back in 1970.

Researchers at the Bloomberg School of Public Health reported a March 8, 2006 study, which made an association between particulate matter levels and mortality nationwide. It's title: "Fine Particles Increase Hospital Admissions for Heart Failure and Cardiovascular Disease."

Short-term exposure to fine particulate matter—the microscopic particles that pollute the air—increased hospital admissions for cardiovascular and respiratory disease among Medicare participants. In 2002, for every 10 micrograms per cubic meter increase in particulate matter, the researchers calculated 11,000 additional cardiovascular and respiratory disease hospitalizations. Increased risk for cardiovascular disease hospitalizations, as a result of increased levels of particulate matter, was highest in counties located in the eastern United States. The study authors created a reproducible approach for tracking the health risks of air pollution nationwide. The study is published in the edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Particulate matter is an airborne mixture of solid particles and liquid droplets. The solid particles come in numerous shapes and sizes and may be composed of different chemical components. Fine particles, defined as 2.5 micrometers or less in size (approximately 1/30th the diameter of a human hair), can penetrate deep into the body's respiratory system. Airborne particles come from a variety of sources, including coal-burning power plants, factories, automobiles, tilled fields, stone crushing and the burning of wood. Other particles may be formed in the air when sunlight and water vapor react with gases emitted from burning fuels.

"By linking geographical locations and the health information of roughly all Medicare enrollees to the national air pollution and weather monitoring network and to U.S. census data, we can now routinely estimate health effects of air pollution nationally and regionally," said the study's lead author, Francesca Dominici, PhD, associate professor in the Department of Biostatistics at the Bloomberg School of Public Health.

The researchers estimated associations between day-to-day changes in hospital admission rates for cardiovascular and respiratory outcomes (heart failure, heart rhythm disturbances, cerebrovascular events, peripheral vascular disease, ischemic heart disease, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and respiratory infection), as compared to fine particulate matter levels for 204 U.S. urban counties from 1999 to 2002. The study included 11.5 million Medicare enrollees who lived, on average, 5.9 miles from fine particulate matter monitors. The study authors used same day hospitalizations for injuries as control measurements.

Dominici and her colleagues found that a 10 µg/m3 increase in particulate matter was associated with a 1.28 percent increase in the risk of admission for heart failure. Cook County, which includes Chicago, can be used as an example. The area has an annual average fine particle level of 16 µg/m3 and a high level of 56 µg/m3. For each 100 hospital admissions for heart failure, the study results showed approximately one extra hospital admission associated with each 10 µg/m3 daily fine particulate matter increase. Therefore, on days with the highest fine particle levels, the study results predicted five extra hospital admissions for each 100 hospital admissions.

The oldest group of study participants also experienced higher risks of ischemic heart disease, heart rhythm disturbances, heart failure and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease associated with high particulate matter level days. "This study shows an ongoing threat to health from airborne particles," said J. M. Samet, MD, of the Bloomberg School's Department of Epidemiology.

Obvious? Yes! But we can't change what's drifting in on us from the west; what we can do is: first recognize that clean air is somewhat different from that which we are breathing. Ensure that early signs like short breath, coughing, asthma, are noticed and acted upon. Not a "sky is falling thing," but a mature recognition that the shape of the enemy is changing. Also, outside burning is no longer acceptable, the smell of leaf smoke is, or should be, an ancient memory.

Southie memoirs

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Back in the days when I worked in downtown Boston, at a time when ice covered most of the earth, I sometimes used to drive in to the office by way of Day Boulevard and L Street in South Boston to avoid the traffic.

Only now, after reading the recently published flurry of memoirs written by and for the sons of their beloved Southie, do I realize how lucky I was to have escaped total annihilation at the hands of the natives.

I used to think that only the Sopranos and their friends could make me nervous as I drove through New Jersey, until I read the reminiscences of John "Red" Shea, Kevin Weeks and Patrick Nee and their recollections of Whitey Bulger.

The literary assault on that section of Boston is so bad that Flynn, the former mayor and a son of Southie, has been calling for creation of an Irish Anti-Defamation League.

Now I can't think of Southie without calling up visions of an Irish Dodge City or a Celtic Beirut.

I couldn't even turn on the History Channel last week, looking for some soothing recreation like Iwo Jima or the battle of the Bulge, without stumbling across something called "Paddy Whacked," featuring the hunt for Whitey Bulger.

All that remains to complete the cycle is for Whitey himself to ship his manuscript out of his hiding place, complaining that he didn't whack all those people and if you don't believe him, he'll whack you, too.

He wouldn't even have to come out of hiding to do it. After all, didn't B. Traven, the author of "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," make a career of taking checks made out to "To Whom It May Concern" sent to General Delivery in Mexico.

But I digress . . .

I shudder to think of what might have happened when I was driving through Southie if I had stopped to let that elderly lady cross the street at L Street and Broadway and someone came out of the L Street Tavern and looked at me.

Knowing then what I know now, I would have fled to the safety of a crack house in Roxbury or at least to the North End into the friendly arms of the Mafia — which stands for, as an elderly Sicilian once told me, "Mothers and Fathers of Italian Ancestry."

The literary assault on that section of Boston that is south of the Fort Point Channel is so bad that Raymond Flynn, the former mayor and a son of Southie, has been calling for creation of an Irish Anti-Defamation League.

"Irish-American culture and history is under attack in America today," he said in a message faxed to the news media. "It's received extraordinary attention. I hope we can get this back on track."

We can start by changing the subtitles of Red Shea's book, "The Life and Times of South Boston's Most Honorable Mobster"

Or Kevin Weeks' book, "The Untold Story of My Life Inside Whitey Bulger's Irish Mob."

Or Patrick Nee's book, "The Inside Story of the Boston Mob-IRA Connection."

Tune in for School Committee debate

Join Our Town co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin as they moderate an exciting, televised School Committee debate on the issues with candidates Lee Jenkins, Steve Fusco, Rick Flynn and former candidate Barbara Buckley.

Remember during this election season to stay tuned Cohasset and Stay Informed!.

The hour-long debate started airing March 23 and will continue to be shown at the following times: during Our Town's regular time slots are Mondays at 9p.m., Tuesdays at 9:30p.m. and Thursday at 8:30p.m. on Channel 10. Why the TOD makes economic sense

COMMENTARY

PETER BROWN

(First of two parts)

Cohasset is at important economic crossroads. Given the current and future cost pressures on our town, the EDC believes we desperately need to generate new sources of income in ways that won't hurt our quintessential character or negatively impact businesses or residents. It is a common sense strategy in the great struggle to achieve our Economic Well Being, a mutual sense of fiscal balance.

What can Cohasset do at this time to alleviate the long term tax impact on our homes? …Is there any good news? The answer is yes! The Economic Development Committee (EDC) believes we have found at least two new revenue sources worthy of consideration at town meeting. They are not silver bullets, but they may have silver linings.

The EDC recommends a YES vote on two zoning articles at the upcoming town meeting – Article #17, Transit Oriented District (TOD) and Article #14, Off Street Parking. Both deal with zoning changes in the 3A Highway Districts. We believe that they will generate new commercial tax revenues far into the future. Any 'dent' these changes make in escalating costs will be a help. Both articles won unanimous approval of the Selectman and the Advisory Committee; the TOD secured a 4-1 vote of the Planning Board, and Parking won a 3-2 vote.

So why does the EDC recommend these articles? Let's discuss TOD first.

The TOD would create the earliest positive impact on the town through the creation of a new zoning overlay district. This new district fits neatly over the existing 28-acre, Light Industry District, located just south of the new train station.

What does this article do and how will it work? It employs 'smart growth' principles to provide for a prudent level of higher density, mixed-use development in the new TOD overlay district. But, it does not infringe on adjacent residential districts. Since much of this land is now dedicated to wet lands reclamation, only 9 acres can be developed. The good news is that it limits the impact of what can be built to a scale that makes sense for Cohasset.

One of the four developable sites has the potential to quadruple its commercial taxes in 18 to 24 months. This would be a win-win solution for the town and the property owner. But there is a catch. If Article 17 does not pass in April, it will not likely be back in the future. Why? Because the train station is under construction now, and now is the only time a zoning article can be passed that will make it possible to coordinate development with the "T". This coordination will integrate the site with the three-acre train station and the new 3A traffic light. It will also reduce the number of curb cuts on 3A, provide better access for vehicles and pedestrians and produce a design that is better for the environment and the town.

As safeguards, the TOD overlay district requires that the developer obtain a special permit and adhere to our site plan approval process. It also provides for an expanded minimum green space along 3A of 35 feet. The bylaw also requires a fiscal impact analysis to allow the town to review in advance estimates for tax revenue and cost impact to the town.

Since we believe that there will be few school-age children in the 12-16 potential residential units in this highway development, we estimate a minimal impact on school costs.

Finally, we do not believe that the TOD will siphon business from the village, since the types of uses in the existing light industry district (coffee, dry-cleaners, antiques) will likely return in the new development, along with other transit and highway oriented businesses. This means more choices for residents and travelers. One village merchant has said that any new way to bring new business anywhere in Cohasset –highway or village —is a good thing.

The TOD is a win-win zoning mechanism that begins to address the town's rising costs with rising revenues. It will surely help and it won't hurt! We believe that a "YES" vote for Article # 17, as one of two ways to generate new commercial tax revenues, just makes good common sense.

Join with the EDC at this crossroad on April 1st! and help promote Cohasset's Economic Well Being, a decision that won't cost you a dime!

The second way to create new commercial tax revenues is the Off-Site Parking Bylaw, Article, #14, which I will review in Part 2 next week.

'Old Colony Square' envisioned

The following was provided by Connell Real Estate & Development Co.

New Jersey-based Connell Real Estate & Development Co. is proceeding with plans for the redevelopment of the former Davenport parcel located at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Way (Route 3A) by the new Cohasset train station. Subject to passage of the proposed "Transit-Oriented Development Overlay District" zoning article at the April 1 Town Meeting, the developer is planning to construct as much as 34,000 square feet of new retail space along with a small number of one- and two-bedroom apartments at the site.

Careful attention is being paid by the developer to the interaction among shoppers, bikers, and residents through the use of walkways, bike paths, benches and bike racks. By incorporating these elements, the development will create a "pedestrian-friendly" environment that will afford shoppers and residents ease of access to the train station.

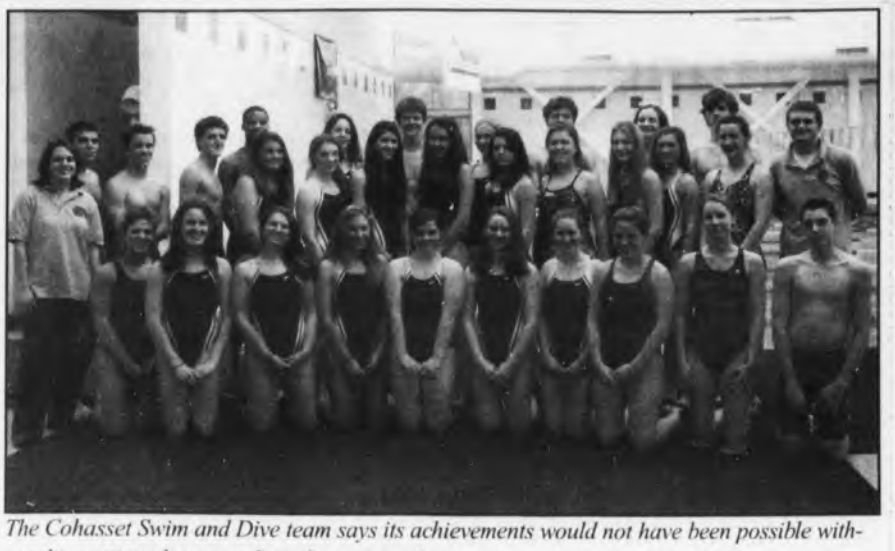
Voter approval of the TOD article would allow for "mixed-use" development in the district, including a limited number of residential units, something which is not permitted under current zoning.

An architect's rendering of 'Old Colony Square' which, if the Transit Oriented District passes Town Meeting, would be built by the Cohasset train station.

"We are extremely hopeful that the Town will see the benefits of the TOD," said Geoffrey Wolf, Chief Investment Officer for the company. "We believe that transit- and pedestrian-friendly smart growth is the wave of the future – a way to promote economic development in an environmentally conscious way, increase the commercial tax base along 3A, all while preserving the character of the Town. Old Colony Square at Cohasset Station will be an attractive gateway to the Town."

Discussions are well underway with the MBTA to coordinate linkages between the sites without impeding the strict deadline imposed by the T to open the station by mid-2007.

The developer's leasing plans are still being formulated. Although no specific tenants have been lined up for the site yet, according to Wolf a preliminary concept plan has been developed. While some of the current tenants have expressed interest in staying at the site after renovations are complete, no agreements have been reached as of yet. "We are also hopeful that we can attract a restaurant to the area," said Wolf. Town residents will get to see a glimpse of what the developer has in mind at the April 1st Town Meeting.



The Cohasset Swim and Dive team says its achievements would not have been possible without the continued support from the community.

Swim team grateful for support

TO THE EDITOR:

Now that the high school swimming season has come to a close, the Cohasset Swim and Dive team would like to thank everybody who donated their time, support and money to make the first season a success.

For a winning season, the team went 6-1 losing only slightly to Duxbury. At the league championships, the team once again place second by placing in almost every event. Competing at the State Sectional Meet, the team took 18 swimmers. We had a very successful meet, with some swimmers placing in their events. In addition, 10 swimmers qualified for the State Championship Meet.

These achievements would not have been possible without the continued support from the community. The Cohasset High School Swim Team would especially like to thank three corporate sponsors whose gifts have helped make this team possible: Coastal Nissan, Dunkin Donuts, and Ocean Builders. Also, thanks to the Cohasset Summer Swim Team who made the first donation to our team and the Cohasset Swim Center for their support and assistance. Many thanks as well to Elizabeth Kissick for her participation in the "Reach the Beach" run, and to Janet Costa who devotedly made, sold and donated the profits from 100 Wrist Wraps. Finally, a special thanks to Atlantica Restaurant who started off this successful season by hosting the Cohasset High School Swim Team Lobster Fest Fundraiser.

Once again, a final thanks to each and every person who helped make this team a success.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 12

Invest in the kids!

TO THE EDITOR:

After 17 months of difficult negotiations, the Cohasset Teachers Association has reached a tentative agreement on a fair and equitable contract with the school committee. Within the next week, both groups will meet in order to formally ratify the collective bargaining agreement. The members of the Association want to thank those parents and other townspeople who offered their support during the long negotiations.

There is, however, one more important step in the process: the upcoming town meeting's consideration of the proposed overrides before the town. The outcome of the town meeting and the ballot that follows has serious ramifications for the schools and the town itself. Let there be no mistake about it: the people of Cohasset are about to make a decision that has the potential to seriously hamper the ability of the schools to provide a quality education for the children of Cohasset. Inadequate funding in recent years has created a steady erosion of services and staffing, a situation that is now approaching crisis proportions.

Teachers are closest to the day-to-day difficulties produced by inadequate funding. Several English classes in the high school have more than 25 students in them (one has 31 students!); a reading program that had served all the students in the middle school no longer exists; buildings are not manned with custodial staff at night; seniors have exhausted their course options and must sit in study halls for 90 minutes. This is not a case of "crying wolf." A once-proud system is at a turning point.

We believe that it is time for parents, other citizens, and teachers to work together to ensure that the upcoming overrides pass. No override means programs being cut, retiring teachers not being replaced, insufficient texts, unconscionably high class sizes K-12. A minimum override means contractual obligations will be met; utilities will be paid, but the process of deterioration will continue. To provide the financial resources necessary to return the schools to their past levels of excellence, the townspeople must vote in favor of both overrides in order to guarantee that the higher amount is allocated. It is time for the citizens of Cohasset to invest in the future of the public schools. The children will receive the dividends.

Please vote "YES" on both override questions.

Sassafras Rock public hearing is March 29

There will be a public hearing Thursday, March 29 in the basement meeting room at Town Hall to discuss the proposed taking of Sassafras Rock. Article 23 on the Town Meeting Warrant would give the town authorization to take Sassafras Rock, located in Little Harbor, by eminent domain.

Little Harbor used to be a hay meadow in the 1850s and people used to own the land which is now covered by water. There are no records in town which indicate who owns Sassafras Rock, and unless ownership can be clarified, the town would like to take ownership and allow it to be properly recorded by the Board of Assessors and the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. Interested residents are encouraged to attend.

By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE- Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of March 13-17. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION (H 4746)

House 150-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill defining and expanding the duties and powers of the Department of Early Education and Care. A key provision establishes the Massachusetts Universal Pre-Kindergarten Program, a voluntary early education program for all preschool children across the state. The department was created by the Legislature in July 2004 to consolidate existing early education and care programs under a new and streamlined independent department that would coordinate all public and private prekindergarten education and care programs and services in Massachusetts. Supporters said that the bill is another major step in the fight to provide quality pre-kindergarten education in public and private settings throughout Massachusetts. They noted that this landmark endeavor would ensure that children are prepared when they enter kindergarten. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

GANG VIOLENCE AND WITNESS INTIMIDATION (H 4626)- The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Mitt Romney a bill aimed at curbing gang violence. Provisions include increased penalties for witness intimidation and $1.5 over the two years for the establishment of a statewide witness protection program.

HANDS-FREE CELL PHONES/VEHICLE INSPECTION STICKERS- The Transportation Committee approved and sent to the House legislation abolishing a current law that allows drivers to "operate a motor vehicle while using a citizens band radio or mobile telephone as long as one hand remains on the steering wheel at all times." The bill (H 2133) prohibits all drivers from operating a vehicle "while holding a mobile telephone in one or both hands or with any other part of the body" and imposes a $250 fine for a first offense and $500 for subsequent violations. It does allow the use of "hands-free" cell phones by drivers over 18 but bans junior divers under 18 from using even the hands-free devices. Junior drivers who violate the ban would face up to a one-year loss of their license and up to a $100 fine. The Committee also approved a bill (H 2257) increasing the current one-time $50 fine imposed on owners who neglect to have their motor vehicle inspected. The measure would instead impose a $50 fine for each month that the vehicle is not inspected.

HANDICAPPED PLACARDS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN/DRIVER'S LICENSE FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS AND MORE- The House rejected several bills including allowing pregnant women in their third trimester to be issued temporary handicapped parking placards to use through the seventh day after giving birth (H 2096); allowing all Massachusetts residents to be eligible for a driver's license, regardless of their immigration status or whether they have a social security number (H 2129); imposing up to a $500 fine or six-month jail sentence on anyone who drives a car with an accumulation of snow or ice which constitutes a threat to public safety (H 1036) and raising from 16.5 to 18 the minimum age requirement to apply for a driver's license (H 2054).

INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE/MANDATE SEVEN SICK DAYS- The Committee on Labor and Workforce Development approved and sent to the House a bill (H 3782) raising the current $6.75 per hour minimum wage to $7.75 per hour over a two-year period. The committee sent to a study committee a proposal (H 3788) requiring all employers to give full-time employees at least seven sick days per year.

BAN MEDICAL EXPERIMENTS/SHAKEN BABY SYNDROME- The Health Care Committee approved a bill (H 2621) prohibiting state hospitals and mental health and retardation facilities from conducting or allowing to be conducted any medical or scientific experiments on patients without judicial authority and informed written consent of the patient or his or her legal guardian. The committee also approved a proposal (H 3952) requiring that all parents at the time of discharge from a hospital or birth center receive educational materials describing the dangers of "Shaken Baby Syndrome."

SMOKING IN MOVIES AND ON TV SHOWS (S 2123)- The Tourism, Arts and Cultural Development Committee's hearing included a bill imposing a $10,000 tax on any movie, TV program or live performance that shows any of the five leading actors using tobacco products.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR SEX CRIMES (S 858, S 1058 and H 3555) The Judiciary Committee held a hearing on several bills abolishing the statute of limitations that limits the time period during which child victims of sexual abuse can file criminal and civil suits.

ADOPTION BY SAME-SEX COUPLES- Gov. Romney filed legislation exempting the adoption policy of all religious organizations from the state law prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation. Romney noted that the bill was filed in response to Catholic Charities' recent decision to terminate its state-licensed adoption program because a law allowing adoption by same-sex couples violates the group's religious beliefs. Catholic Charities is the social arm of the state's Roman Catholic Church. Romney said, "Government should not dictate to religious institutions the moral principles by which they are to carry out their charitable and divine mission." Opponents of Romney's bill say that no institution should be exempt from this state law that prohibits discrimination. Some critics of the bill have offered harsher comments including calling the church hypocritical for this recent action when viewed in light of its decades of ignoring the sexual abuse of children by priests.

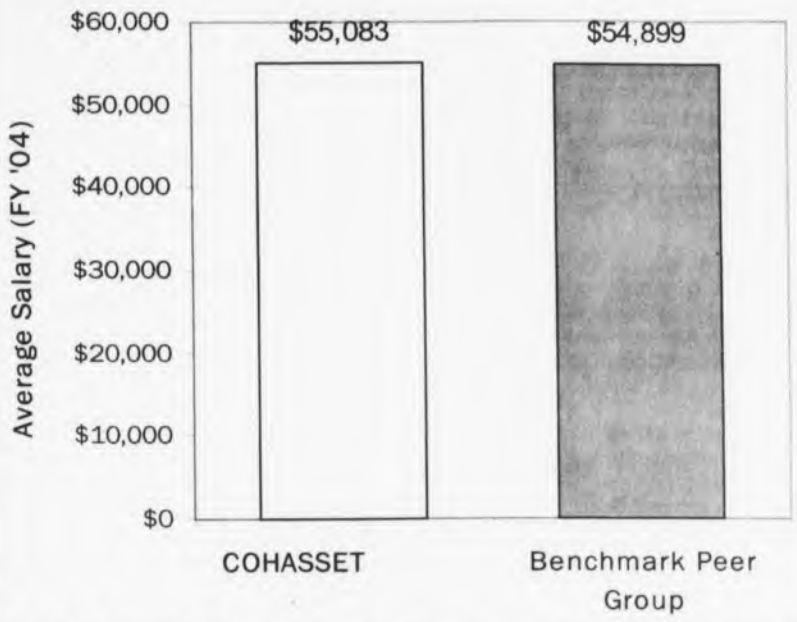
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Teacher Salaries



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts.

This chart shows the average 2004 salary paid to teachers in Cohasset compared to its peer group. The salary for an individual teacher within a school district is determined by that teacher's level of education and seniority. While it does not tell the entire story, by comparing average salaries, one can get a sense for how well Cohasset's compensated its teachers relative to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK -SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For school committee candidates: Is block scheduling at the high school all it's cut out to be and what impact, if any, does it have on the availability of electives?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Lee Jenkins

Since it began in the '97-'98 school year, block scheduling has had vocal supporters and critics. I will evaluate block scheduling by applying my program of 'Progress Through Priorities'. These priorities include:

1. Focusing resources in the classroom;
2. Providing a strong foundation in areas of study essential to our students' lifelong success;
3. Returning Cohasset to one of the top school districts in the state;
4. Taming the growth in non-classroom positions;
5. Creating annual budgets with Proposition 2 1/2 in mind while being aware of the current budget for potential deficits and enacting immediate solutions.

One question, therefore, is whether block scheduling focuses resources in the classroom. Another is whether it provides a strong foundation in areas of study essential to our students' lifelong success.

To answer these questions, the school board should appoint a committee to study in-depth the actual impact of block scheduling, positive and negative, on our classrooms and students. A comparison of SAT, AP and achievement scores beginning five-years prior to the inception of block scheduling is mandatory. The block scheduling debate has been going on for many years, and there is a great deal of research supporting both sides, but we have a small school system, so any comparative data should reflect similar size communities.

The study should take into account the concerns and recommendations of our Curriculum Renewal Committee and determine whether the same, a modified block schedule or returning to a traditional schedule will better meet our curriculum needs. The study should also address whether special needs students may be especially disadvantaged by longer classes, and assess any negative impact on our music and gym programs.

Only after we have thoroughly investigated this type of schedule will we be prepared to make any necessary changes that are best for the students in our care.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Rick Flynn

Block scheduling has been in existence in Cohasset for many years and most people feel that it is " all it's cut out to be". From parents to educators to students, the feeling is that block scheduling is a positive scheduling tool for education.

From a student's perspective it help students move through classes more quickly on a year to year basis thereby giving students the ability to proceed more quickly through required courses and allows them the ability to focus on specific concentrations, such as math, the sciences or languages later on in their high school career.

From a teaching perspective block scheduling gives teachers more time on task with the subject matter allowing a better focus and more in depth lessons. The teachers and students benefit from longer periods especially for AP courses where more subject matter can be covered during the school year resulting in better test scores and improved college acceptances. Even in terms of 10th grade MCAS results, Cohasset students tend to score better than average because our students have taken more math classes by the time the test has been administered.

From a cost standpoint block scheduling is more efficient in terms of staffing. If we were to revert back to traditional scheduling we would require additional teaching staff for more classes that also would require additional prep time.

The bottom line is that our class sizes are growing because our overall enrollment keeps growing. The only way we can address the size issue is to hire more teaching staff to be able to get back to more manageable class sizes. Block scheduling is not the culprit in terms of class size and education costs. We need to take an honest look at the issues and not blame block scheduling for our problems.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Steve Fusco

I do believe we should always explore new and creative teaching techniques. Block scheduling in its most common form attempts to extend classes into a more intensive structure. For instance, instead of having six or seven classes during the day you would have only three or four. The core concept is fewer classes provide more in depth coverage of the topics and as a result make classes less stressful for the students.

I could find very few published results on the impact of block scheduling on Cohasset Schools. Only source was the Curriculum Renewal Committee Report stating that SATs increased by 50 points in social studies when the students were allowed to "study what interested them."

However, other schools using block scheduling found it more difficult to schedule electives into the student's schedules. Some concerns of teachers are that it's difficult to keep students engaged in a subject for 90 minutes and if a student is out sick for two days it will be the equivalent of missing four classes. This type of learning may cause a larger gap in sequencing of classes. Critics of block scheduling also claim it diminishes opportunities for review, especially where "year-long" courses are compressed into a single semester and the practice may actually serve to diminish student performance.

In 1996 Lexington High School implemented this type of scheduling for three years as part of a grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education that provided a combination of traditional (49-60 minute) and longer (87 minute) class periods. The Lexington High School faculty voted to revert to traditional-length classes for 1997-1998. I believe we should explore and implement new teaching techniques, but carefully monitor metrics and results. Like many parents in town I would like to see the school share the block scheduling metrics at our High School.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For School Committee candidates: Are the pay and benefits for Cohasset teachers falling behind area towns making Cohasset less able to attract and retain talented teachers?

For Selectman candidates: If the sewer capacity issue could be resolved, would you be in favor of more downtown housing above the local shops or could this hurt the village character?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Absentee ballots are available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on Saturday, April 8 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 7 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. Voting absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open
- Physical disability
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 8 to be counted.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK -SELECTMAN

For selectman candidates: Has the SMROD helped ease the affordable housing problem for Cohasset senior citizens, as hoped, or instead provided a glut of housing for wealthy baby-boomers?

SELECTMAN/Roger Hill

As a selectman, I will work to deliver the maximum level of affordable housing at the Cook Estate project for Cohasset's senior citizens. There are important things we can do now to deliver on the best hopes for our senior housing bylaw. Unfortunately, the Town has not fully done so to date.

Town meeting passed the '55 Plus' zoning change, called the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District (SMROD), in November of 2002. It is the legal basis for both Cedarmere (104 units) and The Cook Estate (48 units). These 2 projects will produce a total of 38 affordable units. This is the only significant number of affordable housing units built in Cohasset since the Harborview senior complex was built in the 1970s.

The criticism of SMROD is both that many Cohasset seniors don't meet the affordability definitions mandated by the state, and that it will produce too many 'upper end' highly priced units. As a selectman I will work with the Board's housing consultant and the Cohasset Housing Partnership (CHP) to figure out how we can produce greater levels of 'middle-income' affordability at Cook. Perhaps we can use some funds from the Town Community Preservation Act fund to subsidize greater affordability. We should also consider a final 'tweak' to the SMROD bylaw, at the fall town meeting, to provide greater middle-income affordable units.

We can't forget that as the affordable units at Cedarmere and Cook are built, the Town will be in compliance with Chapter 40B of Massachusetts law for several years. This is true although we will remain short of the 10 percent total affordable requirement. Unless we show compliance with 40B, Cohasset will remain exposed to the exploitive use of the law by developers like Avalon seeking to bypass our local zoning controls.

SELECTMAN/Ted Carr

The Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District (SMORD) is a Cohasset program created in 2002 and amended in 2004. The intention was appropriate: establish a program to address the needs of its aging population. However, implementation has been more difficult, and the need has been fulfilled in other ways. Thus, with unanimous support, Cohasset is proposing to sunset this program in Article 15 of the town warrants. That said, I do believe that SMORD has benefited Cohasset Senior Citizens.

SMORD changed our zoning laws to allow development of potential senior housing in (i) existing multi-family development properties; and (ii) new developments for persons who live independently over the age of 55 who meet certain financial requirements. Due to appreciation in their property values, however, many of our senior citizens would not meet these thresholds. In this sense, many of our neighbors are the wealthy baby-boomers referenced in the question.

Although focused on affordability, SMORD also encouraged development of properties that would have a friendly floor plan for an aging community. A master bathroom on the first floor, fewer stairways, and reduced maintenance are critical to an aging population, regardless of their financial position. The program thus promoted friendlier housing options for our aging community.

Having seen many solutions to the aging population issue as the former Director of Operations for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, SMORD was a useful means of addressing the needs of Cohasset's aging community. It promoted development of affordable and age-friendly housing, even if such housing was not developed under its sponsorship. We now have various developments in progress that meet the targeted level of 20 percent of town dwellings: the Cook Estate, Cedarmere, and Avalon. This level is more than adequate to provide Cohasset senior citizens with alternative housing options so that they can remain a part of our community.

An analysis about how Cohasset schools measure up

COMMENTARY

PAUL CARLSON

Due to the override debate, I became curious about where our school system stands versus other similar towns in Massachusetts. Based on my analysis of the MCAS results and other data on the Massachusetts DOE website, I have concluded that:

- Our students are doing great in English/Reading.
- The students' record in Mathematics has been disappointing, lagging behind both the comparable towns and the level we achieve in English/Reading.
- Our Science program has been very weak. Of the 13 school systems in my study, we managed to do better than only one in 2005.
- In 2005 our students did particularly poorly in eighth grade Mathematics and in fourth grade English and Mathematics.
- Our per pupil school spending and our student/teacher ratio are very close to comparable towns.

We need to focus our resources to resolve these deficiencies before the schools introduce new initiatives.

How are the schools doing historically?

The average percentage of all our students who have attained the Proficient and Advanced MCAS scores for English/Reading and Mathematics tests for the past five years have been:

See Table I
Average Cohasset MCAS Scores for the Past Five Years

The English/Reading score includes test results for English and Reading given grades 10, seven, four and three, the Mathematics tests given in grades 10, eight, six, and four and the Science/Tech tests given the past three years in grades eight and five. The 81 percent figure for English/Reading in 2005 indicates that 81 percent of all students taking these MCAS tests in 2005 earned either the Proficient or the Advanced scores. The other 19 percent earned the Needs Improvement or Warning/Failed scores. The Total score for 2005 shows that 69 percent of our students earned the Proficient or Advanced scores. Unfortunately, 31 percent also had failing scores – an unacceptably high reading.

The English/Reading scores appear to be remarkably consistent indicating showing our schools are performing well. The Mathematics scores are somewhat more volatile and are considerably lower than the English/Reading. We should be able to do better.

Sadly, our students are doing very poorly in the Science/Tech tests where in 2005 only 52 percent of our students were able to pass – 48 percent failed. Our eighth graders had a 38 percent pass rate which marginally beat the state average of 33 percent and lagged the Benchmark group by 19 points. In the three years these tests have been given, our students have done poorly.

How are we doing compared to other towns?

I have used two groups of towns for comparison purposes. The Benchmark Peer Group featured in the Cohasset Mariner the past few weeks includes the 20 communities in Massachusetts most similar to Cohasset. Since some of these communities belong to large regional educational systems, I have analyzed fourteen communities in twelve comparable school systems.

The local peer group includes Hingham, Duxbury and Norwell.

Table II shows detailed results for the same tests in the table above for 2005 and 2003. The scores with the largest differences (five or more points) versus the Benchmark Average are highlighted. Only one of the 12 highlighted figures beats the Benchmark and that occurred in 2003. In 2005 our students scored significantly below the Benchmark in five of the 10 tests.

- The average of the two science tests was a full thirteen points below the Benchmark towns in 2005; 18 percent of the eighth graders had the lowest possible score.
- Our fourth graders scored poorly on both the English and the Mathematics scores.
- Our eighth graders did poorly in Mathematics; fully 20 percent had the lowest score.

How did our eighth graders go from having very good math scores in 2003 when they were in sixth grade and 2001 (fourth grade) to deficient scores in 2005?

Our Total score for 2005 was five points below the Benchmark group and slightly below the local towns. In the three local towns, the total results were Duxbury – 66, Hingham – 71 and Norwell – 77 compared to our 69.

This year we are being asked to dig deeply to fund school spending. However, the department's requests do not address the academic problems.

See Table II
Cohasset MCAS Scores vs. Benchmark Group and Local Peer Group 2005 and 2003

What resources are we giving the schools?

The Massachusetts DOE also provides data about school operations. Table III shows some of that data for Cohasset, the Benchmark Group and the local towns.

See Table III
Other Educational Indicators

Our school spending is in line with both the Benchmark Group and the local communities. Our student/teacher ratio and our regular spending per pupil are also very close to the figures for the local communities. The difference in total spending versus the local communities reflects our much higher per pupil Special Education (SPED) spending – ninth highest of 290 reporting school systems.

Conclusion

This year we are being asked to dig deeply to fund school spending. However, the department's requests do not address the academic problems. As a taxpayer, I would appreciate answers from the school committee/ administration regarding what has been done and what will be done to address the serious deficiencies outlined in this report, particularly the disheartening performance of:

- The Science/Technology program;
- The fourth grade English and Mathematics programs; and
- The eighth grade Mathematics program.

We should also develop a program to bring the math scores up to the excellent levels' we are achieving in English/Reading.

Very simply, our students, parents, and taxpayers deserve better.

Cohasset has developed an excellent cadre of strong, committed teachers. We should encourage and enable this team to get our educational program back to where it belongs. However, until the school committee tells us how these deficiencies will be addressed, I will be very reluctant to support the massive $1.5 million override.

Lastly, regardless of your position please join the Town Meeting on April 1 and vote for the town officials on April 8. Everyone's participation is important.

Paul Carlson lives at 18 Old Coach Road.

Chartis Tebbetts is Democrat of the Year

By Susan Kent
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee has named Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts as the 2006 Cohasset Democrat of the Year. Tebbetts has been an active Massachusetts Democrat for 40 years, but her commitment to service, curiosity in the world around her and respect for individual rights and dignity began much earlier than that. Growing up in the Midwest, she learned from her father, a current events and history teacher, and her mother, an avid follower of international developments and the daughter of a diplomat, the importance of knowing and understanding what is happening in the world. Tebbetts' life has embodied the call to think globally and act locally.

As a young girl, her interest in the Korean War and fascination with the Army-McCarthy hearings became a touchstone for her lifelong work against war and intolerance. After graduating from Wellesley College with a degree in psychology, Tebbetts took a job working in the State House for Kevin White when he was Secretary of the Commonwealth. Several years later, Tebbetts and her husband, Jack Langmaid, came to Cohasset and started a family. Tebbetts worked in the schools and became an enthusiastic member of the League of Women Voters, an association she continues to this day. Tebbetts believes that the League's work to give each voter the opportunity to become familiar with the issues is key to an informed electorate and a healthy democracy.

After her husband's death, Tebbetts continued to be active in politics and groups working toward greater understanding and respect for the individual. She is a co-founder of the South Shore Peace Forum, established prior to the first war in Iraq, which continues to hold weekly vigils to remind people that peace is an option, and war is not the only answer. Tebbetts is also an active member of South Shore Civil Marriage for All, because simply sitting on the sidelines and not actively supporting any group's civil rights is not an option. Tebbetts is a Democrat because she believes in government and the good it can do to improve individuals' lives and achieve the common good.

Tebbetts ran a very vigorous campaign for the Democratic nomination for State Senate in 1992. She was a member off the Cohasset School Committee and she is the co-chairman of the Cohasset Diversity Committee. She is also the former chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

An avid tennis player and a killer bridge competitor, Tebbetts is very active in her church and a member of the choir, she is also a member of the South Shore Choral Arts Society. Tebbetts is most proud that her children share her interests and appear to enjoy being politically active.

Tebbetts and her husband, Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts, a previous Cohasset Democrat of the Year honoree, remain enthusiastic Democrats and active and extremely supportive members of the Town Committee.

Taking a hands-on approach to health

"There will be a little bit of everything."
— Norma Sellier, coordinator

Seeking out holistic health remedies and products is becoming increasingly common as patients look for ways they can proactively take charge of their overall well-being. In fact, many holistic practices are used in conjunction with traditional medicine and together, patients report it works wonders.

To help spread the word about the many different holistic modalities available to residents on the South Shore with highly trained and experienced holistic practitioners, medical intuitive and sound therapist Norma Sellier has coordinated the Everything Holistic Health and Wellness Practitioners Showcase. The Showcase will take place Saturday, April 1 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, next to Town Hall. Admission is $6 per person, and children under 12 years old are free.

Sellier has her practice out of the Chiropractic and Holistic Healing Center in Hanover, and is the founder of Holistic Celebrations, a company dedicated to holistic healing methods, as well as Women With Wings, a virtual women's center which strives to empower women. Women With Wings is a co-sponsor of the event along with Good Health Food Store, which has stores in Hanover and Quincy. Proceeds from the event will go to both Women With Wings and the Second Congregational Church.

"There will be a little bit of everything," said Sellier, adding by experiencing a variety of holistic methods, residents will be able to decide through hands-on experiences what works for them. She said many health and wellness expos only provide demonstrations but do not allow those who attend to participate, which in her opinion, sets this day of wellness apart.

Dr. Kate McDonough, founder of the Chiropractic and Holistic Healing Center in Hanover, will be on hand during the Practitioners Showcase and will be showing those who attend her unique and gentle methods of bringing balance and alignment to the body. To correct and balance the spine, McDonough uses a small spring-loaded instrument. The adjustment occurs in the blink of an eye without any cracking or popping noises.

"People are struggling, more than ever, to find balance in their lives, to be healthier both in their outlook on life and in their physical beings," said McDonough. "The practice of chiropractic has been around for more than one hundred years, assisting people in their quest for healthier balance in the mental, physical, and spiritual realms."

Breathwork facilitator Tara Nieves will also be available for consultation at the Practitioner's Showcase. Nieves works out of The Flexibility Center in Hingham, and has facilitated groups and individuals through a variety of educational and therapeutic modalities over the past 12 years.

Nieves says by consciously breathing in an integrated, rhythmic way with a facilitator, individuals are able to awaken their inner wisdom in a safe, comfortable setting. During breath awakening sessions, programs are designed to empower each individual client to connect with his or her sense of self and life purpose. It brings awareness to beliefs and patterns that keep one from healthy, joyful living. In turn, the client is empowered to examine those beliefs and patterns and make new choices that lead to a fuller, more joyful life.

Diane Scott, a board certified homeopath whose practice, Quantum Homeopathics is located in the Harmony Wellness Center in Hanover, will present the technology of Quantum Biofeedback during the Practitioners Showcase. She will discuss how it works to reduce stress and improve physical, mental, spiritual, environmental, and cognitive health, as well as specific stress related health concerns.

The biofeedback device scans the client's body like a virus scan on a computer, calculating the body's evoked potential response and resonance to everything from viruses, nutritional deficiencies, allergies and food sensitivities. Biological reactivity in the body indicates needs, dysfunctions, and vulnerabilities. The technology behind the device is based on quantum physics, and energetic and vibrational healing, much the same at Cat Scans, MRIs, ultrasound and TENS therapy, which uses electrodes to stimulate nerves for pain relief.

Natural Medicine Consultant Jackie Bell whose practice is located in Plymouth, will be sharing the technology she uses to assess breast health. Bell uses Regulation Thermography — a medical device which is able to evaluate the health of the autonomic nervous system in and around major organs, glands and lymph. It has an electronic sensor that takes temperature readings on the skin at 100 points on the body, including all the teeth.

The test is a functional test where temperature readings are taken at each point before and after a person stands for 10 minutes with their upper body exposed. During the 10-minute exposure time, the body stabilizes and acclimates in an effort to maintain a constant internal temperature, as we are warm blooded. The regulatory changes from the internal organs to skin will be reflected in a change in the skin temperature which is measured and recorded by the sensor. The body's ability to heal itself is rooted in the autonomic nervous system, and if it can be determined where the system is not working properly, the process of restoring it can begin.

Also on hand during the day will be David Snieckus, a macrobiotic counselor and chef, who will be lecturing at 10:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., and will also be giving his top ten list for eating and cooking delicious and nutritious foods for optimal health and happiness.

There will be events for children, as Lori Rohleder, an independent representative for Barefoot Books will also bring work which opens the hearts and minds of children from all walks of life. Mikki Cully, an internationally known visionary artist and author will host a coloring Mandala workshop, which will use angel images as a foundation for self-exploration and understanding. Thoughts and feelings reach expressions in images rather than words. Children may also enter an angel coloring contest.

Sellier hopes by the end of the day, South Shore residents will have a greater awareness and be willing to explore the many holistic modalities that can be used as alternative avenues to staying healthy.

WANTED

30 PEOPLE

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New And Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have State licensed hearing aid specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you are a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear hearing solution. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on this remarkable new hearing aid in 2 weeks. This state of the art instrument solves a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids and is virtually invisible when worn. This device will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings, due to their participation. However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them. The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period. A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates Will Be Selected By March 28th, 2006. Those interested need to call today.

6th, 8th grade boys experience success

Editor's Note: The seventh graders' playoff season was still in progress as of the Mariner's press time. The following is a recap of the recently completed sixth and eighth grade boys' seasons.

Ending their three year tenure in the highly competitive Patriot League, the 8th grade boys achieved their goal of making it to the playoffs.

They faced off against number-1 seed Taunton in a grueling matchup. Although they came out on the low end of the score, the 8's gave it all they had for the entire game.

The season started last November with twice a week practices and weekend games. Joe Campbell and Mike Kearney were the coaches. The highlight of the season was a five game win streak in the heart of the season. This run put the 8's in good position for a playoff berth.

The 8's were a balanced squad, combining speed, toughness, agility and strength. Robby McCunney was the team's point guard, combining great athleticism with skillful playmaking. McCunney's vertical leap was the biggest on the team. McCunney scored from the inside and out, and was explosive going coast to coast.

John "Floor Burns" Kearney was the team's best and scrappiest defender. Kearney was a key playmaker, with heads up great ball movement. Kearney's fierce play on the floor ignited his teammates into action. Johnny Maher stepped up and played several positions on the floor, often playing out of position against taller opponents. Maher, according to Coach Kearney, "is destined to have a great varsity career." Maher is a clutch scorer and a strong defender.

Kevin O'Connell, according to Coach K, "has the purest outside shot on the team." O'Connell drained threes and long range jumpers with ease, making them look almost effortless. Big man Dan Sullivan was the most improved player on the squad. Sullivan developed super positioning in the paint, getting second chance scoring opportunities.

Dana Valentine is a bundle of raw talent, displaying physical force on both ends of the court. Valentine's use of strength and speed kept games moving and opponents winded.

Guard Will Wise had a terrific season. He managed the perimeter of the court and kept the ball moving with great passing. Wise developed a great short range jump shot that will serve him well as he moves on to the next level.

With Jeff Charles in the game, a new level of energy emerged. Charles was a great dribbling clinician, keeping the defense on their toes. Charles was consistent from the charity stripe, giving his team points when they needed them.

Brendan Doonan, also a terrific hockey player, played every moment with grit and determination. His natural athletic ability propelled him to great playmaking offensively and defensively. Doonan was a strong rebounder, with a great inside game and was solid from the free throw line.

Taylor McQuade, the team's premier shot blocker, was the king of inside positioning. He was the team's best inside defender and he played the low post well. McQuade could be counted on for clutch baskets down low when is team needed them.

JoDi Rosano brought agility and speed to the team. Rosano possesses solid fundamentals in the game, and was never afraid to take "one for the team."

Coaches Campbell and Kearney did a terrific job preparing this team for the next level of basketball in their careers, instilling in the boys a desire to win, a need to be competitive and a level of sportsmanship that helped them win with grace and lose with dignity.

The sixth grade boys ended what was a fine inaugural season in the competitive Patriot League, one game shy of making the playoffs.

Watching these young hoopsters develop over the course of the 18-game season was fun. They provided many nailbiting moments and finished with dignity. Matt Salerno and Bill Allard coached these young boys well.

As teams go, this group epitomized the word "team." They

Haley Haracz always makes her presence known on the court with her hustle, as Marian found out during the teams' state tournament game.

Haley flies under the radar

Haracz's contributions go beyond the scoreboard

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

She doesn't hit the radar screen as a high scoring basketball star. She doesn't rip down the most rebounds. Sometimes, her name does not even appear in the starting lineup.

But, if ever there was a local sports icon that represents total dedication to team play, reliability and behind-the-scenes defensive strength, it would be Cohasset junior Haley Haracz. This player contributes more to the team than anyone will ever know.

About Haracz, girls basketball head coach John Levangie said, "With all of her experience, Haley will play a very major role next year on the team.

"She is both extremely easy to coach and very athletic. What more could a coach ask for in his players?"

Without missing a beat, Haracz just does her thing at the forward position game after game. In the end, this consistency sets her apart from the rest of the crowd.

The story all began about nine years ago when Haracz and her family moved to Cohasset from Illinois. Her father quickly set up a basketball hoop in the driveway. She decided to take some shots, and the rest is history.

"My dad, my sister, and I would always be out there," recalled Haracz. "We would start little pick-up games and just shoot around." She adds that, besides her current coach, her father has sparked her interest in the game.

By the fourth grade, Haracz joined the town league. Year after year she consistently progressed in her basketball skills. When Haracz was a freshman, Levangie, then in his first year at Cohasset, spotted her talent and subbed her into some varsity games.

Last year Haracz came out of the woodwork in a big way. Fans will remember her game-winning free throws against Hull on Feb. 9, 2005. With 20 seconds left on the shot clock she drew a foul and connected on both foul shots. Besides winning by a 37-36 score, the victory catapulted the Skippers into the playoffs.

On a personal level, Haracz did not experience any dramatic situations this year. Instead, as a power forward, she reliably contributed to rebounds, scoring, assists, and, most of all, to the defense.

Cohasset's Gannon Dorian has a hold of Holbrook's Nick Nielson during the teams' Feb. 1 dual meet. Dorian is one of several underclassmen in the CHS wrestling program with a potentially bright future.

CHS grapplers lose four key members to caps and gowns; several talented returnees will be back

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

After winning the Division 3 state title in 2004-05, the Cohasset wrestling team came into the season with the proverbial bullseye on its back.

The Skippers' regular season had its ups and downs, and the team entered the Division 3 state tournament as the 5-seed (out of six teams).

It is in that first round, however, that Cohasset came up as big as they had all season with a win over a Canton team that had blown them out during the season. As the program looks ahead to next year, some of the wins in that match give a lot of hope that the team can continue its recent success.

Returning underclassmen Adam Smith, Steven Hurlburt and Mike Froio all won crucial matches in Canton. Smith, in particular, improved quite a bit as the season wore on. The junior, who generally competes in the 135-pound division, also picked up a win in the sectional semifinal loss to eventual South champion Pembroke. At 125, Froio also won his match against his Titans opponent.

Other highlights from the season include:

Marshfield Tournament

At the weekly Christmas vacation competition, senior Shane Dorian finished second out of nearly 30 wrestlers in the 145 pound weight class. Dorian's only loss came in the championship match to Plymouth South's Vinnie Renaut, who recently won New Englands.

It was a precursor of things to come for Dorian, who went on to compete in All-States for the second straight season.

Also at Marshfield, junior Ryan McLellan took fourth place at 112, and senior Dave McKenna finished sixth in a 152-pound class that Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney said throughout the season was the toughest in the state.

Cohasset Tournament

Dorian, McKenna and McLellan put on a show for the home fans, all winning their respective classes for the host team.

McLellan came up big for Cohasset all season long, and his

Cohasset's McCarthy named an Honorable Mention

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: girls basketball.

Ron Dunn - Junior Center - Abington

The Green Wave's big man in the middle, Dunn was a force to be reckoned with under the hoop...At 6'5", Dunn was the leading scorer and rebounder on the Abington team and was among the top in the South Shore League...The first-year starter was fourth in the SSL in scoring with an average 17 points per game...He also pulled down 11 boards per outing, averaging a double-double for the season...An SSL All-star, Dunn helped lead the Green Wave to a 14-8 record and berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney...There, Abington knocked off Hanover before running into SSL rival Norwell in the next round...The Green Wave was edged 55-51...His performance in the team's own Green Wave tourney helped Abington win the title for the second-straight year, knocking off Hanover and Bishop Stang...A linebacker on the AHS Div. 4 Super Bowl championship football team, Dunn will return to both sports next year. Abington coach Don Byron: "Ron has real soft hands and real quick feet. He's a good athlete for a kid his size."

Tim Wells - Junior
Guard - Abington

Not just a talented football player, Wells 6'1" was also a force on the basketball court for the Green Wave...At point-guard, Wells ran the offense for Abington this season, knowing when to shoot and when to give the ball up...His ability to find players in the middle, like fellow All-Scholastic Ron Dunn, was largely responsible for the Abington team's 14-8 season and tourney berth...Wells scored points when needed, but made his biggest impact on defense, consistently disrupting opposing offenses...A first-year starter, Wells' tenacious D and scoring ability helped the Green Wave finish 7-5 in the challenging South Shore League and earn All-star status because of it...He was an essential part of a team that won its own Green Wave Invite for the second-straight year and nearly knocked off SSL rival Norwell in the Div. 3 South tourney (falling 55-51)...Scored 27 points in a first round win over Hanover...A standout receiver/quarterback on the AHS football team last fall, Wells will return to both squads next year. Abington coach Don Byron: "He has great instincts off the ball as a defender."

Brian Ellis -
Junior (Capt.)
Forward - Braintree

In his first year as a starter, the 6-foot-4 Ellis emerged as one of the Bay State Conference's elite players...Averaged team-best 19 points per game and led the Wamps in rebounding...One of four unanimous selections to the conference All-Star team, joining standouts Anthony Gurley and Corey Lowe of Newton North and Dedham's Kinard Dozier...Developed an outside game to go with his already considerable post skills, consistently hitting 18-foot jump shots when left open...Also made six 3-pointers on the season...Had a game for the ages in the Division 1 South first round win over West Roxbury, scoring a career-high 34 points to go with 15 rebounds, three assists, three steals and two blocks...Scored a then career-best 29 points in Feb. 16 win against rival Weymouth...Notched 21 points in a key January win over league foe Brookline...Plays AAU ball for the Bay State Magic...Also plays soccer and volleyball for BHS, and was a league All-Star goalie last fall...Will lead a talented group of returning underclassmen...Braintree coach Bob Crook: "Brian is perhaps one of the top three players I've coached. He's a really terrific player, and he's made himself extremely hard to cover."

Jim Torney -
Senior (Capt.)
Center - Braintree

The Wamps will certainly miss this 6-foot-7 presence in the paint next season...A second team Bay State Conference All-Star, Torney averaged over 11 points per game and was second on the team in rebounding, behind fellow All-Scholastic Brian Ellis...Possesses a nice touch around the basket, is a good passer, and gets his share of blocked shots...Was named Braintree's MVP at the Hall of Fame Classic at Massasoit after scoring 24 points in two games against Rockland and Cardinal Spellman...Was a key contributor in the Wamps' Division 1 South first round victory over West Roxbury, finishing with 14 points, 10 rebounds and three blocks while playing through an illness...Notched 15 points and 10 boards in a January win over Weymouth...Praised by his coach for his leadership and impact on the program's younger players...Also pitches for the BHS baseball team...Braintree coach Bob Crook: "The thing that goes unnoticed sometimes with Jim is that he was our best passer. Often times, it was Jim that found [leading scorer] Brian [Ellis] for a lot of baskets."

James Carven -
Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Hanover

Was one of just a handful of veterans on the young 8-12 Indians squad this season and more than did his part as a senior leader...The senior captain and guard was the leading scorer on the Hanover squad this winter averaging just over 11 points per game...This put him fifth among scorers in the Patriot League's Fisher Div...Carven's athleticism made him a successful scorer despite being the focus of virtually every opposing defense...The Patriot League All-star regularly scored in double-figures for the Indians, guiding the squad to a second place finish (6-2) in the Fisher Div., thus clinching a tourney berth...There, Carven racked up 20 points in a preliminary round loss to Abington...Perhaps better known for his football skills, Carven was a four-year starting quarterback and defensive back on the HHS team...He plans to continue his football career on a full scholarship to UMass.

Neil Creahan -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

Was a major reason why the Harbormen recorded one of its best seasons in recent years...Creahan was the leading scorer in the Patriot League's Keenan Div. this season with an average 18 points per game for the Harbormen...The 6'4" forward's presence in the paint was undeniable as he stacked up against some of the area's best big-men...Creahan hung tough with a very tall Duxbury team in a pair of losses to the Green Dragons, which won a Div. 2 state title this past weekend...His play helped guide Hingham to 13-7 overall record and 9-4 mark in all of the Patriot League, taking second overall in the Keenan Div. behind Duxbury...The squad reached the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where it knocked off Wellesley before falling to Franklin...Also a talented football player at HHS, Creahan was a member of the Harbormen squad that reached the Div. 2A Super Bowl last season.

Nick Ham - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Another top-point getter on the Hingham squad, Ham averaged less than one point fewer per game than Creahan...Ham averaged 17.9 points per game for the Harbormen, who capped one of their most successful seasons in recent years in the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional…A presence in the paint and via short-range jumpers, Ham was a tough player to guard…The Patriot League All-star sparked a number of Hingham victories throughout its 13-7 season with his athletic and aggressive play…Ham was a big reason why the HHS boys finished a strong second in the Keenan Div. of the PL with a 9-4 record, trailing only Div. 2 state champs, Duxbury in the final standings…Some of the team's biggest regular season wins came against Randolph (70-69 in OT) and Rockland (72-69), while the Harbormen also avenged an end of regular season loss to Wellesley with a 58-53 victory in the first round of the Div. 2 South tourney…Just a junior, Ham will be one of the top returning players next season.

Billy Arria -
Senior (Capt.)
Guard/Forward - Norwell

A three-year varsity player and two-year starter, Arria was the glue that held the Division 3 South finalists together…Didn't always score a lot of points, but ran the offense remarkably well and often finished with double-digit rebounds to go with at least six assists…Had a career-high 14 helpers in Feb. 10 win at South Shore League foe Harwich…Finished with 10 rebounds and 11 assists in Dec. 20 victory against Mashpee…Racked up 13 rebounds and seven assists in Feb. 3 win over Abington…A great clutch player, partly evidenced by his huge basket with two minutes left that ultimately decided Norwell's one-point upset of Dedham in sectional semifinals…Made 6-of-8 free throws down the stretch in quarterfinal win against Martha's Vineyard…Also made two game-clinching free throws in four-point win over Carver on Jan. 30…A 2005 Mariner All-Scholastic, as well as Honorable Mention on this year's All-Scholastic football team…Was also a captain on the gridiron last fall, playing tight end and linebacker for the South Shore League runners-up

Tom Genatossio -
Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Norwell

When he's on, there are few pure shooters in the area better than Genatossio…The South Shore League All-Star came up big during Clippers' tournament run, highlighted by a game-high 21 points (including six 3-pointers) in Division 3 South first round win against Abington…Hit the go-ahead 3-pointer with three minutes left in semifinal win over top-seeded Dedham…Can also put the ball on the floor and has a knack for finding open teammates for easy shots…One of Norwell's best defenders…Scored 18 points in triple-overtime win at Rockland on Feb. 7…Had one of his best games of the year on Jan. 27 against Mashpee, scoring a game-high 24 points in a Clippers victory…Also scored 20 points in critical early season win over Hull

James Long - Sophomore
Center - Norwell

Need a basket in the post? Long is about as good a bet as any on the South Shore…A South Shore League All-Star, there were many times when the 6-foot-3 sophomore was simply unstoppable… Averaged 21 points and 13 rebounds per game in Norwell's three post-season victories, leading the Clippers to the Division 3 South finals…Had 18 points and 15 rebounds in first round win over Abington, a game-high 26 points in second round victory against Martha's Vineyard, and 19 points and 14 boards in semi-final win against Dedham…In Feb. 7 triple-overtime win in Rockland, Long finished with 29 points and 20 rebounds, despite playing all three overtimes with four fouls…Named MVP of the Ed Amaral Tournament, highlighted by his 17-point, 18-rebound performance in championship game against Marshfield…Also plays football for NHS, where he is one of the league's top young linemen and kickers

Corey Donahue - Junior
Guard - Pembroke

After returning to the school system from BC High, Donahue took the Patriot League by storm this season as one of the most prolific scorers in the region. Donahue spent much of the season above the 20 points per game mark carrying a young team on the offensive end of the floor night in and night out. He was a deft shooter from the outside but his best abilities lie in getting to the rim and scoring and drawing contact. He averaged almost eight free throws a game, and as a strong foul shooter was able to score points there when defenses started bottling him up. He was named a Patriot League all-star this season while helping his team, which did not have a senior on the roster to an 8-14 record, while being named team MVP. He is an honor roll student who plays basketball year round for the Coastal Pops AAU program. Next year he should return with a veteran group that hopes to leave a mark. Coach Brendan Mosher on Donahue, "He can score all three ways. In the paint, facing the basket, and off the dribble."

Yogi Hologitas -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Rockland

A standout player for the last few seasons, Hologitas is making his second appearance on the All-Scholastic squad…A highly athletic player and great shooter, Hologitas was the star on the Rockland squad, averaging 14 points per game to lead the team…He was second in the Fisher Div. in scoring…A two-time Patriot League All-star, Hologitas' aggressive play on the court helped the Bulldogs rebound from a tough 5-7 start to win six of their last eight games and finish 11-9 overall…His Rockland squad owned the PL's Fisher Div., besting all opponents with an 8-0 record…They were 10-4 overall in the PL…Hologitas was also a football player at RHS last fall.

Will Lockwood -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Scituate

Perhaps the most improved player on this list, Lockwood was a Patriot League All-Star this season…Led the team in scoring at over 16 a game, this after averaging just five points per contest as a junior…Also averaged eight rebounds per game, and took an incredible 20 charges over the course of the season…Attributes his improvement to playing AAU ball for the Coastal Pops last spring, as well as a number of offseason basketball camps…A 6-foot-2 lefty that can shoot, drive, and finish in traffic…Says the Sailors' state tournament win over arch-rival Rockland (where he scored a game-high 22 points) was his most memorable of the season…Scored 25 points in win over Fairhaven that clinched Scituate a postseason berth…Notched 24 and 19 points, respectively, in huge early season wins over Division 2 tournament teams Silver Lake and Hingham…Played baseball his first two years at SHS…Plans to play basketball in college, with Colby and Babson his top two choices…Considering majoring in business or finance; Lockwood is a member of the Math Club at Scituate High…Scituate coach Matt Poirier: "Will is a poster child for what hard work can do. He was good defensively, solid with the ball and shot a high percentage. He's a wonderful kid and a good captain."

Mike Steele - Junior
Guard - Scituate

A first-year starter, Steele played his best basketball in the big games…Averaged 13 points and five rebounds per contest, ranking second and third on his team in those two categories, respectively…A very good outside shooter…Says the tournament game against Rockland (where he scored 18 points) and crucial Feb. 7 win over Randolph (15 points) were among his best of the season…Had 18 points and seven rebounds in Dec. 19 win over Patriot League foe Hingham…Notched 18 points and five assists in regular season finale against South Shore Christian…Plans to play college basketball, and is considering studying architecture or business…Works for a landscaping company during the warmer months, and calls surfing one of his main hobbies…Scituate coach Matt Poirier: "Mike Steele is someone that really did some big things for us. He learned to do a lot more than shoot. One of the things we try to get our kids to do is to become part of other teams' scouting reports, and Michael did that this year."

Josh Solari - Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Silver Lake

One half of the Solari brother backcourt tandem, along with his twin brother Taylor, Josh was the more prolific scorer of the two this season averaging a team high 15 points a game. He also dished out three assists and grabbed five rebounds a game while leading his team to a 15-8 record this year. For his efforts he was named a first team Patriot League all-star. He really picked up his game and his scoring in the second half of the year as the Lakers made a big push towards the tournament. He scored 24 points in the season finale with Plymouth North, and had a season high 26 against Hingham.

Coach Rick Boulrisse, "He is real good in transition and can create his own shot off the dribble. He can really read defenses well and was a tough match for most teams."

Taylor Solari -Senior
(Capt.)
Guard - Silver Lake

While his brother was getting much of the accolades for his scoring prowess, Taylor was doing all the little things his team needed to be successful this year. He was the point guard, and a tough matchup on both ends of the floor at that position. Offensively he averaged 10 points and four assists a game while running the team's offense. Defensively he was matched up with the other team's best guard every night and caused nightmares for high scoring opponents. He was named a Patriot League all-star this season and is also a Silver Lake Scholar Athlete. In the second half of the season when the Lakers made a late push for the postseason he lifted his scoring to new levels and made for a tough tandem with his brother, as well as the strong forwards inside for the Lakers.

Coach Rick Boulrisse, "Offensively he has a really good feel for the game, and defensively he created mismatches in our favor."

Tommy Deegan -
Sophomore
Forward - Weymouth

One of the best young players in the area, Deegan has already started making a name for himself in basketball circles. This season he led the Wildcats with 13.5 points and 6.5 rebounds a game in helping them turn around last year's 1-19 season. He was a Bay State League all-star this year, one of only two sophomores to earn that honor. His best games were a 28 point 10 rebound performance against Norwood, and a 19 point effort in a close loss to Division 2 State Champion Newton North. He is an honor roll student who also plays football and AAU basketball. He is hoping to play Division 1 basketball in college, and has drawn some interest already.

Head Coach Jim Dolan, "He was just super consistent. He played every position for us, and I really think the sky is the limit for him."

Honorable Mention:

Patrick McCarthy - Soph. - Guard - Cohasset
James Kalianiotis - Jr. - Guard - Abington
Chris Dominguez - Jr. - Guard - Braintree
Kevin Pickup - Jr. - Guard - Braintree
James Wheeler - Jr. - Guard - Hanover
John Connelly - Sr. - Forward - Hingham
Pat Culhane -Sr. (Capt.) - Forward - Holbrook
Marc Roberts -Jr. - Forward - Holbrook
Kyle Burghardt - Sr. (Capt.) - Forward - Marshfield
Kurt Leone - Jr. - Forward - Marshfield
Mike Kramer - Jr. - Guard - Norwell
Spencer Thornley - Sr. - Forward - Rockland
Chris Lowrance - Sr. (Capt.) - Center - Scituate
Josh Doherty - Sr. (Capt.) - Silver Lake
Dan Mendes -Jr. - Silver Lake

Haracz's contributions go beyond the scoreboard

FROM HARACZ, PAGE 19

Her only regret? "I wish we didn't lose all of those games at the beginning of the season," she responded.

Her most visible team contributions surfaced in the tournament game against Cathedral. The Skippers entered the game as a big underdog. For the fans that caught this game, Haracz's court presence was hard to miss. Forcing turnover after turnover, the junior supplied her team with countless offensive opportunities.

"As a team, we were definitely intimidated going into the game," admitted Haracz. "They beat us last year by a good amount, so I was pretty nervous."

Well, Haracz's anxiety apparently did not last very long once she found herself in the middle of the action. In fact, her calm, smart-playing style has remained a major factor for the Lady Skippers all year long.

"Haley is one of the most well rounded players on the team," explained freshmen Skipper Sarah Coggins. "She is never selfish, and can probably be named the toughest player in the league."

While Haracz has developed a passion for basketball, her athletic ability has extended beyond the 5-on-5 setting of the gym. Last fall, she completed a successful soccer season in her key role at the stopper position.

Haracz has discovered her academic niche as well. She consistently finds her name on the honor roll, not an easy task.

"I really like math," she explained. "I like the simplicity of it all… how there's only one answer."

At this point, she plans to make use of her mathematical mind as a business major when she heads off to college in the fall of '07. Fortunately, the Skippers will benefit from one more season of Haley Haracz on the court before college comes along.

"Haley is one of the most well rounded players on the team. She is never selfish, and can probably be named the toughest player in the league."
-Freshmen Skipper Sarah Coggins

In her interview with the Mariner she was asked a few hard questions about what the fans might anticipate in the upcoming season, which starts again in nine months. "I think we will improve next year over this year. We will have good players who will work hard over the off-season."

Her one concern?

"Our press will stay good. But we need to work on our transition game," Haracz said.

So next time you peek inside the Cohasset High School gymnasium, on the soccer field, or inside a classroom, keep an eye peeled for Haley Haracz. You will likely find her working with self-discipline, consistency, and a determination for the task at hand.

Haley Haracz, who also plays soccer for Cohasset High, was a major contributor to the lady hoopsters' rebounding and defense.

Jake Watts, shown above in action during the Marshfield Tournament, is one of four seniors leaving some holes to fill for next year's team. The other soon-to-be graduates are Shane Dorian, Dave McKenna and George Miller.

Wrestling with the future

development was one of the most encouraging things during the season. McLellan figures to be one of the team's best next season.

Pembroke match in state tournament

Joining McLellan as a top returnee for the Skippers next season is fellow junior Nick Cambi, who emerged as a star in the 189-pound class this season.

Against Pembroke in the state tournament, however, Cambi found himself in a 275 match. It mattered little, as Cambi scored a convincing victory.

Smith and Froio also won their matches in Pembroke, and Dorian defeated fellow All-State competitor Dan Longo.

States

Dorian and Cambi were the stars for Cohasset at the Division 3 state individuals tournament, both finishing in third place.

The two Skippers took different paths to get there, though. Dorian dominated the opening rounds of the competition before advancing to the semifinals, where he was winning his match before getting caught and subsequently pinned.

Cambi, meanwhile, lost his second match, but rebounded in strong fashion by tearing through the losers bracket to earn himself a third place finish and a berth in the All-State tournament. McKenna wrestled well enough at states to join Dorian and Cambi at All-States.

Looking ahead

Cohasset loses four talented wrestlers to graduation this June: Dorian, McKenna, George Miller and Jake Watts. Watts was solid all season long at 103, and Miller came on strong down the stretch at 215 and wrestled well in the post-season.

There are some holes to fill, to be sure, but the Skippers appear to have a potentially solid foundation for next season. Cambi and McLellan figure to be the team's stars, with Smith not too far behind. And if wrestlers like Hurlburt, Froio and Gannon Dorian can continue their improvement, the Skippers stand a good chance at success in 2006-07.

6th, 8th grade boys experience success

demonstrated great teamwork, whether it was in their famous "tiger" press or in ball movement. But their team effort extended beyond the pine to the sidelines as spectators often saw players pat each other on the back for the good or not so good happenings on the floor.

In the back court, Christian Allard, one of the best ball handlers in the league, played point guard with quick hands, fast feet and solid shooting. Allard could be counted on to make the play when his team needed it. And, he shot very well from the foul line.

Patrick MacCormack was explosive with tremendous anticipation and he played with no fear. When the game was on the line, MacCormack had no qualms about taking the last shot.

Charlie Neaves was a solid all around player. Neaves played defensive like there was no tomorrow, keeping the opposition from penetrating the top of the key.

Patrick Kearney played strong consistently all season. His super game sense put him in the right place at the right time, with frequent interceptions. He also has one of the sweetest outside jump shots in the league.

Danny Barnes came off the bench with ferocious energy. He played tenacious defense and he was one of the best pick setters on the team.

Chris Lunde and Morgan McCarthy take most improved honors, although all of the boys improved so much from game 1 to game 18. Lunde stepped into a big role in the last few games with confidence and determination. Lunde never gave up on a loose ball, diving to the floor, creating offensive opportunities for his team.

McCarthy grew into his ìbig manî position with confidence and strength. McCarthy was a force to be reckoned with under the glass, coming up with big rebounds when his team needed him to.

Speaking of big men, Robbie Mahoney, Jay Salerno and Jamie Faber were the core of the Sixers' front line. Mahoney was the king of the second and third efforts. He had more second and third shot opportunities than anyone in the league. Mahoney knew how to position himself in the paint and make the most of that positioning, offensively or defensively.

No one in the league boxed out Jay Salerno. Salerno quietly gained prime positioning under the offensive and defensive glass. Offensively, he scored from down low. All those hours practicing in the driveway paid off.

Faber was an explosive player, igniting his team with great offense and defense. Faber could shoot inside or out, and take the ball coast to coast.

Assistant coach Bill Allard said, "We couldn't be prouder of these kids in their first year in the travel league. They came to play every night against bigger towns with bigger kids. The represented themselves, their parents and fans and the town of Cohasset well."

Look for exciting things from these young men next year as they play their sophmore year in the Boys Basketball Patriot League.

SPORTS NOTES

Road Race by the Sea

The Cohasset Rotary Club announces that the 30th Annual 10K Cohasset Road Race by the Sea will be held Sunday, April 2.

Read-A-Thon raises over $18K for schools

Osgood School Principal Janet Sheehan holds up a drawing done by second grade student Nick Hanflig. Sheehan held up the picture, which was of an ice hockey rink in Torino, Italy, during the school's Read-A-Thon award ceremony which had an Olympic theme.

The Cohasset PSO's second annual Read-A-Thon, "The 2006 Winter Reading Olympics," has officially come to a close, but the students' love for reading continues.

The Read-A-Thon kicked off at the Joseph Osgood School, the Deer Hill School, and the Cohasset Middle School Friday, Feb. 10, to coincide with the 2006 Winter Olympics in Torino, Italy. Participating students from all three schools set a reading goal and gathered pledges from sponsors, supportive family members, and friends, for all the minutes they logged reading. Reading logs and pledge money were collected at the end of the four-week period.

The goal of the Cohasset PSO Read-A-Thon is to encourage and promote a love and a life-long appreciation for reading. Money raised will support and maintain school enrichment and curriculum programs. Thanks to the energy and commitment of principals Janet Sheehan of the Joseph Osgood School, Keith Gauley of the Deer Hill School and assistant principal Beth Sternala of the Middle School, student enthusiasm was high.

"Our parents could not have selected a better theme for this year's Read-A-Thon. We got off to a great start with a Reading Olympics Opening Ceremony that rivaled Torino with our own flag bearer, torch bearer, and Olympic representatives. We exceeded our goals to get the children excited about reading and to raise funds for the schools. All students were 'winners.' We decided to keep the Olympic flame burning to sustain our enthusiasm for reading," said Sheehan.

As a testament to the enthusiasm and encouragement from school principals, parents, and students, the three schools participating in the 2006 Cohasset PSO Read-A-Thon raised over $18,000. The Joseph Osgood School logged over 141,000 minutes of reading and raised close to $11,000. The Deer Hill School spent 160,970 minutes reading, raising just over $5,000, and the Middle School spent 92,838 minutes reading and raised nearly $3,400. Students at all three schools received bookmarks acknowledging their participation and various other motivational incentives were offered to outstanding participants. Buttonwood Books & Toys generously donated a book to each class that read the most minutes for each grade.

This is the first year the Middle School has participated in the Read-A-Thon. "Implementing the PSO Read-A-Thon at the middle school level this year has provided us with an opportunity to reinforce to students that we are all life-long learners and life-long readers. In fact, staff members shared selections of their favorite readings with their homerooms and engaged them in conversation around their interest in these pieces and the relevance these readings have in their own lives. Aside from raising funds for the PSO, the Read-A-Thon has helped build a sense of community between these shared experiences and the small rivalries that existed for winning first place in the contest," said Sternala.

The Deer Hill School participated for the second year in a row and Gauley was ecstatic with its continued success. "More students participated and more money was raised. In total, Deer Hill students read in excess of 160,000 minutes, or more than 2,680 hours. Given that one of our goals was to promote students' independent reading and joy from reading, we clearly achieved this goal. The Olympic theme and related incentives added to the excitement. Thanks to the students, parents, school staff, and community members who supported our efforts. The PSO Read-A-Thon was clearly a gold medal winner."

Seventh grade student Claire Pozniak has been buried in books like the Harry Potter series while participating in the district-wide school read-a-thon. Claire read for 14,831 minutes, and set a new Cohasset Read-A-Thon record for most minutes read.

Seventh grade student Claire Pozniak raises her fist in victory after middle-school assistant principal Beth Sternala announced her class won a donut party, thanks in part to the many hours of reading done by Claire. Claire read 14,831 minutes of the class' 18,555 minutes during the Read-A-Thon.

Third grade student Adam Benson of Arna Lewis' class reads "The Trojan Horse" during an award ceremony given in celebration of those who participated in the PSO sponsored Read-A-Thon.

Osgood kindergarten students Ben Healy and Brian Doyle, both from Kristie Raymond's class, admire the medals they received for participating in the district-wide Read-A-Thon. The Osgood School raised more than $10,000 during the PSO sponsored program. Half of the money will help build a new playground at the school.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Michael M. White of Boston in the County of Suffolk representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows. The land conveyed by the deed of Charles C. Cabot and Charles B. Barnes, Jr., Trustees of the will of Thomas F. Richardson, to Ellen B. Cabot, Richardson White and James C. White, dated May 2, 1965 and recorded in the Norfolk Registry of Deeds in Book 4267, Page 573, described as follows:
Thirty four acres and fifteen rods of pasture land in Cohasset known as Cushing pasture, formerly Spencer Binney's.
The said land lies westerly of Forest Avenue, is adjacent to land of the Cohasset Golf Club and is shown as Cohasset Assessor's Map 7, Plot 2, containing 32.40 acres more or less.
There is appurtenant to the said land an easement for access and egress to and from Forest Avenue burdening the following described land:
The land conveyed by the deed of Jerusalem Road Corporation to Ellen P. Cabot and Richardson White, dated April 7, 1981, recorded in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 5857, Page 740, described as follows:
A certain parcel of land situated in Cohasset, Massachusetts being shown as Parcel "A" on a plan entitled "Plan of Land on Forest Avenue Cohasset, Mass." Dated October 24, 1980 and December 10, 1980 by Neil J. Murphy, Engineer, recorded as No. 252-1981 Pl. Bk. 287 with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, containing 73,121 square feet according to said plan.
There is included in said Parcel "A" as shown on said plan a lot of registered land said lot being shown as Lot 8 on a plan drawn by Neil J. Murphy, Engineer, dated January 8, 1981, as modified and approved by said Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 29067B.
For title to the registered portion of said Parcel "A" see Transfer Certificate of Title No. 112568, Book 563, Page 168 in the Norfolk Registry District of the Land Court.
The land burdened by the said easement lies on the western side of Forest Avenue and is shown as Cohasset Assessor's Map 7, Plot 43, containing 1.67 acres more or less.

setting forth that he desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $700,000.00 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate & Family Court, 35 Shawmut Rd. Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the fifth day of April 2006, the return day of this citation.

Witness, DAVID H. KOPELMAN, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this Fourteenth day of February 2006

Spring has sprung with tons of activities

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Spring is finally upon us and it feels wonderful. It may not be very warm yet, but it's nice to know that, after a winter of no snow, we won't be receiving any surprise storms from Mother Nature in the near future.

Appropriately, spring sports began this week and the squads already appear solid with the addition of a number of highly skilled underclassmen. Big ups to Rob Murley who competed in a rugby match on Saturday and his adult team beat their opponents. Rob was not available for comment but I am sure that he is ecstatic. The underclassmen signed up for their courses for next year.

The Spinnaker staff also signed up for story ideas for the final issue that will hit the school in May.

Mr. Buckley's Outdoor Education class will be journeying through town this week on their bicycles for the first time this year. Other than that, there isn't much going on in the school this week, except for the little tidbits I am going to relay to you right now.

• There will have been a faculty meeting in the library on Tuesday. There will have also been a PSO meeting that same night.

• There will have been a College Expo this Thursday for grades 10 and 11 from 9:30 – 11 in the auditorium.

• Cohasset Family Feud is coming to Cohasset and you could be part of it. Make a team of five people, friends or family, ages ten and up, and generate $125 between the five of you, or $25 each for you mathematicians. You need to have registered by March 24th with Kathy Ofsthun at 781-383-9396.

• Some of the original Tuskegee Airmen are scheduled to visit with Cohasset students sometime next week.

• In preparation for the sixth-grade students to enter seventh grade, the students are required to have a current physical on file in the nurse's office. The physical should have documentation of a tetanus booster and all other immunizations must be up to date.

• Seniors, remember to return your scholarships by April 12th to the guidance office. Pick up any applications for these scholarships in the guidance office.

• Register by April 3rd for the May SAT test session, and by April 28th for the June SAT test session.

• Class of 2007 – The College Board planning calendars are available in guidance.

• Attention seniors, if you've made your decision on a school for next year, stop by guidance and let Ms. Leahy know which one you have decided on.

• MCAS testing will start next week: Tuesday for High School and Wednesday for Middle school, with English Language Arts. The Math, Science/Technology Engineering and History will be administered in late May.

• There is an all school instrumental day concert at 7 p.m. in the gym for grades four through 12. The entire day will be dedicated to clinics and workshops, culminating with a concert that night.

• April 5th is Jazz night at the high school in the upper lobby, so mark your calendars.

• The Cohasset High School has created a group called "The Lockets", where peers comfort and support each other through tough times. With the help of Mr. Levene supervising, this group will be held once a week on Wednesdays, starting April 5th, during lunch time in Mr. Foy's room. Currently, we are in the process of forming "The Lockets". By receiving this letter, we the faculty can observe and look out for students in the need of this group. If you know anyone in need of this group please contact Amanda Simpson (student leader) or Mr. Levene.

• If you are interested in purchasing a DVD of the 2006 Mr. Skipper contest, please contact Mrs. Shea at 781-383-2384. The DVD's will be sold for $25 each as a fundraiser for the 2006 post prom committee.

That's a wrap for this week. Not very entertaining I'll admit, but bountiful in educating you the public of what is happening in this our school. Enjoy it and cherish it until next week.

Swim, Dive Team Scholarship

Applications for the Cohasset Summer Swim and Dive Team Scholarship are available in the Cohasset High School Guidance Office. This scholarship is intended to support students as they move to the next level after high school. To be eligible for consideration the student must be a high school senior and must have been a member of the Cohasset Summer Swim-Dive Team for five years. Completed applications must be returned to the Guidance Office no later than April 12.

Girls golf scholarship

The Tee Club, a local women's golf club, is accepting applications from girls between the ages of 9 and 18 for up to a $500 scholarship to help defray the cost of golf lessons, golf clinics, or the golf school of your choice. Interested females should write an essay discussing their love of golf, how they have improved their golf game in the past, and their hopes for improving their game this season. Essays should be limited to two pages and should include contact information.

Send essays to The Tee Club, 145 Martin's Lane, Hingham, MA 02043 by March 31. Call 781-740-1375 with any questions

Canadian Arctic cruise showcases grandeur of North Pole

By ARLINE and SAM BLEECKER
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

KUUJJUAQ -- When we asked a friend who'd been to the Canadian Arctic what we should pack for our trip, she quipped "bear repellent."

What she didn't warn us against are the cub-sized mosquitoes. Full-body netting would not have constituted overkill.

Our late spring Arctic cruise began in Kuujjuaq, a veritable metropolis of 2,000 Inuit a few hundred miles below the North Pole and a hop-skip-jump from Boston -- just a 2-hour-15-minute flight north from Montreal.

Here, at the edge of the Canadian Boreal Forest, we boarded the 66-passenger Ushuaia, an ice-rated vessel chartered by Cruise North Expeditions, a new company that's the first-ever cruise line owned and operated by Inuits. Because natives own the line -- and actually sailed onboard with us -- we could access parts of the region out of reach for most visitors.

The land of the midnight sun is sparse and ice-choked all year round (perfect for folks who feel ripped off by this season's warm winter in New England). Nature clings by its fingernails here, but the low-lying landscape is adrift in late spring and summer with yellow poppies, purple fireweed, white Arctic cotton, even butterflies.

The light at the top of the world is awesome: Fiery sunsets last for hours; moonlight hopscotches across ice floes; and mirages on the horizon look a lot like castles in the air.

Still, it's hard to comprehend that people actually live in such an unforgiving world.

Julio Preller, our seasoned expedition leader, cautioned that nothing was fixed on our voyage's agenda. "We propose and Mother Nature disposes," he said.

Our itinerary was only a guidepost, always subject to change. In fact, low tide delayed our departure by a day. A thick carpet of ice floes cut another day from our schedule. But nobody cared.

"First I'll tell everyone that I LOVED this trip. Then I'll tell them to expect the unexpected," crooned a passenger from New York.

Sometimes the unexpected came in exquisite forms. In the Hudson Strait, ice slowed our vessel to a 3-knot crawl. But we decided to grin and bear it, literally, as we spotted a golden-hued polar bear swimming parallel to our ship. This king of the Arctic uses floes like padded slippers to get from one spot to the next. The click-click-click of cameras surely was an alien sound to the creature, who hauled out on the ice and sniffed the air to check us out. This was the first of a dozen such bear encounters, some as close as 60 feet away.

On Akpatok Island, an uninhabited outcropping in the middle of nowhere, we gawked at half a million breeding pairs of thick-billed murres. These penguins of the Arctic call Akpatok's 700-foot-high sheer cliffs home and fly through the water in search of food. Rifle-toting Inuit guides escorted us ashore from our inflatable rafts -- their eyes fixed on the horizon and beds of lingering snow where bears might materialize.

Our expedition's resident bird expert, George Sirk, a Joel Grey look-alike, said the Arctic is for "survival of the perfect." Freezing temperatures and ferocious storms have created creatures with superlative adaptations.

It's downright Darwinian.

The Inuit people, once nomadic, now populate scattered villages with such tongue-twisting names as Kangiqsualujjuaq (which, in Inuktitut, sounds like "can cheek swallow jack"), pop. 762. They survive here on wits and intuition.

In Kimmirut, an outpost of 400 residents, caribou antlers were heaped in front yards like gigantic balls of twigs. We hiked several miles along a hilly ribbon of dirt road to the Soper River, in search of garnets near the shoreline and munch bannock, fried fritters prepared for us by a local family.

Onboard the ship, Arctic informality extended to no locks on cabin doors and barely ever changing for dinner. Some evenings, our Inuit hosts shared legends and demonstrated native games, like leg wrestling and a hundred things you can do with a sealskin rope.

Country foods, such as caribou and Arctic char, migrated onto our shipboard menus, which offered the best food we've ever tasted on a small, expedition vessel -- better than on many resort cruise ships. We downed caribou bourguignon, Moroccan chickpea stew, divine salads and, one evening, Arctic martinis swirled with ancient ice chopped from a passing floe.

By cruise end, it was Anthropology 101: with a lasting camaraderie forged among passengers, crew, expedition staff and our Inuit friends, who seemed to delight in revealing to us their world.

IF YOU GO...

WEATHER: It's cold here, especially when cruising among ice floes in search of polar bears. Temperatures on our late-spring trip ranged from 44 to 78 degrees Fahrenheit, sometimes in a single day. Plan to layer your clothing. Pack a heavy winter parka and plenty of insect repellent (the mosquito population diminishes as you get into late summer/early fall), mosquito netting and hiking boots for rugged terrain. The ship provides rubber boots for wet landings.

THE SEASON: This year, the line offers sailings from June 26 through Sept. 4.

SOUVENIRS: Prices ashore are astronomical. In some communities, a two-liter bottle of coke costs $6.50, a quart of milk $6.10. You'll find great bargains, though, for exquisite stone carvings, a widely practiced Inuit art form using the local soft white marble. You're as likely to find these sculpted gems from a teenager on the street as you are in a local gallery or co-op.

SHIP: For this year's adventures, the line has chartered the 122-passenger Orlova, an ice-strengthened vessel built in Yugoslavia and recently refurbished.

FARES: Cruise North's seven- and nine-day Arctic sailings, including roundtrip inter-Canadian airfare (between Montreal and Kuujjuaq), start at $3,595 per person.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: Call 866-263-3220, or go to cruisenorthexpeditions.com.

Interfaith Seder to be held March 26

The Anti-Defamation League, in cooperation with the Hingham-Hull Religious Leaders Association and the South Shore Coalition for No Place For Hate will hold its 11thAnnual South Shore Interfaith Seder on March 26 from 3 to 5 p.m. at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham.

The Interfaith Seder is a gathering of individuals from diverse faith communities who join together to tell the dramatic story of the Israelites' exodus from slavery in Egypt. Last year's event drew almost 350 participants. Admission is free and open to the public.

For reservations email hinghamisnoplaceforhate@gmail.com. Donations to help defray the cost of the Seder are accepted. Make checks payable to ADL and mail to ADL, c/o Mitch Marcus, P.O. Box 88, Accord, MA 02018.

For more information call the ADL at 617-406-6300.

The Council on Elder Affairs sponsored a traditional Irish luncheon at St. Anthony's Parish Hall Thursday, March 16. Entertainment was provided by young dancers from the Nevin Academy of Irish Step Dancing, directed by Maura Nevin. Members of Anna Abbruzzese's gourmet cooking class, including Jeanne Trumbetta, Lou Tedeschi, Claire O'Brien, and Angie Kelley prepared and served the luncheon.

Dancers from the Nevin Academy of Irish Step Dancing take a bow after performing for those who attended an authentic Irish luncheon to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. The luncheon was held March 16 and was sponsored by the Cohasset Elder Affairs office.

Jack Bryant of Cohasset was recently honored by the Boston Celtics during the organization's "Heroes Among Us" award ceremony at the Statehouse. The program in its eighth year saluted exceptional individuals like Jack, who was recognized for his role during the fight to protect America during WWII. Jack was one of the original Tuskegee Airmen, America's first black pilots, bombardiers, navigators and support personnel. Jack gallantly fought two wars, a battle against foreign aggression overseas, as well as the battle at home to integrate the armed forces. Here Jack is shown with state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley at the State House following the Celtics' award ceremony.

Tuskegee Airmen subject of talk

Cohasset resident Jack Bryant, a member of the Tuskegee Airmen program in 1945 and 1946, will moderate the a talk and video presentation titled "Red Tails: The Saga of the Tuskegee Airmen," narrated by Oliver North on Tuesday, March 28, 7:30 to 9 p.m., at Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, Bates Hall, 43 Highland Ave.

Participants will learn how these brave young American men broke the color barrier of the Army Air Corps. They overcame racism at home and abroad, and by the end of World War II, these pilots earned respect for their air prowess. The "Red Tails," nicknamed for the color painted on their aircraft, flew more than 15,000 combat missions, and during Allied escort missions over Europe never lost a bomber to the enemy.

This event is free and open to the public. For more information, call Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006.

New Amsterdam Boys Choir to perform

New York City's New Amsterdam Boys Choir will pay a visit to the South Shore on Saturday and Sunday, March 25 and 26, performing at the Annual Union Service of five Unitarian Universalist congregations in the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common on Sunday, March 26 at 10 a.m., and that same day, at a 1 p.m. concert. Tickets are $10 per person at the door.

This year marks the choir's 20th year. Currently comprised of 21 young men from the neighborhood of East Harlem, the choir has performed in New York, New Jersey, several New England states, as far west as Nebraska and as far east as Germany. A trip to the Netherlands is also scheduled for this year.

Under the leadership of James Backmon, the choir's repertoire includes folk melodies, spirituals, religious and secular pieces. The aim is two-fold: to inspire and educate. Says choir member Patrick Tisdale, "I sing because I want my voice to be heard."

Open to boys age 8-18, the choir's standards are high and require discipline, respect, and academic success. According to director James Backmon, "The boys have learned that their voices, individually and collectively, really matter; they have acquired self-confidence, poise, personal and group discipline in work and other skills for living in this complex world and at the same time brought pleasure to those who have heard them sing."

Support for the choir comes from corporate and foundation grants, congregations, and individuals. Four congregations on the South Shore: First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset; First Parish Hingham Old Ship Church; First Parish in Norwell; and First Parish in Scituate are making the choir's visit to Cohasset possible.

FIRE DEPT. STATUS REPORT

11 motor vehicle crashes last month

A summary of fire department responses during the month of February is as follows: building fires four; brush fires three; motor vehicle crashes 11; motor vehicle fires one; medical emergencies 76; inspections seven; investigations 11; assistance calls five; and miscellaneous responses 34. Forty-nine emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 43 medical emergencies and six fire calls, Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The fire department ambulance transported 55 patients to South Shore Hospital and one patient to Quincy Medical Center. Mutual aid ambulances transported four patients from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital. One patient was transported to a Boston Hospital by Med-Flight Helicopter after an industrial accident. One motor vehicle crash in February required transport to a hospital, Lincoln said.

Fire alarm system activation responses totaled 20 during February. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for eight responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 12 responses. The four responses classed as building fires were caused by: oil burner malfunction two; fluorescent light fixture transformer one; and electric/automatic dishwasher one, Lincoln said.

What's happening on the South Shore

MARCH 23-31, 2006

You can go home again

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

North Quincy High School alumni from across the country will return to the school for a benefit concert on Saturday organized to honor the memory of a long-time choir director and music educator.

Nearly 150 alumni — from Quincy, other South Shore communities, Maine, New York and Florida — will be returning home this weekend to take part in a musical celebration in memory of Maurice Carbonneau. Carbonneau taught at North Quincy High from 1967 until his retirement. A resident of Hough's Neck, Carbonneau died in August 1993. The musical weekend will culminate in a concert event being staged at North Quincy High School on Saturday evening.

Braintree's Ann Kenneally Ryan and local entertainment producer and Quincy resident John McDonald joined together after Carbonneau's passing, when they and a number of fellow former students decided to do something as a tribute to their beloved teacher, known to them all as "Mr. C."

"Immediately after his funeral, several of us got to talking about how much we enjoyed and appreciated what he taught us musically, how he challenged us to succeed and how much he cared about us as individuals," recalls Kenneally Ryan.

According to McDonald, "we soon hatched the idea of attempting to track down about 30 years worth of his students and invite them to a musical event staged in his honor."

Canton's Emily Gabel Prigot, another alum and among those who helped plan the first event, recalls being surprised at the community involvement 12 years ago.

"We had nearly 150 alumni return to North Quincy High for a musical reunion weekend which culminated in a concert in October 1994. The show was amazing. It featured graduates who had gone on to become accomplished musicians as soloists, performances by entire local musical families and fond remembrances by several of his fellow faculty members. The finale was this gigantic choir of about 150 voices, spanning 30 years of students of Mr. C singing to a packed auditorium. The sound of the music generated by that enormous choir was simply unforgettable."

Maurice Carbonneau

Nearly 150 alumni — from Quincy, other South Shore communities, Maine, New York and Florida — will be returning home this weekend to take part in a musical celebration in memory of Maurice Carbonneau.

The 1994 event raised nearly $4,500 from ticket sales and a grant from the Quincy Arts Council. The proceeds funded music scholarships for deserving seniors at North Quincy High. McDonald learned last year that the funds have been depleted and there was no longer any money left for the scholarships.

"When I found this out, it was like a call to action," said McDonald. "Many times over the years, when I would bump into participants from the first event, they would tell me how much they enjoyed it and how they wished we could do it all over again. But now, I really felt we had an important reason to do so."

Maurice Carbonneau had an accomplished musical career as a singer prior to joining the North Quincy High School faculty. A graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, he frequently performed in fully staged operas, including concerts and operas with the legendary soprano Beverly Sills.

"One aspect of the first event that was especially moving was the response of his wife and family," remembered Dana Cetlin, another alum who now lives in Newton. "I'll never forget Mrs. Carbonneau's comments to all of us at the conclusion of the first concert. She said, 'Some people wonder if teaching is worth it. Tonight shows that it is worth it.' She was really touched by the whole event, as were we and the audience."

Gay Carbonneau, an accomplished singer, pianist and choral director in her own right, also taught for many years in the Quincy Public School System and remains active in the Quincy Choral Society. She is planning to attend the event with her family.

(Alumni who would like to participate should contact the committee at 617-786-7469. Tickets for the March 25 benefit performance at 8 PM at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock Street, Quincy, are on sale now for $15 per person and may be purchased online with a credit card at www.jmproductionspresents.com. Tickets may also be ordered by sending a check made out to "Maurice Carbonneau Scholarship Fund" to JM Productions ~ PO Box 2313 ~ Quincy, MA 02269-2313. Seating is limited and available on a first come, first served basis with general admission. Due to the anticipated demand, tickets may not be available at the door.)

Movie review

'Smoking' is butt of the joke

Thank You for Smoking (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In 1999, film audiences rejected "The Insider," a great and important drama about the tobacco industry.

This must have the makers of "Thank You for Smoking," a film about the pitfalls of being the chief spokesman for the tobacco industry, reaching for their Camel Lights.

Directed by 29-year-old Jason Reitman, the son of filmmaker Ivan Reitman, and based on a novel by satirist Christopher Buckley, "Thank You for Smoking" is a terrific black comedy about the absurdity of modern life. It will remind some of "The Weather Man," a great 2005 film that was also overlooked.

In a career-enhancing, leading-man turn, Aaron Eckhart is tobacco industry spokesman, human pinata and "yuppie Mephistopheles" Nick Naylor. Nick has been subpoenaed to testify before a congressional committee headed by the self-righteous prig and anti-tobacco crusader Senator Ortolan Finistirre (William H. Macy). Nick's estranged 12-year-old son Joey (Cameron Bright) is not sure what his dad, who is divorced from his mom, does for a living or much else about him.

Heather Holloway (Katie Holmes), a beautiful reporter looking to establish a reputation, is not averse to using sex to get Nick to come clean about the industry. Nick's scheming boss (J.K. Simmons) and the so-called "Col. Sanders of nicotine" — a hickory-smoked mogul known as the Captain (Robert Duvall) — want Nick to find a solution to smoking's bad image. Nick concocts a farfetched-I'm-sure cross-promotional campaign. The tobacco industry will give money to the film industry in exchange for movies in which smoking is depicted as hip (imagine).

Nick's closest friends Polly Bailey (Maria Bello) and Bobby Jay Bliss (David Koechner) aren't friends, really. They are fellow pariahs and "death merchants," D.C. lobbyists for the alcohol and firearms industries. To top it all off, the one and only Marlboro Man (Sam Elliott, of course), or at least this film's version of him, is dying of lung cancer and about to testify against the industry that made him a national icon.

Ever-smiling tobacco lobbyist Nick Naylor (Aaron Eckhart) tries to make a point to the media.

Directed by 29-year-old Jason Reitman, the son of filmmaker Ivan Reitman, and based on a novel by satirist Christopher Buckley, "Thank You for Smoking" is a terrific black comedy about the absurdity of modern life.

Like "The Weatherman," "Thank You for Smoking" explores that endangered species known as modern American male professional and features a great performance by a lead actor. Working in a ridiculous job, perched on the edge of career and personal disaster, Nick is the new American Everyman.

"Thank You for Smoking" opens to the tune of the 1947 Merle Travis novelty song "Smoke! Smoke! Smoke! (That Cigarette)" by country star Tex Williams, a two-pack-a-day smoker who died of cancer, and contains what some say is a raunchy sex scene trimmed down at the request of Holmes' new representatives. The film often recalls the work of the great American satirists Preston Sturges ("Sullivan's Travels") and Billy Wilder ("Some Like It Hot," "The Apartment").

As Jack's morally adrift assistant, Adam Brody of "The O.C." makes a fine impression, and as a suspiciously Mike Ovitz-like, kimono-clad Hollywood wheeler and dealer, Rob Lowe is frighteningly convincing. But the film belongs to Eckhart.

After coming to prominence in the bogus, button-pushing Neil LaBute dramas "In the Company of Men" (1997) and "Your Friends & Neighbors" (1999), Eckhart has more lately been taking up space in such dreary programmers as "The Core," "Paycheck" and, worst of all, "Suspect Zero."

"Thank You for Smoking" gives him the chance to show off his square-jawed charm, sex appeal and genuine comic flair, and suddenly Eckhart looks like James Stewart's natural heir.

Thank you for acting.

Rated R. "Thank You for Smoking" contains profanity and sexual situations.

Michael Siberry ans 'King Arthur" and Jeff Dumas as 'Patsy'.

Sprightly 'Spamalot' sets Monty Python's laughs to music

If the boffo box office for "Monty Python's Spamalot" - on Broadway, where it won the 2005 Tony Award for Best Musical, and now here in Boston, where its national tour opened this month - is any indication, the stage version of "Monty Python and the Holy Grail" appeals to more than just the considerable fan base of the famous British comedy troupe. Indeed, the musical - described in its press materials as "lovingly ripped off" from the 1975 feature film "Monty Python and the Holy Grail" - understandably relies heavily on schtick made famous in the movie, but it also makes time for wonderful spoofs of other popular musicals like "Phantom of the Opera," "Fiddler the Roof," and "West Side Story."

With book and lyrics by original Monty Python member Eric Idle and lyrics by Idle and composer John Du Prez, "Spamalot" has no trouble paying proper homage to the film comedy that inspired it. And with Mike Nichols as director, the staging is theatrically inspired and plenty sprightly to keep even non-Pythonites fully engaged. The act one "Knights of the Round Table" is set in a Camelot that looks suspiciously like the Excalibur Hotel in Las Vegas. Those suspicions are confirmed when the round table turns out to be a roulette wheel and the cast reminds the audience that "what happens in Camelot stays in Camelot." When Sir Galahad and the Lady of the Lake duet on "The Song That Goes Like This," Andrew Lloyd Webber's frequent musical pomposity is punctured to great, very humorous effect.

When it opened in New York last March, the show boasted a name cast including David Hyde Pierce, Hank Azaria, and Tim Curry. The just-launched national tour eschews above-the-title casting for a solid company led by Michael Siberry as King Arthur, Pia Glenn as the Lady of the Lake, Bradley Dean as Sir Dennis Galahad, and Rick Holmes as Sir Lancelot. The sets and costumes by Tim Hatley are beautifully bright and shown off to full advantage by Hugh Vanstone's first-rate lighting design. And, in a special nod to longtime Monty Python fans, when God speaks in "Spamalot," he is voiced by no less than John Cleese.

"Monty Python's Spamalot" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through April 15. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com.

Meeting to tackle town business

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If you have an opinion on whether the town should develop new shops and housing units around the train station, whether the town should fund a new veteran's memorial, or whether the town should pass either a $725,000 or $1.495 million override — plan to be at Cohasset High School this Saturday, April 1.

These issues and more will be discussed at this year's Annual Town Meeting, which will convene in the high school's Sullivan Gymnasium at 10 a.m.

Town Meeting will cast votes on 24 articles detailed in the town Warrant, which was mailed to all households. Extra Warrants will be available Saturday.

Town Meeting will begin promptly at 10 a.m. and business will be conducted until 1 p.m., at which point there will be a break for lunch. There will be a snack bar and proceeds will be donated to benefit the Appalachia Service Project.

The meeting will resume at 2 p.m. Moderator Dan Evans said if necessary, he will let discussion continue on an article past 5 p.m. in order for it to be carried to a vote, or if it looks as if the meeting could be completed. In the event the meeting must carry over to a second night, it will resume Monday, April 3 at 7 p.m.

"I believe we can get through the warrant on Saturday if the budget is completed by the lunch break," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

No laughing matter

Town goes for largest override ever

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This Saturday may be April Fools' Day, but for many voters who will attend Town Meeting, passing an operating budget override is no laughing matter.

With funds scarce and services on the line, residents will be asked to weigh in on passing either a $725,000 or a $1.495 million override figure. If either one of the figures receive majority votes of approval, it will set the stage for passing the largest operating budget override in the town's history.

Voting to pass an operating budget override means residents in a community choose to raise property taxes more than the 2-1/2 percent allowed by the state through Proposition 2-1/2, to help add funds to the operating budget. Cohasset is a town with a very small commercial tax base, and officials say the funds brought in from property taxes are not enough to keep its town and school programs moving forward. Residents must vote twice for an override to pass – once at Town Meeting and once at a special election. Cohasset has set its special election date for May 6 (the April 8 election will not ask voters to weigh in on the override).

The budget will be the third item of business to be tackled Saturday. Town Meeting begins at 10 a.m. and articles will be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant.

Article three will ask voters to take three actions – approve a

Town to vote on tax breaks for elderly

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In a town where home values continue to rise, there are provisions in place for residents who qualify to receive some relief when it comes to paying their taxes.

Articles seven and eight on this year's Town Meeting Warrant address tax deferrals and tax exemptions, both of which are available for Cohasset residents. Tax exemptions and tax deferrals are voted on every year by Town Meeting. This year's meeting will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 1, and will be held in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

There are currently about 15 households who have applied for the program for tax deferrals. There are certain income and age restrictions which apply, and the taxes must eventually be paid back. If a house is sold when a resident decides to move to another town, the homeowner must pay back the deferred taxes with proceeds from the sale of the house. If a person passes away, the estate must pay back the taxes to the town.

Currently, deferred taxes must be paid back at an interest rate of 8 percent. Article seven would ask residents to approve the Board of Selectmen's setting the interest rate at 4 percent. Towns are allowed to reduce the interest rate due to recent legislation. The change would become effective July 1, 2006.

Exemptions can be granted for

Stealing signs part of campaign game

Candidate Jenkins hard hit by culprit

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Someone is going around Cohasset and stealing political signs — mostly those urging votes for school committee candidate Lee Jenkins.

Selectmen alerted the public to the incidents at their Tuesday meeting, but did not specify which candidate's signs had been stolen. Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said if residents would like to show their support for a particular candidate they should "put it into campaigning," for that candidate, rather than trying to work negatively against another.

Police Chief James Hussey said he received a message Monday morning from Jenkins, who had called to report many of her supporters had called her asking for another sign as theirs had been stolen. "It was the first I had heard of it," he said, as there was nothing in the police log from the weekend indicating one of the dispatchers had taken a call about any signs being stolen. He said his officers have all been informed of the situation and have been instructed to keep an eye out for any signs that may

PICTURE THIS/Rich Ofsthun

Name: Rich Ofsthun (Off-stun).

Occupation: Host of Cohasset's Family Feud Gameshow fund-raiser to be held April 7 — the third and latest "Richard" to host the Family Feud.

Best day of your life: Whenever I have a microphone and a captive audience…captivated or not.

Best vacation: In front of a fireplace with my family playing the "At home" version of the Family Feud.

Favorite season: Summer reruns.

Favorite holiday: Christmas — for some reason a lot of family feuds are kicked-off that week.

Favorite saying: "Survey says!"

Best book: "When Families Feud: Understanding and Resolving Family Conflicts" by Ira Heilveil — although I hear it's languishing on Cohasset library shelves.

Best TV show: You have to ask?!

Pet peeve: Richard Karn, the current TV host — he's just no Richard Dawson.

Dumbest thing I ever did: I taped over all my Hogan's Heroes recordings.

Most memorable moment: Will be when I ask the School Committee team to "Give me the top five words to describe Prop. 2-1/2."

Goal: To provide a safe and fun post-prom party — it's really not about me.

Person you'd most like to meet: Richard Dawson…as Cpl. Newkirk.

Biggest worry: We still need fun families/teams as contestants, then to fill the auditorium with a studio audience. Come on down!

Best part of Cohasset: The generosity of its citizens.

The Mariner caught up with Rich Ofsthun, host of Cohasset's Family Feud Gameshow, which will take place Friday, April 7. The event is being held to raise funds to support the post-prom party.

Selectmen change meeting schedule

Selectman Gary Vanderweil had suggested moving Selectmen's meetings to Mondays, as they used to be, and the board has agreed to one for now. The board's next meeting will be Monday, April 10, at 7 p.m. The board is going to wait until the new member comes on board after the April 8 election before it changes meetings to Mondays permanently. But, due to the fact that the meeting, if held on Tuesday, would have been on Opening Day for the Red Sox at Fenway, the board agreed to switch to Monday. The board is expected to vote on the permanent change during that meeting.

BlueJay Café Coffeehouse

Young musicians from the South Shore will perform in the BlueJay Café Coffeehouse, Friday, April 7, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., next to Town Hall. Guitar teacher Jim Armstrong, along with his two brothers, will provide the "backup" music for the students who for one night will front the Armstrong Brothers Band.

Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children. Tickets will be sold at the door. Proceeds from the coffeehouse will be split between the Second Congregational Church and the Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston.

Comcast contacted about poor reception

The Board of Selectmen signed a letter drafted by Town Manager Bill Griffin Tuesday, which asks Comcast to address the quality of local cable channel programming. He said the reception for the televised School Committee meetings are especially bad, and the letter will serve as the first step in getting a dialogue started.

Hometown harbormaster

Cohasset resident to take over position

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A familiar face around Cohasset Harbor will now become a permanent fixture, as Schofield Road resident Lorren Gibbons has been appointed to the position of harbormaster.

Gibbons, who has served as an assistant harbormaster for the town since 1998, will take over the full-time role in mid-April. Gibbons will replace John Muncey, who has served as acting harbormaster since harbormaster John "Moose" Winters passed away in 2003.

"My decision, which is also based on the input I have received, is that Lorren is the best candidate," said Town Manager Bill Griffin. Under the town's Town Manager Act, the appointment is Griffin's to make, but selectmen have 15 days in which to reject the appointment. The board voted Tuesday to waive its right to veto and formally welcomed Gibbons to the position.

"I'm looking forward to the job," said Gibbons, adding she sees it as both a fun and challenging opportunity. "It's going to be nice to be down there" working every day.

The town received 17 résumés from interested candidates, which were first reviewed by the Cohasset Harbor Committee. The committee recommended six candidates for an interview, and Griffin added a seventh candidate who had missed the deadline due to his serving the country in Iraq. Griffin, along with Selectman Rob Spofford, Director of Finance Michael Buckley, Police Chief James Hussey and resident Dick Avery served as the evaluation team which conducted the interviews.

During interviews, each candidate was asked to summarize their experience, training and interest in the position. Members of the evaluation team posed a number of questions to candidates on their management experience, boating experience, business experience, knowledge of Cohasset Harbor issues, revenue enhancement ideas, the role of the harbormaster as it relates to the harbor's environmental quality and the relationship of the harbormaster with others departments in town.

Upon completion of the first round of interviews, the evaluation team narrowed down the list of candidates to four, which came back for a second interview. Gibbons' qualifications set her apart from the rest.

In addition to her experience as an assistant harbormaster in town, Gibbons has been a lobster fisherman out of Cohasset, North Scituate and Hull since 1977, and owns, operates, and maintains a 35-foot lobster boat. She has been a member of the Cohasset Harbor Committee for the past 20 years. She is also a certified SCUBA diver, certified in adult, child, and infant CPR, and is Red Cross certified in basic first aid.

During her interviews, Griffin said Gibbons presented a number of ideas on how to improve the operation, visibility, and effectiveness of the harbormaster's department, and expressed a strong willingness to work with other town departments, such as the yacht club and sailing club, to help improve the safety and functionality of Cohasset Harbor.

Griffin said Gibbons included various letters of recommendation from a range of contacts with her application. He said the diversity of recommendations was very impressive, as there are many different kinds of people who use the harbor for a variety of reasons and Gibbons has a great rapport with them all.

Spofford said he is very happy with the appointment. "It was a unanimous decision," he said, adding Gibbons is sure to bring about the kinds of changes the harbor needs, including the possibility of amending the harbormaster's hours during the summer to ensure there is a visible presence in the evenings and on weekends.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would like to see safety education become a component of the harbormaster's job description and said helping people understand what to do for safe boating would be a great service to the town. He also suggested finding a way to charge mooring fees to guests who may only stay in town for one or two nights, rather than not having anywhere for visitors to tie up their boats for the night.

"We want it to be a friendly place," Dormitzer said of the harbor, noting the area should be welcoming to those who do not live in town.

The board congratulated Gibbons once again on her appointment, and Chairman Fred Koed said in his opinion, "This is one of the more challenging positions in town." He added the town is lucky to have found such a qualified candidate.

Volunteers sought for Earth Day cleanup

Cohasset residents are looking to have a successful First Annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, in honor of Earth Day, and are looking for volunteers to help. On Saturday, April 8 (rain date April 29) residents will meet in front of Town Hall at 2:30 p.m., and will then celebrate Earth Day and the beauty of Cohasset by cleaning selected streets and sites — Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ball Field, Government Island, etc. The town will provide garbage bags, but volunteers are asked to bring their own thick work gloves. The effort is supported by the Cohasset Board of Health, the Friends of Black Rock Beach, and the Cohasset Girl Scouts. For more information, please call Alison Callahan at (781) 383-1081 or Bill Burnett at (781) 383-3499.

Only one candidate has consistently stood for quality education, and believes it can be done without excessively increasing the tax burden on all our citizens.

On April 8th a vote for Lee is a vote for our schools, a vote for our students, & a vote for our community.

I believe in the Cohasset School System. My daughters attended Cohasset Schools K-12. I am the only candidate that can make that claim.

I have been dedicated to quality education, and accountability in the school budgeting process, for 20 years. The two are not mutually exclusive.

To maintain is not enough, we need to improve.

We can meet the challenge of preserving a balance between community and school needs; and I look forward to the opportunity of leading the way.

If you give me one of your votes on April 8, you can be confident your support will be well placed.

Thank you,

Lee

Selectmen bid Sullivan adieu

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Tuesday's was the last selectmen's meeting for outgoing board member Michael Sullivan. After serving on the board for nine years, and previously serving on the Board of Health, Sullivan is bringing his 15 years of public service to a close — although he plans to stay very active volunteering in the community.

Fellow board members thanked Sullivan for his service throughout the years and wished him luck in the future.

"I'm very sad to see Mike leave," said Selectman Rob Spofford. "It will be a loss to the community. He is an ardent supporter of the schools, and while we might not have always agreed with him all the time, we always knew he had the interest of the town at heart. Congratulations and thank you for your service, speaking as a taxpayer and a resident of the town. You will be missed."

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he still remembers when he met Sullivan years ago, when Sullivan was a member of the health board. Koed said Sullivan has been very active in public service for many years, and without his service and the service of other residents, "The town wouldn't function, so thank you."

Selectman Gary Vanderweil added he too remembers the first time he met Sullivan.

"You were standing holding a sign, 'Sullivan for Board of Health' and I had a sign "Vanderweil for Sewer Commission.' That was a long time ago," he said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said during the time the two have worked together, they have had many different conversations between meetings to discuss the issues going on in town.

"He'd always call me to let me know what was happening, especially when he was chairman," said Dormitzer. While the two didn't always have the same opinions about the issues, "He always had a sense of humor about our differences."

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he will always remember Sullivan fondly, as he was Selectmen Chairman when Griffin was hired.

"That's a very special relationship," said Griffin, as it is the chairman who helps ensure as a new manager, "You don't go off a cliff in your first few weeks and make a mess of the town," he quipped. Griffin recalled how Sullivan was there for his first day on the job, and how he has always been there to advise whenever he is needed.

"I know I'll still be calling you in the future," he added.

"Anytime," said Sullivan.

Wall of honor

CPC funding would make veterans memorial a reality

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset could soon have a new memorial to honor those in town who have served their country. All it will take is voters giving the OK to spending Community Preservation funds on the effort.

The town will vote on the Community Preservation Committee's recommended spending of the funds at Saturday's Town Meeting. With a yes-vote, the Veterans Memorial Committee will get the go-ahead to move full-steam ahead into constructing the new monument.

The CPC would provide half of the funding necessary to construct the project, or $60,000. Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Chairman Glenn Pratt said the new monument would be built in Veteran's Park on Cohasset Harbor, and would be dedicated to those who served in the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Currently, Veteran's Park has two monuments which list the names of all who served from the Civil War up to World War II. Pratt said this new monument would be the perfect way to honor the men and women who served, or are serving in the country's more recent wars.

The landscaping and layout of Veteran's Park would change to feature the new, centrally-located memorial. The monument would be circular, and sunken into the ground.

"It will be recessed so it will not block the view of the harbor," said Pratt, adding from the ground up, it will be roughly 16 inches tall on the outside, and 22 inches tall on the inside. He explained it would have a diameter of 28 feet, and the outside portion, which would be visible from the street, would be made of fieldstone. The monument would also feature a big flag pole in the center of the circle. There is currently a flag pole in Veteran's Park, but the new pole would be slightly larger and more prominent, said Pratt.

There would be a gently sloping walkway that would bring visitors down to the inside of the circle where the actual honor roll wall will be located. The inside walls of the circle would be made of gray granite. Pratt estimated there are roughly 168 names from the Korean War, 243 from Vietnam, 19 from the Gulf War, and 38 from the War on Terror. All of the names on the wall would be easy to read for visitors.

Pratt said Tutela Engineering has completed the engineering for the project. He said engineering was vital for the area, as it used to serve as the site of the old fire station. Pratt said test pits were dug to ensure the land was "all set to go."

Pratt said there will be drainage on the site and noted his group has been in contact with the various garden clubs to ensure the plants that are planned for the site are acceptable. He said veterans groups in town are very happy about the prospect of a monument.

He added with the blessing of Town Meeting, the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee will begin soliciting donations for the other $60,000 necessary to complete the project. He said he hopes construction will be ready to begin after the Memorial Day parade.

The most important aspect of the memorial will be ensuring all names of those who served are included and that the spelling is correct. Pratt said anyone who went into active service from a Cohasset address is eligible to have his or her name included on the monument, and being deployed is not a requirement.

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is collecting names for those who have served in the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror. The most current lists of names can be found on the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com. To add a name to any of the lists, or to correct a name, please contact Chairman Glenn Pratt at info@cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Register to vote

Friday, April 14, will be the last day to register to vote for the upcoming Special Town Election to be held May 6. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Friday, April 14, from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. The polling location for this election will be at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., adjacent to Town Hall.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

For more information, please contact the Town Clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

Road Race and Fran Coffey walk Sunday

The 30th annual Road Race by the Sea and the Second Annual Fran Coffey Memorial Walk will both take place Sunday, April 2. The Road Race will begin at 10 a.m. (Remember Daylight Savings Time) at Sandy Beach, and will be either a 10K or 4.5 mile race, depending on the course chosen. The Road Race begins at 1 p.m. at Cohasset Common and is a 10K (6.2 miles).

The route for the Road Race will be from Cohasset Common down South Main Street, to Elm Street, to Margin Street, down Atlantic Avenue past Sandy Beach, to Jerusalem Road, to Forest Avenue, to North Main Street, back to Highland Avenue and the race will end outside of Town Hall. The Fran Coffey walk will be either the same route as the Road Race beginning at Sandy Beach, or the alternate shorter route will begin at Sandy Beach and stretch down Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road, to North Main Street, to Ripley Road, to Depot Court, to South Main Street, to Elm Street, onto Margin Street, back onto Atlantic Avenue, and the walk will end at Sandy Beach.

Due to all the construction on the roads this year, some roads in town will be closed for a short period of time while the estimated 900-plus Cohasset Road Race by the Sea participants run. Parts of Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue and North Main Street will be closed briefly between 1 and 2 p.m. If residents could please avoid those areas it would greatly help the efforts to have a safe event. Everyone please drive carefully, and watch the Race officials/volunteers in their green safety shirts for directions.

Volunteers are still needed to help direct the walkers at 9:30 a.m. at Sandy Beach and the runners at noon on the common. Look for the race officials in the bright florescent shirts this Sunday. Volunteers may also contact any member of the Cohasset Rotary Club, listed in the front of the Rotary phone book.

Pre-registration is highly recommended. Register to run or walk at www.roadracebythesea.com or check for more information at www.coolrunning.com.

Applications will also be available in Cohasset at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shop, and the South Shore Community Center. Online registration is $15, mail-in registration is $18. On site registration is $20 and will be held at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St., on Saturday, April 1, and Sunday, April 2 from 9 a.m. until noon. For race questions please call (781) 383-9030 or send an e-mail to info@roadracebythesea.com. Questions can also be answered by any member of the Rotary Club, listed in the front of the Rotary phone book.

Holistic healthcare showcase Saturday

There will be a Health and Wellness Practitioners Showcase Saturday, April 1, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, located at 43 Highland Ave., next to Town Hall. Holistic practitioners will be on hand to explain and allow the public to experience a variety of holistic healing modalities.

Admission is $6 per person and children under 12 are free. Admission includes exhibits, free lectures every half hour, spiritual cinema screening, Kirtan/sacred chanting, door prize with admission, raffles, silent auction, Good Health Food Store juicing to reach good health demo and sampling, devotional yoga demonstration, metaphysics of sickness and healing, macrobiotic food demonstration, and Wild Oats holistic store free samples.

Come early to register for $1 per minute: astrology readings, acupuncture/acupressure, breathwork/breath awakening, Reiki sessions, Yuen-method, massage chair, reflexology, chiropractic, angel readings, I Ching readings, crystal healing, sound healing, hypnotherapy, and somatics.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Women with Wings organization as well as the Second Congregational Church.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. I am starting this week's column with a very touching and emotional story and want all of you, if possible, to view the website mentioned a little further on. This has touched me deeply as I know it will for all who read it.

Neurofibromatosis (pronounced neuro-fibroma-tosis) is a genetic disorder that can cause tumors to form on the nerves anywhere in or on the body at any time. NF is associated with disfigurement, learning disabilities, deafness, vision impairment, epilepsy and cancer. At this time, there is no effective treatment or cure for NF. NF affects three times as many people as muscular dystrophy and cystic fibrosis combined, yet many people have never even heard of it. We need to change that!

The mission of Neurofibromatosis, Inc., New England is to find the cure for NF by promoting scientific research, creating awareness, and supporting those who are affected by NF. The NF Marathon Team not only raises funds to support the programs of NF, Inc. New England, but they greatly assist our efforts to make neurofibromatosis a household word.

A wonderful family from here in town are dealing with this horrible disease with their special little guy, Gaebriel. Please take the time to go on the website, www.first-giving.com/runforgaeby and if possible, please make a donation. Gaebriel is 3 1/2 years old and his mom is running in the Boston Marathon to raise money for this cause. Cohasset is here for this wonderful family!

CLEANUP EFFORT

Hey Cohasset, Get ready for Cohasset's first town-wide trash pickup on Saturday, April 8, starting at 2:30 p.m. Help to make Cohasset look clean! The group will plan on hitting selected streets (Jerusalem, Atlantic, Forest, Main, etc) and sites (Black Rock Beack, Beechwood Ball Field, Government Island) and everyone will meet at the Commons (near Town Hall) at 2:30. Based on the turnout, people will be told (very nicely of course) where your hands are needed. This effort is fully backed by the town. It will provide the bags and will transport all of the trash to the dump. Make sure to spread the word to everyone you know. With the combination of friends, families, the Cohasset Girl Scouts who are a big part of this effort, well over 100 people will be working together to make our town look better. Also make sure to bring work gloves and your kids. If rain is here on this day, the rain date will be on Saturday, April 29. Call Bill Burnett at 781-383-3499 or email him at burnett22@comcast.net with any questions you may have.

GIVING THANKS

A big thank you goes out to Dependable Cleaners, owned by Christa Hagearty as well as Ken Grippi.

Leesa Bleicken's 3rd grade Girls Scout troop # 4775 visited the Dependable Cleaners headquarters in Quincy recently. They had a interesting and very educational tour of the plant, learned about all the components of dry cleaning clothes and restoration of damaged garments. They had the opportunity to view historical family photos, learn of the company's many recognition awards & accomplishments throughout the years. The girls were treated to a special snack and a goodie bag consisting of a Dependable Cleaners teddy bear, a mini-travel sewing kit and yummy Tootsie Rrolls candies — Ken's favorite! The sewing kit will come in handy while they are earning their Sewing badge at their next meeting! The Girl Scouts who attended are: Madison Hagearty, Elizabeth Baker, Alexa Bleicken, Christina Dow, Carly Gundersen, Catie Gilman, Cassandra Leiberman, Lily McCarthy, Emma Steele and parent voluteers, Sue Raffa, Bet Baker and Theresa Nickerson.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Volunteers are needed to help the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk, and the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea. The organizers would welcome anyone who would like to help directing the walkers at 9:30 a.m. at Sandy Beach and the runners at noon on the Common. Just look for the Race Officials in the bright florescent shirts this Sunday.

Also be aware of some traffic issues. Due to all the construction on the roads this year some roads in town will be closed for a short period of time while the estimated 900+ Cohasset Road Race by the Sea participants run from 1 p.m. till about 2:30 p.m. Parts of Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue and North Main Street will be closed briefly between 1 and 2 p.m. Please Drive carefully.

DRAFT DAY

Attention to Cohasset Baseball/Softball parents. The CYBSA is holding the player drafts for the upcoming 2006 Baseball and Softball season on Thursday, April 6, at 7 p.m. at Atlantica Restaurant. All interested coaches and assistant coaches are asked to attend. At this meeting, coaches will be assigned teams and players will be placed on teams. In addition, divisional schedules, Little League and local CYBSA rules and other helpful coaching material will be distributed. The CYBSA is always looking for coaches. If you are interested in being a part of the 2006 season, please attend the meeting on April 6.

Town goes for largest override ever

budget of roughly $32 million which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2; approve a budget which would add $725,000 on top of the $32 million; and approve a budget which would add $1.495 million to the $32 million. Appendix A of the Warrant, which begins on page 11, includes a detailed budget with three separate columns, outlining what the town would receive at each funding level.

With the no-override budget of $32,891,761, the school department's share would be $12,714,714. If the $725,000 override passes, the schools would receive an additional $530,000, and the town would receive $195,000, of which $36,321 would be spent on fringe benefits for town and school employees. With the $1.495 million, the schools would receive $1.1 million and the town would receive $395,000, of which $216,321 would be spent on fringe benefits for town and school employees.

Selectmen recommended approval of the no-override budget and the $725,000 override budget unanimously, and the $1.495 override by a vote of 3-2. The advisory committee recommended approval of the no-override budget, and the $725,000 budget unanimously and the $1.495 million budget by a vote of 6-2.

Residents may vote for or against the budgets which include override funding at Town Meeting. Both figures will be taken up separately, which means the votes cast for one do not affect the other. The lower override figure does not need to receive approval in order for the higher override figure to receive approval. Both must receive majority votes in order to pass, and then be placed on the special election ballot for a second vote. Only selectmen can place an override question on the ballot.

The Special Election, which will ask voters to weigh in on the override, will be held May 6. Voters will have the opportunity to vote each question up or down. Override questions need a majority to pass. It is possible for both overrides to receive majority of "yes" votes, which would mean both would pass. If that should happen, the override with the highest dollar amount always prevails.

Town Manager Bill Griffin will explain voting procedures during Saturday's Town Meeting to ensure everyone has a clear understanding of how the voting process works.

Cohasset's operating budget override history

Cohasset has passed 28 overrides in the past 18 years. Of those overrides, nine have been operating budget overrides, which is what Cohasset will be voting on this year. Historically, Cohasset has passed overrides averaging in the $350,000 range.

Zoning changes likely to spark discussion

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There are six different zoning articles on this year's Town Meeting Warrant. While traditionally zoning might thin out the crowd, this year the issues have been thoroughly vetted and are better understood, and one issue in particular some are speculating could be one of the most heavily debated topics of the day.

Article 13 would create an inclusionary zoning bylaw for the town. In any residential development of five or more multi-family or apartment units, proposed on or after July 1, the bylaw would require a minimum of one unit or 10 percent of the total number of dwelling units (whichever is greater) be eligible for qualification as affordable "Local Initiative Units." The bylaw would help the town increase its affordable housing stock, as it is trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state.

Article 14 would reduce the number of parking spaces required in the highway, technology, and light industry business districts — essentially Route 3A. With a reduction in parking space requirements from one space per 100 square feet of net floor area to one space per 200 square feet of net floor area, businesses would be encouraged to expand and make the most out of their property. Taxes are charged by the square foot, which means bigger buildings provide more tax revenue for the town. In addition, the requirement of having a 20-foot landscaped green strip in front of a building would be increased to 35 feet.

Article 15 would put one of the town's newest zoning bylaws to rest and sunset the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw. The town adopted the overlay bylaw at the November 2002 Special Town Meeting, as a way to get out from under the threat of 40B projects. Under 40B, developers can come into a town and build senior housing complexes which provide affordable housing options, but skirt around local zoning regulations. The state ultimately has the final say on what is built with 40B projects.

Developers who build projects under the SMROD bylaw are allowed to build more densely than the town's zoning regulations allow (10 units per acre). In return, 25 percent of the project's units must be deemed affordable by state standards. Affordable units must remain affordable for a minimum of 30 years. The Cook Estate project would be the last and final project built under the SMROD bylaw.

The Large Home Site Plan Review bylaw, which is listed as Article 16, will likely be indefinitely postponed at Town Meeting. The Planning Board did not recommend it by a vote of 4-1, and the Board of Selectmen unanimously recommended indefinite postponement.

Article 17 will have voters deciding whether or not to form a Transit Oriented Development overlay district. TODs allow for changes in local zoning regulations in those areas within a specific distance from public transportation. They encourage mixed-use buildings that provide services for commuters at ground level and some apartments on the upper levels.

Article 18 is strictly a housekeeping article that would update wording in the town's zoning bylaws.

Town Meeting will begin promptly at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 1. The meeting will be held in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. There will be extra Warrants, or Town Meeting agendas available.

Stealing signs part of campaign game

turn up around town.

"I've heard of this kind of stuff happening before," he said, adding when he was on the Boston Police Department, signs would disappear during campaigns all the time. He said while it is unfortunate, it certainly isn't shocking at election season.

Nichols Road resident Polly Logan had a Jenkins sign on her front lawn, and it was stolen in Saturday night's spree. "I had one for Fusco and one for Hill, and just the sign for Lee was stolen," she said. Logan said she always has signs on her front lawn during campaigns, because people always tell her they can easily see them when they drive by. "I've never had a sign stolen, and I usually have lots of signs," she said.

Logan said Jenkins replaced her sign, but it was one from last year's election because Jenkins had to replace so many of this year's version. The signs from this year were red white and blue, while last year's signs were just red and white. Residents will now see a mix of both in town.

Jerusalem Road resident Bill Chisolm said he had a Jenkins sign stolen from his yard as well. He said he only had a sign for Jenkins on his property. Chisolm said he lives in the area of Jerusalem Road near Straits Pond and said in the past, "We've had a little bit of mischief with mailboxes and smashing pumpkins. It usually happens on a weekend night, and this happened on a Saturday."

Chisolm said he thinks he found his sign because there was one sticking out of a stone wall near the Greek church. "It was sticking out of the masonry sideways, and I thought, 'That's got to be ours.' It was at least stolen because no one's going to put a sign in sideways like that," he said. Chisolm said he pulled the sign out of the wall and brought it back to his house. "We rescued it and now we've got it closer to the house."

Town to vote on tax breaks for elderly

a number of reasons. The elderly, veterans, the legally blind, or those with extreme hardships, can all be exempt from a portion of their taxes. Article 8 would deal only with those senior citizens who are 70 years old or older, who meet the various qualifications.

There are roughly 16 households which currently take advantage of the 70-plus tax exemption. Right now, those who qualify may have up to $1,000 taken off their tax bills. Passing Article 8 would change that maximum amount to $2,000.

OPINION

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SELECTMAN

For Selectman candidates: If the sewer capacity issue could be resolved, would you be in favor of more downtown housing above the local shops or could this hurt the village character?

SELECTMAN/ Ted Carr

Cohasset's Village Green, downtown Main Street, and Cohasset Harbor have served as our civic, commercial, and industrial centers – our town's brain, heart, and soul. If we want to direct the future of our town in keeping with the character of our community, we need to remember the traditional purpose of these separate areas. For this reason, I would support more downtown housing above the village shops if such an approach invigorated our commercial center.

Historically, downtown areas were the only providers of goods and services to their communities, serving as the centers of commercial activity. Urban sprawl and strip malls, however, challenged this function such that the National Trust for Historic Preservation established the National Trust Main Street Center, to help municipalities restore their commercial centers. In order to maintain our village character, I encourage us to remember its original function.

Our community is fortunate that we still have our picturesque village center. We have boutique stores, outstanding restaurants, Friendly neighborhood banks, and convenience stores that remain convenient in the fiercest of snowstorms. We also have about half a dozen apartments and offices in the upper-floors of these retail establishments. Such apartments are a traditional part of downtown commercial areas, often providing additional rent for property owners to keep their buildings in good condition and generating a core group of retail purchasers. In their original form, they served to support commercial activity. I believe any future development above the town shops should be made for the same purpose.

Living in the first residential house outside the town at 88 South Main St., I appreciate the convenience and charm of the downtown stores, as do many others. In keeping with its historic function, however, any investment in our downtown area should be made to promote existing and potential commercial activity.

SELECTMAN/ Roger Hill

As a selectman, I will work to support all boards involved in the town's effort to revitalize downtown, in keeping with the character of Cohasset Village.

I supported the decision of the planning board to postpone zoning amendments for the Village. Downtown rezoning required far more public input, professional planning and coordination with other town boards.

As I work on Village revitalization as a selectman, I will always keep several key planning points in mind:

- Solving sewer capacity issues requires close coordination with the sewer commission, and fairness for current residents, like those in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue expansion district. While estimates for potential new Village residential units reach as high as 60, there are only some 20 remaining connections in the entire central sewer district.
- While planners agree that housing unit development is critical for revitalization of any Village district, Cohasset is today experiencing a surge in multi-family housing. Although the Cedarmere and Cook 55-plus projects are sanctioned by the Town's SMORD bylaw, the Avalon project may unfortunately be built as well. We must avoid having too many units coming on stream in a short time—a situation that would further stress our school class sizes with new students.
- Parking spaces are in short supply today, especially during peak function events. As a new selectman, I will help craft a comprehensive solution to parking expansion, and push the MBTA to finally replace the spaces removed by the Greenbush project.
- Any rezoning of the Village must require both façade preservation, and protection of abutting residential areas, so we maintain the look and feel of Cohasset Village. We must maintain the character of the Village if we are to allow any well planned renovation and targeted expansion.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK - SCHOOL COMMITTEE

For School Committee candidates: Are the pay and benefits for Cohasset teachers falling behind area towns making Cohasset less able to attract and retain talented teachers?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Rick Flynn

By the time this answer to the "Question of the Week" is published my hope and expectation is that the new contract between the Cohasset School Committee and the Cohasset Teachers Association will have been ratified by the CTA membership and affirmatively voted upon by the School Committee.

Without going into detail, but speaking from first hand experience, the contract negotiation was a long process where both sides operated in good faith, but had specific agenda items that both sides felt strongly about. It took a long time to try to resolve specific issues, while operating in the context of achieving a fair contract for both sides.

Throughout the talks, the School Committee felt it was very important to keep the amount of negative rhetoric to a minimum with the thought in mind all along that we have a valued workforce we want be able to work closely with when an agreement was reached.

I do think that when we looked at Cohasset relative to the comparison communities of Duxbury, Norwell, Hingham and Scituate we were closer to the bottom or middle rather than the upper levels. I would acknowledge, however, that all contracts are not structured exactly the same.

It feels good that we are, hopefully, moving forward with a contract that labor and management, as well as the community can feel good about. I received input and questions from many members of the town in support of the teachers. To be sure, there was never any attempt to discount what the teachers were doing or how we felt about them.

I feel that we are at a point where Cohasset can and will be able to attract and retain talented teachers and that there is a bright future ahead.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Steve Fusco

Based on the available Benchmark data it appears that teacher salaries and benefits in Cohasset are in line with other communities. In addition, Cohasset has many non-wage job characteristics that are equally important. Just as in business, these non-wage job characteristics play a vital role in a school's ability to attract high quality teachers. This explains why in many cases private school teachers are paid less than their public school counterparts but yet have exceptional credentials. In addition to salary, most teachers consider the following in their employment decision-making:

- attributes of students – some teachers prefer to teach in a high achieving environment
- class size – teachers prefer manageable classes
- school culture – a positive and creative environment is important
- facilities – most everyone prefers clean well appointed facilities
- leadership – I believe this translates to every profession
- safety – everyone wants to feel safe in and around the schools

Another way to attract talented teachers is by creating a pay for performance benefit. It must be frustrating for a talented teacher achieving outstanding results to make the same or less than an equally tenured teacher going through the motions everyday. We need to also consider how well we manage our teacher network. We should be networking with promising students in teaching colleges as well as highly skilled teachers in other communities.

Most teachers I have spoken with have a passion for their vocation. They realize they aren't going to get rich teaching, yet, understandably, they would like to be able to afford living in or near the community where they work and want to be treated fairly. Fortunately, the Cohasset schools are able to offer both competitive salaries and a positive working environment. Therefore, we should be able to attract and retain the best and the brightest.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Lee Jenkins.

Last week's Mariner details that the average Cohasset teacher's salary is $55,083, higher than the average of $54,899 in our peer towns, according to the current Benchmark Study. It's reasonable to assume that if our teachers ratify their new contract the premium for Cohasset teachers will increase

Page 221 of the Benchmark Study indicates classroom teachers' salaries and benefits are 57 percent of Cohasset's education expense compared to 56 percent of the peer group. The surrounding towns of Norwell and Hingham, have percentages of 55 percent and 54 percent respectively. Additionally, Hingham requires a teacher obtain a Ph.D. to qualify for the highest salary column, while Cohasset and Norwell don't.

In comparing some benefits, Cohasset has a longevity policy that adds $1,000/yr to the teachers' salary beginning in their 15th year. Hingham's longevity policy is only $500/yr at that level, and Norwell has no longevity benefit. Cohasset also has a $3,000 early retirement incentive which the other two towns don't.

Health Insurance is treated differently in the towns. In Hingham and Norwell the employees are responsible for 50 percent of the costs. In Cohasset the single payers contribute 11 percent; family plans contribute 31 percent of the premium adding $1,890 to $2,460 in income per year over Hingham and Norwell.

The post-separation benefit is the same in all three towns; 90 percent of health benefits for life after retirement paid for by the taxpayers unless the retiree works in another venue to qualify for Medicare.

Cohasset appears, overall, to have slightly higher remuneration for coaching and extra duty salaries.

Based on this comparison, it doesn't appear that pay and benefits for Cohasset teachers are "falling behind area towns." We appear to be highly competitive.

Instead, to attract and retain talented teachers, I believe we need to foster a "culture of learning" and apply my program of "Progress Through Priorities."

NEXT WEEK: Candidate profiles

This was the last week for Question of the Week and the Mariner thanks the candidates for participating. Stay tuned to next week's Mariner for profiles of the Selectman and School Committee candidates.

The Mariner will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on Saturday, April 8 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 7 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. Voting absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open
- Physical disability
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 8 to be counted.

Bridge is taking shape

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

On Thursday, March 23, a very large crane lifted the decking in place on the Rocky Lane Bridge. Now, it is very easy to see what the bridge will really look like. We have had several residents ask whether the bridge will be able to handle the weight of all the trucks that may need to pass over it. Remember, the local contractor, Rosano Davis, has its home base on Rocky Lane and will need to use the bridge once the old Rocky Lane is closed at the rail tracks. The MBTA tells us that the Rocky Lane Bridge has been designed to meet the most stringent Massachusetts Highway Standards. To put it another way, if a vehicle can travel on any state highway it will be able to safely use the Rocky Lane Bridge.

We mentioned last week that the work at the Pleasant Street crossing had come to a halt waiting for the asphalt plants to open. As we understand it, since asphalt must be delivered hot, in the winter the energy costs are too high to operate the plants. Also, the asphalt cools off too much by the time it is delivered. So, the plants just close for the winter. We have recently obtained information that CBB is going to be able to get asphalt very shortly, so there is a good chance that Pleasant St. will start construction again. Also, Sohier Street is almost at a point where it will be needing asphalt, so that crossing will be able to continue to move forward with its construction. Suffice it to say, the asphalt is coming just in the nick of time.

You may ask why they need asphalt at rail crossings. This is especially true if you look carefully at the Pleasant St. construction and notice that the railroad bed is about two feet below the surrounding ground. Clearly, CBB is not going to put two feet of asphalt in that hole! Here's what they are going to do. (And, this is typical of all the Greenbush rail crossings.) A 5 inch thick layer of asphalt is laid in the crossing across its full width and length. Then, on top of the asphalt a layer of very coarse gravel, called ballast, is laid 12 inches thick. Wooden rail road ties are laid on top of the ballast. (It is interesting to note that everywhere, except for the crossings, concrete ties are being used. (Wood is only used at the crossings.) Now, tie plates which are special steel plates that sit between the ties and the rails are laid in place. The rails are placed on the tie plates and the rails, tie plates and the ties are fastened together with very large nails called railroad spikes. See the illustrations.

The Rocky Lane Bridge all decked out.

The very last components to be installed are the rubber pads that fill in the space before, between and after the tracks in the roadway. They are identified as the "field pad" and the "gauge pad" in this illustration.

These pads make the ride over the crossings smooth. Perhaps some of you may remember the bone-jarring crossings before rubber crossing pads came into use. Next time you drive over the Beechwood crossing notice how smoothly your vehicle passes over the tracks. These pads do make a real difference.

Road race traffic update –

As you know, the big race will be held on Sunday, April 2nd at 1:00 PM. That means that runners and their fans will start gathering in the Village just after noon. Given the MBTA construction and road closures, traffic management is going to be a significant challenge. Runners and onlookers are encouraged to carpool and arrive a little earlier than usual as parking will be at a premium and most traffic will be diverted from the Village between 1:00 and 3:00 PM. Please do support the road race as you have in the past. We just want you to be aware that traffic and parking will be a little more challenging this year.

When play meant having fun

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth we used to play interminable baseball games on a field between Franny Nordahl's and Ralph Young's houses on Cedarcliff Road in East Braintree.

It wasn't much of a field. The bases were large flat stones and if we couldn't find one of those it was somebody's sweatshirt that wasn't being worn at the time. Fielding a ground ball was an adventure since there wasn't a groundskeeper to keep the field in tip top shape.

There was no such thing as balls and strikes since there was no such thing as an umpire. Close plays at first base were called by consensus after much loud argument. Scores were kept but even those were arguable after they reached double figures.

I don't know who owned the field but on a warm summer morning, afternoon or evening it was ours for purposes of baseball to do with what we liked with no one but our peers to tell us that we did good or that we stunk out the joint.

Those old days on the field on Cedarcliff Road (which is now a housing development called Cape Cod Lane, incidentally) came to mind the other day when I came across a book called "Will You Still Love Me If I Don't Win?" by Christopher Andersonn.

It's Andersonn's thesis that parents are over organizing youth sports (like little League baseball and Pop Warner football) so badly and hitting on one sport (like hockey from September through May with schools in July and August) so much that their kids lose interest.

"Starting out, most kids just want to play. It's the parents who keep score," says Andersonn. "They can kill the love a kid has for a sport. Once that's gone, it's very hard to recapture it."

Even before a youngster is old enough to get into youth sports, adults are taking the fun out of what used to be playground fun for their offspring, all in the interest of safety — and, not incidentally, staying out of court.

Those 16-foot slides, where a generation of children learned to overcome their fear of heights, are vanishing from playgrounds, the National Program for Playground Safety reports. Only 13 per cent of playgrounds have seesaws, 13 per cent merry-go-rounds.

"Everybody is afraid of being litigated against," Scott Burton, president of Safety Play Inc., of St. Petersburg, Fla., told USA Today. "They just tear it out and don't replace it."

Swings are out, too, under standards for playground safety adopted 10-or-so years ago, unless the surface of the ground around them is made of something called "impact attenuating" rubber, or soft ground for Johnny or Susie to fall on.

The recommended amount of surfacing under a 16-foot swing would be 32 feet at a cost of $4,000. Prop 2½, anyone?

"We have dumbed down and sanitized our playgrounds to a point where they don't hold (kids') interest as long," said Steve King, founder of Landscape Structures, Inc.

Where have we heard that before?

Our economic well being

COMMENTARY

PETER BROWN

Second of two parts

In last week's Mariner, the concept of Cohasset's economic well being was introduced in a commentary on raising new commercial tax revenues to help offset ever-rising town costs. In it, a yes-vote was recommended for zoning Article 17, Transit Oriented Development (TOD), at the April 1 Town Meeting as a way to increase commercial tax revenues on Route 3A and thereby help reduce the tax burden on our homes. We believe it made both good common sense and sound economic sense.

This week, we make a similar case for voting yes for zoning Article 14, off-street parking. This article won unanimous support from the board of selectmen and the advisory committee and a majority of the planning board. It too was reviewed extensively by the zoning advisory committee, supported by the town planner and scrutinized by town counsel.

What will this article do and why is it important to the future of Cohasset?

First, it will create the basis for new commercial tax revenues for existing and undeveloped land in the three highway zoning districts along Route 3A by decreasing the number of parking spaces required for most commercial buildings. (However, it leaves the parking requirement for restaurants as currently written).

Second, it increases the required minimum greenbelt setback along the highway from 20 feet to 35 feet.

Third, the new tax revenues generated over time will provide much needed tax relief for the increased costs to run the town and schools.

Let's discuss the reduction in parking spaces first. The current zoning bylaw requires developers of commercial or industrial buildings along Route 3A to provide for 10 parking spaces for every 1,000 square feet of building space constructed. Although the planning board has the discretion to reduce the paved area by up to one-third, it still requires developers to demonstrate that they will always have sufficient land available to accommodate the entire 10-space-per-1,000-square-foot requirement in the future.

This has the effect of permanently removing a significant amount of land from ever being developed—land which could otherwise generate commercial tax revenues all along Route 3A. The EDC believes that we should no longer sacrifice this tax revenue as key commercial parcels are withheld from well planned controlled development.

Will we see a host of unintended consequences? The EDC believes this change will not cause immediate and irrational development given the time it takes market forces, financing, design and the permitting and construction process to unfold. Rather, we envision a steady response over the many years.

How did the EDC arrive at its recommendation of five spaces per 1,000 square feet of building area? We surveyed the zoning bylaws of many towns on the South Shore including Hingham, Norwell and Scituate and found their requirements generally ranged from 3.5 spaces to five spaces per 1,000 square feet of building area. Also, my own experience in commercial real estate over the last 30 years throughout the suburban Boston area suggested that 10 spaces are excessive. In practice, the local and national retailers require five spaces and office users between 3.5 to five spaces per 1,000 square feet of building area constructed.

What effect will this parking space reduction have for Cohasset? It will accomplish three goals simultaneously:

First, it allows property owners to build slightly larger buildings in the Route 3A highway districts, optimizing the commercial tax revenues collectible.

Second, it will reduce the pavement required and thereby increase the amount of green area, thereby facilitating a better environmental condition and treatment of storm water runoff.

Third, it puts Cohasset on a level playing field with neighboring South Shore towns by improving our competitive advantage for new growth and new business.

What else will the proposed article accomplish? Since it provides for greater development density, we believed it is important to balance this growth incentive by increasing the minimum green space along Route 3A to give the planning board the ability to impose a better greenbelt setback standard. The current greenbelt setback space requirement is only 20 feet. This is equivalent to the greenbelt set back area in front of the new King Jewelers building. The new requirement is 35 feet, nearly doubling the minimum.

In conclusion, the EDC is recommending a yes-vote for Articles 14 and 17. These changes to our zoning bylaw create modest incentives for prudent growth in our commercial tax base for years to come. They will improve the town's dealings with the Commonwealth. They promote sound zoning and tax policy for our economic well being. They make common sense.
